SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

To maintain the nation's essential motor transportation system, the American rubber tire industry will be called upon to make 30 million synthetic passenger car tires in 1944. The synthetic rubber program is being geared to permit such an output without hindering the military needs for rubber.

More than 65 per cent of the war materials reaching factories in Michigan travel on rubber-tired trucks, and 67 per cent of the finished products move out by truck. Proof that our national economy is closely bound with rubber.

THE SACREDNESS OF HUMAN LIFE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:13; Matthew 5:21-26, 38-45.

GOLDEN TEXT—Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer.—I John 3:15.

Human life is sacred—and there is a very important reason why that is true. It is not because of any law of man, but finds its foundation in the fact that God created man in His own likeness and image. Because that is true, no man has any right to take the life of another for any cause except at the direct command of God. Only by the orderly process of law for the protection of society and in accordance with the Word of God may there be any such action by man toward man.

Both of these truths are declared in Scripture in God's covenant with Noah (Gen. 9:5, 6), which was made possibly a thousand years before the Ten Commandments were given to Moses.

One cannot deny that human life is held rather cheaply in many places today. War helps to create that attitude on the part of nations which makes them count boys and girls, yes, mere babies, as "war material."

But not only in war is life carelessly destroyed. We decry the "slaughter of innocents" on the highway, unnecessary death in industry, yes, even in the home.

I. The Prohibition of Murder (Exod. 20:13).

The word "kill" in this commandment is one which means a violent and unauthorized taking of life, and is therefore more properly translated "murder."

Not all killing is murder. A man may kill another entirely accidentally, or he may be the duly constituted legal officer carrying out the law of the land in taking the life of one who has forfeited his right to live because he has slain another.

There is also the right of self-defense, be it individual or collective as in war. But these are the only exceptions; let us not attempt to justify any other.

Murder is more prevalent than most of us suppose. Some years ago we were told that there was a murder every forty minutes in our land. With the general increase of crime, and of drunkenness (which so often incites murder), the current figures would probably show an increase.

Do not forget the deaths, the destruction of life, by avoidable automobile accidents. Some of these were really murder because the one responsible drove with defective brakes, dangerous tires, or while he was intoxicated. Add to these the deaths in industry caused by failure to provide proper safeguards or healthy working conditions, and by the exploitation of child labor, and we say that we should cry aloud, "Thou shalt do no murder."

II. The Provocation to Murder (Matt. 5:21,22).

Murder finds its provoking cause in the heart of man. Our Lord was concerned about correcting the desires rather than to apprehend the offender after the act had been committed. It is the better way, and the more effective one.

In this matter of murder, Jesus cut right through the outward aspects of the matter and pointed out that an angry hatred in the heart is the root of all murder. If we hate, we have murder in our hearts. Circumstances may hinder its fulfillment, but the danger is always there until we remove the cause.

Just being angry—calling our brother "raca" (the modern equivalent of which is "nobody there"), and calling him "thou fool," which classifies him as "morally worthless"—these are the three dreadful downward steps to murder. And they begin in anger.

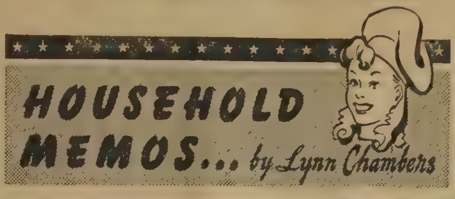
May God help those of us who have strong feelings that we may not yield them to the devil in such anger against our brother!

III. The Prevention of Murder (Matt. 5:23-26, 38-45).

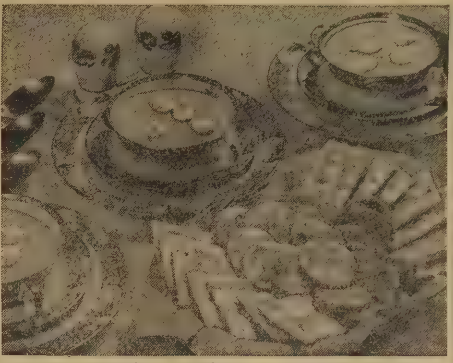
Prevention with God means more than putting up a barrier to keep us from killing. He deals with the heart, and thus puts the whole life right. It is not even a question of how we may feel against our brother. If he has aught against us we are to do all we can to win him. He may be unreasonable, grasping, and unfair. However, the spirit that will win him is not that of retaliation or sullen submission to the inevitable, but rather a free and willing going even beyond what is required.

It is clear from other scriptures that our Lord does not mean that wicked and unscrupulous men are to be permitted to defraud and destroy God's people. At the same time, we must be careful not to explain away the heart of our Lord's interpretation of this great commandment.

We who believe in Christ are to be in deed as well as word the sons of our heavenly Father (v. 45), loving not only those who are kind to us, but even our enemies

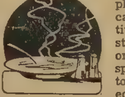


HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers



Crackers and Chowder Harmonize!
(See Recipes Below)

Soup Satisfies!



There's not one dish in any cooking repertory that can even come close to fill the place of soup. It can be the appetite-tickler to start the meal, or a light, inspired concoction to do for luncheon, or a steaming hot, sturdy soup to be the meat, the vegetable and the main dish for a cool night's dinner while the wind blows hard outside.

If any crisis arises as far as your own point-ration allowance, then start exploring the fascinating possibilities of a few meaty bones, celery leaves, pungent onion, and a spray of parsley, chives, marjoram or chevril. Fat, cozy tureens of soup will ward off any hunger now as they have always done when food supplies are slender.

There's no doubt that the tureen will again become a part of your kitchen equipment—at least for the duration. You can make delicious soup out of almost anything—and soup can make the meal if you serve it with plenty of unrationed crackers. There are literally all kinds of these to go with any soup you care to name.

Here's a fish chowder that is rich, savory and thoroughly satisfying. Serve it with common or pilot crackers to make the meal. Or, if you prefer, oyster crackers, the round tasty type, saltines or plain soda crackers—any one will be a natural accompaniment:

Fish Chowder.
(Serves 8)

- 3 pounds haddock or cod
- 3 potatoes, sliced
- 3 medium-sized onions, chopped
- 3 slices salt pork, diced
- 8 crackers
- 1 quart milk
- 1 pint cream
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
- Salt and pepper

Cook fish in boiling water until done. Remove fish from water and cook potatoes and onions in fish water until soft. Fry salt pork until crisp. Skin and bone fish and add with pork scraps, to chowder. Soak split crackers in milk. Heat milk and cream with crackers, and add to chowder. Add butter or margarine, salt and pepper.

Here is another savory soup which will make a perfect main dish for the meal:

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: Now that butter has gone up in point value, you may have to learn to use other spreads such as margarine. Be sure to select a margarine that gives you a definite guarantee of the amount of vitamin with which it is enriched. To color the margarine, let it soften until smooth and creamy, add vegetable coloring and blend together. Let harden before using, if you want to cut it in squares.

Butter can also be stretched with a number of commercial or other stretchers. Select a stretcher that gives good consistency and does not change flavor.

If you're doing without a great deal of butter, here's how: Use margarines or shortenings for all cooking or baking. Save bacon and other drippings to use for frying. Occasionally, use jams, jelly and honey for spreads. Sandwiches can be spread with mayonnaise if the butter supply is low.

Scotch Broth.
(Serves 16)

- ⅔ cup dried barley
- ⅔ cup green, split peas
- ½ pound lamb shank
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 3 quarts water
- 2 leeks or onions, chopped
- 2 carrots, diced small
- 1 turnip, diced small
- 1 pound cabbage, sliced
- 4 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
- 1 carrot, grated

Soak peas and barley overnight, in separate bowls. Place lamb flank in a large saucepan; add salt and cold water to cover. Bring to a boil and simmer 1 hour. Add leeks, carrots, turnip, cabbage, peas and barley. Simmer 1 hour. Add parsley and grated carrot. Stir well and serve.

Potatoes and onion are go-togethers in soup. Carry the harmony even further and serve with the soup, the round, toasty type of cracker:

Cream of Potato and Onion Soup.
(Serves 6)

- 4 onions
- 4 medium-sized potatoes
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 3 cups scalded milk
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley
- Salt and pepper

Boil onions and potatoes together until tender. Drain, saving 1 cup of the water. Rub the vegetables through a coarse strainer. Melt the butter or margarine, add flour and blend until smooth. Add milk and potato-onion water, and combine with onion and potato pulp. Season with chopped parsley, salt and pepper. Beat with egg beater and serve at once.

Did you know that a cheese type of cracker is best with the tomato soups? It brings out the flavor of the soup better than any other kind of accompaniment:

Tomato Bisque.
(Serves 6)

- 4 cups milk
- ¾ cup stale bread crumbs
- 2½ cups canned tomatoes
- 1 small onion
- 6 cloves
- ½ teaspoon soda
- 2 teaspoons sugar
- 4 tablespoons butter or margarine

Pour the scalded milk over the bread crumbs and rub through a sieve. Stew the tomatoes with the seasonings and strain. To the tomatoes, in which the soda has been dissolved, add the reheated milk mixture, and last the sugar and butter mixture. Serve at once.

A delicious bean soup has been many a cook's road to fame. It's not difficult at all if you make it this way:

Black Bean Soup.
(Serves 12)

- 1 pound black beans
- 2 cloves
- 2 sprigs thyme or 1 bayleaf
- 3 quarts water
- 1 onion, chopped
- 1 ham bone or ⅛ pound salt pork or
- 4 tablespoons butter or margarine
- Dash of salt

Soak beans overnight in cold water. Rinse and drain beans well. Place in kettle with rest of ingredients. Bring to a boil and let simmer 4 hours. Add more water from time to time, if necessary. Put through sieve and serve with slice of lemon and sliced hard-cooked egg.

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

Tuesday, August 17, 1943.

Hello Staff:

Will take time out here to express my appreciation for you sending me the News. I can think of no better way to keep in contact with all the home town folks and events than through your paper.

This leaves me feeling fine and full of ambition, after being overseas since January 10th, 1942. I am the assistant Mess Sergeant here and have been promoted to the rank of Staff Sergeant. Would like to tell each and every one of you some of my experiences, scenery, climatic conditions, etc., but not possible. Am the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Smith of Route 1.

I see where lots of the people back there are complaining about their ration books and cards. They should be in our shoes a while and then I think they would change their attitude. They should be willing to cooperate to the fullest extent. After all this is just as much their war as it is ours. I see the county has been coming out on top with their defense drives, and hope they continue, for every little bit helps.

If any of you have any friends or relatives here at APO 948, I would be more than glad to look them up. I want to thank each and every one of the staff for their cooperation in bringing the boys overseas the News.

Yours truly,

WILLIE SMITH.

WHAT'S DOING AT ISABELLA HI

All of the vivacity and spookiness which are traditional harbingers of Hallowe'en night will be present in the school auditorium Friday night, when the Isabella P.-T. A. sponsors a Hallowe'en party. An ideal combination of teachers, students and parents are laying the plans for the affair, which holds promises of being one of the most delightful occasions of the year.

Things will get under way with a musical program, composed of student talent. After this there will be games, stunts and what have you. Among the many booths will be the House of Horrors, Green Goose, Fish Pond and fortune telling. Everyone is invited to attend the party. There will be a general admission charge of 10c.

The first chapel program for the year was in charge of the F.F.A. and was given last week. Musical selections were given by Josie Mae Abbot, Jettie Owen, Ernest McCary and Hershell Wright. Afterward, a quiz program was staged with program chairman Hansel Grooms in charge. Representatives of the F.F.A. and the F.H.A. were selected from the audience. For the F.H.A. there were: Kathryn Maddox, Betty Ann Jones, Ruth Carter, and Faye Bonds. For the F.F.A. there were: Norman Vinson, James Owen, Odis Ousley and C. F. Gandy. The object of the quiz was "to see which was the smartest." The boys won the quiz by a score of 21 to 17.

Isabella was honored last week by visits by two distinguished gentlemen. One was Dr. Mein, for 29 years a Missionary in Brazil. We understand that he is head of one of our high schools over there. Dr. Mein gave us a very interesting lecture on Brazil, presented only in the way which one who knows her could present it. Another visitor was Dr. Matthews, state director of music for the department of education. Dr. Matthews very ably led us in some group singing.

Wastebasket script—Our congratulations to Pauline Williams of Isabella, who will be a nominee for Alabama State F.H.A. Parlimentarian when the state convention meets in the near future. . .We've seen plenty of wet faces since the water got low in the school well. It seems that the pump tries to mix too much air with the water. . .Friday afternoon it was the same old story — Maplesville 20, Isabella 0.

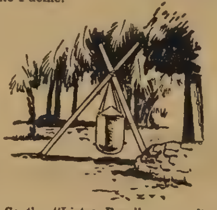
What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Water Camel

Thirst is one enemy of armies and navies that may be frustrated by a generous supply of water. Typhus, another dreaded plague is another enemy that must be subdued in Africa, in the jungle islands of the Pacific.



So the "Lister Bag," more often called the "water camel," or just "camel," is used. The "Lister Bag" is a khaki colored canvas bag having a capacity of about 30 gallons.

It will require many War Bonds to provide enough "camels" for our fighting forces at home and abroad. Yours too! "Back the attack with War Bonds." U. S. Treasury Department

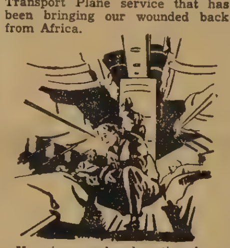
Sick Bay

In this war our wounded fighting men have a greater chance for recovery than in any previous conflict because of the medical aids and services that have been developed by the War and Navy Departments.

One of these aids is the Hospital Transport Plane service that has been bringing our wounded back from Africa.



Your increased and continued purchase of War Bonds is required to help the Treasury Department finance this hospital transport service. "Back the attack with War Bonds." U. S. Treasury Department

"Magnificent Response" Given Alabama War Chest Appeal

Appeal Leaders Hopeful State Quota Will Be Raised In Record Time

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Intent on winding up the Alabama War Chest appeal in record time, county chairmen in every section of the state this week reported rapid progress in the campaign which began last Tuesday and a magnificent response from citizens to the appeal for seventeen war service agencies.

War Chest Appeal Chairmen A. Key Foster and J. Frank Rushton, Jr., received reports this week from a number of counties advising that quotas would be reached by Saturday. Every county chairman without one exception, voiced the confident conviction that their county quotas would be raised. While no time limit has been set for the campaign, appeal leaders were hopeful that every county would be over the top in three weeks' time.

New inspiration for the campaign came this week in letters to War Chest leaders from commanding officers at every Army post in Alabama advising that the military personnel would back the drive. Among the Army posts participating in the War Chest appeal are: Fort McClellan, Anniston; Camp Rucker, Ozark; Craig Field, Selma; Camp Sibert, Gadsden; Napier Field, Dothan; Army Air Base, Birmingham; Army Air Field, Courtland; Huntsville Arsenal, Huntsville; Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville; Brookley Field, Mobile; Gunter Field, Montgomery; Maxwell Field, Montgomery, and Alabama Ordnance Works, Sylacauga.

According to the National War Fund, upward of 60,000,000 persons will receive some degree of aid from contributions made by citizens of Alabama and other states to the $125,000,000 war fund. At least 13,200,000 persons will receive personal services on the military front from National War Fund member agencies such as USO, United Seamen's Service, and War Prisoners Aid, which have been allocated more than half the total fund.

How great are the global needs, which the National War Fund will meet, was indicated this week in a communication to the Alabama War Chest from National War Fund headquarters, which stated that:

More than 5,000,000 men and women of our fighting forces look to the USO each month for off-duty recreation, comforts and spiritual welfare.

Nearly 1,000 professional entertainers give nightly performances under auspices of the USO Camp Shows, Inc., for our service men at home and abroad to keep them laughing.

Thousands of merchant seamen who bring the convoys through find needed rest and relaxation in twenty-five homes and centers operated by the United Seamens' Service in cooperation with the War Shipping Administration in ports in two hemispheres of the world.

More than 6,000,000 men are in the "barbed wire legion," prisoners of war, who need more than the established prison regime if their spirit is to be maintaned for peacetime usefulness.

Scattered all over the world are 30,000,000 refugees from Axis terrors, needing friendly help in their efforts to re-establish themselves.

Between 5,000,000 and 7,000,000 Chinese people are facing starvation.

Of the Greek children born since 1940, less than 1 in 20 is alive today due to starvation conditions.

Approximately 40,000,000 Russians have had to evacuate their homes.

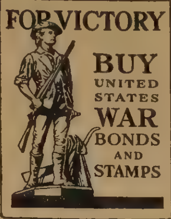
More than 2,000 child victims of the war have been evacuated to this country for care and protection, and hundreds of others await the miracle of rescue.

One out of every five homes in Britain have been ruined or damaged by air raids and the Axis now says that ours is ruthless bombing.

In China 2,000,000 children have been orphaned and left homeless.

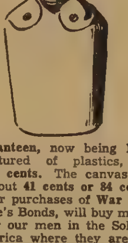
Thousands of women war victims, internees, evacuees and refugees need assistance.

These and other needs on the Military front, the United Nations front and the home front are served by the seventeen agencies participating in the National War Fund for which the Alabama War Chest appeal is now being made.



What You Buy With WAR BONDS

One of the most essential articles of equipment for our soldiers is his canteen. In equatorial countries and in other warm climes they are particularly important to the welfare of our fighting men.



The canteen, now being largely manufactured of plastics, costs about 43 cents. The canvas cover . . . about 41 cents or 84 cents in all. Your purchases of War Bonds, or People's Bonds, will buy many of these for our men in the Solomons or in Africa where they are badly needed. FATHER-SON BANQUET

The week of November 7th, being Royal Ambassador Focus Week, the WMS of the First Baptist Church is planning to entertain the men and boys of the Church at a Father-Son Banquet on Monday evening, Nov. 8, at 8 o'clock. Following the supper there will be a social hour of fellowship and entertainment. All boys are urged to bring their fathers, and all fathers are urged to bring their sons.

THE OTHER DAY

Tway just, I think, the other day
That I was gaily on my way

To see the Clanton water plant
That's located on a slant.

That's the water that we drink.
Where does it come from? Let me think.

Oh, yes, it comes from Yellow Leaf
Now of it's filtering, let me be brief.

First it goes through vats of sand
To catch impurities of the land.

Coarse lime is dropped to vats inside,
So not a tiny germ can hide.

Then alum added to the mass
As it along the pipes pass.

Then finer lime is added next;
I hope this tale will no one vex.

Now from a tube of yellowish green
Small bits are added of chorine.

Piped to the big tank on the hill,
Is this pure water 'till it's filled.

Then to your friends you'll say, I think,
"Come with me and let's have a drink."

—JOHN D. BROADHEAD.

OUR TRIP TO THE WATER PLANT

My class had been making a study in health about water. We had used several text books and an encyclopedia to learn all that we could about water. We wrote letters to see if we could get permission to go to the city water plant. We got an answer saying that we could come.

On Friday, October 15, the sixth grade of Clanton Elementary School went to the City Water Plant. We all enjoyed the walk. There were flowers all along the roadside. It was a very pretty day.

When we got to the plant Mr Driver was waiting for us. He answered the questions that were asked. He made an explanation of all the features of the plant.. He told us about the machine that puts alum and lime into the water. It was all very interesting. I was particularly interested in seeing where the water was filtered.

When we had seen all the machines that were in the plant, Derl Davis thanked Mr Driver for letting us go to the plant. We stopped at Miller's Service Station and got drinks. They were very refreshing.

When we had finished our drinks all of the children got in groups. When we got to school we rested. Then, with the trip fresh on our minds, we wrote thank-you letters to Mr Driver.—Dorothy Mims.

A VISIT TO THE WATER WORKS

In school we have been making a study of water. We used several text and reference books in making this study.

We decided to go on a trip to the water plant. We wrote letters to ask for permission to go. In a few days we received word that we could go. We made safety rules and devided the Class into groups. We also chose someone to introduce the class and thank the guide.

Last Friday morning we started out. It was a very pretty day.

The water plant is a two story white building on the Birmingham Highway.

The water comes to the plant from a creek through a big pipe. On the first floor are two pumps. One of these pumps the water to the pools upstairs. The other one pumps the water to the tanks...

On the second floor are two pools of water that have gravel in them. There is a cabinet that has a glass jar on top, which contains chlorine.

Chlorine and lime are used in purifying water. The water is run thru the chlorine and lime.

At the back of the plant, high off the ground are more pools. In the bigger one is water and in the smaller one is mud which was filtered from the water.

The people of Clanton use one-hundred, seventy-eight thousand gallons of water daily.

The present water system was started in 1939.—Mary Ann Oglesby

LET US HONOR THE LIVING

Cut-a-Cord
for every local boy in service

NEWSPAPER PULPWOOD COMMITTEE

Next Thursday is Armistice Day. In other years that day has been dedicated to the memory of the men who gave their lives in World War I. But this year we believe those honored dead would rather join with us, the living, in paying honor to the men of another generation who have taken up the weapons that fell from their lifeless hands.

This year we in this community are asked to observe Armistice Day not with words but with deeds. This year we have a special responsibility.

This Armistice Day marks the beginning of a new drive to make up the shortage in pulpwood. Everyone who can possibly do so is asked to cut an extra cord in honor of some friend or relative in the service.

There are two good reasons for putting the drive on this basis.

First, it takes nearly a ton of pulpwood to supply each man in the service with the many things he needs.

Second, the present pulpwood shortage, 2½ million cords, is just about equal to the number of service men who come from the pulpwood-producing areas.

So if every one of us in this and other pulpwood-cutting communities cuts an extra cord for our service man, the emergency will be met. No fighting man will lack any of the thousand-and-one war essentials that are made from pulpwood.

No boy shall die because we failed.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Tax Body Asks Higher Postal Rates; Coal Miners Offered New Pay Boost; Nazis Strengthen Defenses in Italy As Allied Forces Gather in Corsica

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Labor leaders who conferred with President Roosevelt on wages and prices included, from left to right in front row, William Green, AFL president; A. F. Whitney; Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, social security board; Philip Murray, CIO president, and Julius Emspak. Back row from left to right: George Meany, Daniel Tobin and R. J. Thomas.

ITALY:

Dig In

With the Nazis solidly entrenched in the mountains running across Italy 100 miles south of Rome, there were reports that Gen. Dwight Eisenhower was assembling forces in Corsica, possibly for a landing at the Germans' rear in northern Italy, or on the French Riviera.

The mountains in which the Germans dug in form a double ridge and rise to heights of 2,500 feet along the sector occupied by Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark's Fifth army. Because most positions blend well into the landscape and the heights are rugged, experts saw little use of airplanes to bomb defenses effectively or armored formations to break up concentrations.

The continuing flow of German reinforcements in northern Italy indicated that the Nazis intend to pin down the greater bulk of the Allied armies in that country, and make it the principal battleground of Europe.

HAWAII:

Commander in Contempt

Judge Metzger

When the army's commander of the Hawaiian department refused to produce two German-American citizens in court and show cause why the army should continue to hold them on precautionary grounds, Federal Judge Delbert E. Metzger charged the commander with contempt and fined him $5,000.

But when Judge Metzger learned that the army had released the two citizens, he dismissed the order to produce them, and cut the commander's fine to $100. However, he refused to dismiss the contempt charge entirely.

Under martial law in Hawaii, the writ of habeas corpus, requiring authorities to show cause why a suspect should be held, had been restricted to use in certain civil cases, although Judge Metzger had demanded its full application. At present, habeas corpus stands suspended in military cases, but can be utilized in strictly civil suits.

LABOR:

Raise for Miners

Trimming the United Mine Workers' proposition for a $1.50 daily wage raise with compensation for underground travel time, the War Labor board offered John L. Lewis' UMW a $1.12½ boost.

Under the WLB offer, miners would not be paid for underground travel, but would receive time and a half for 45 minutes of work over the regular 7-hour day. According to the WLB, the miners' earnings would increase $1.66 daily for a six-day, 8½ hour day.

Meanwhile leaders of 20 railroad unions were preparing a strike vote among their 1,350,000 members, to decide on a walkout over dissatisfaction of the government's award of wage increases of four cents an hour for the operating unions, and Economic Stabilization Director Fred Vinson's refusal to grant the non-operating unions an eight cents an hour boost.

TAXES:

Ask Higher Postal Rates

With congress opposed to further increases in income taxes, the lawmakers looked to other possible sources of revenue to help raise some of the 10 billion dollars requested by the treasury to bring total receipts to 50 billion dollars annually.

Congress' advisory tax staff proposed increasing the local postal rate to 3 cents; air-mail to 10 cents an ounce; money orders 10 to 37 cents; insured mail 10 to 70 cents, and COD mail 24 cents to $2.40.

The advisory staff also suggested raising the liquor tax to $10 a gallon; beer to $8 per barrel; wine to 5 cents to $1 a gallon; electric light bulbs and tubes to 15 per cent of retail price; general admissions to 3 cents for each 10 cents; bowling 20 per cent of charge, and billiards $20 a table.

In all, congress hopes to raise 1½ billion dollars from the new levies.

RUSSIA:

Nazis Fight Entrapment

Their Dnieper river line smashed below Kiev, the German high command strived to pull hundreds of thousands of their embattled troops out of the huge noose charging Russian forces were drawing about them.

In this sector, the Dnieper turns sharply from a southerly direction and runs almost 200 miles eastward to Dnepropetrovsk. The Germans established a line along these 200 miles of river front, and then organized a defense from Dnepropetrovsk southward some 125 miles to the Sea of Azov.

By slashing through the German lines along the eastern course of the Dnieper, the Russ threatened the whole Nazi line strung to the south from Dnepropetrovsk. To escape entrapment, the German high command began withdrawing its troops.

DRAFT:

Would Take Dads Last

Moving to draft dads last, congress passed a bill which would require Selective Service to induct all single and childless married men throughout the entire country first before fathers would be called by any board.

Incorporated in the same bill which went to the senate for consideration were provisions which would:

1. Eliminate the War Manpower commission's classification of "essential" industries offering temporary deferment; 2. Require all deferments to be reviewed by appeals boards within the district where the employee works; 3. Establish a medical commission to consider change of army and navy physical standards.

'HELLCAT':

Navy's Newest

Latest American plane to sweep the Japanese before it in Southwest Pacific skies is the navy's Grumman Hellcat fighter plane.

Powered by a 2,000 h.p. motor, the Hellcat travels over 400 m.p.h., can climb to 35,000 feet and has a range of over 1,500 miles.

With a wingspan of 42 feet, 10 inches and an overall length of 33 feet, 6¼ inches, the Hellcat is a single seat, low wing, all metal, folding wing monoplane, designed to operate from an aircraft carrier or land.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

TAXES: The excess profits tax on corporations will be increased to 95 per cent from the present rate of 90 per cent, Representative Knutson, minority leader, predicts.

MECHANICS: A critical shortage of automobile mechanics is announced by the Office of Defense Transportation. Training courses in this work are now in progress in 72 cities.

WHISKEY: An increase of 30 cents a quart, and 26 cents a "fifth" has been authorized by the Office of Price Administration. It applies to blended whiskey containing imported neutral spirits.

UNDERWEAR: A shortage of underwear is impending, says Roy Cheney, president of the Underwear Institute. He blames lack of factory workers.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:

Work on Jap Bases

Continuing to blast at Japanese outposts impeding further U. S. advances in the Southwest Pacific, American airmen returned to Rabaul and Kahili and showered the two big enemy air and sea bases with hundreds of tons of bombs.

As a result of persistent U. S. bombing, it was reported that the Japs have been making little use of their air fields of Kahili in the Solomons. Once the center for enemy craft harassing U. S. positions in the southern Solomons, Kahili has shown little life as American airmen swept over to plaster runways and installations.

Heavily screened by fighters, nearly 50 four-motored Liberator bombers spearheaded the latest blast at Rabaul, which has served the Japanese as a feeder point for supplies for their troops battling in New Guinea and the Solomons. As a result of recent raids, it was reported more than 800 enemy planes were knocked out.

PEACE PLANS:

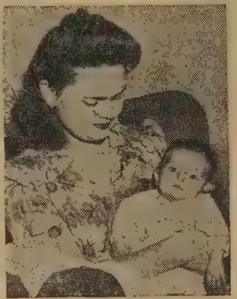
Debated in Senate

In the hush of the historic old senate chamber, silver-haired Senator Tom Connally (Texas) arose to his feet in his long black coat. Glancing slowly about, he began to read the foreign relations committee's resolution defining the principle of America's co-operation with other nations for preserving peace in the postwar world:

". . . The United States acting through its constitutional processes, join with free and sovereign nations in the establishment and maintenance of international authority with power to prevent aggression and to preserve the peace of the world."

When Connally sat down the senate opened debate on accepting the resolution. Some senators charged the measure invited U. S. formation of an alliance with individual countries for action against threatening powers, and they demanded adoption of a broader resolution calling on the U. S. to join a world organization which could enforce peace through use of military police.

Blood Flows Backward



Although three-month-old Marilyn Stewart's heart is so constructed that the blood circulates backward, she has been faring well.

Pictured above in her mother's arms, tiny Marilyn's case has baffled doctors, who say that her condition is contrary to the ordinary structure of life.

FUEL:

Coal Supply

U. S. coal stocks total a record 100,000,000 tons, of which 15,000,000 tons are stored in basements, the Bituminous Coal Institute declared.

Further, the institute said, production goals of 600,000,000 tons of coal for 1943 will be met if: 1. There are no more strikes; 2. Absenteeism can be reduced; 3. Drafting of miners is halted, and 4. Ample replacement machinery is available.

Although production slumped 350,000 tons in the week of October 16, the institute said, output still was 150,000 tons higher than the same period last year.

Oil Sources

To keep pace with the rising rate of crude oil withdrawal, the U. S. must bring in a 30,000,000 barrel field every six days, Col. Ernest O. Thompson of the Texas railroad commission declared.

Although the nation has an unused capacity of 200,000 barrels daily in west Texas, Colonel Thompson said the United Nations have a reserve of 991,389 barrels daily. Of this, the British empire possesses 422,123 barrels, chiefly in Iran, and Latin America has 569,246 barrels, mostly in Venezuela.

At present, Colonel Thompson declared, the British empire is supplying 845,800 barrels daily, and Latin America 1,015,035 barrels daily, compared with U. S. production of 4,600,000 barrels daily.

VETS:

Offer Job Training

Vocational training for veterans of the present war who may be unable to find employment when they return, will be provided at government expense, the Veterans' administration announces.

Courses up to four years will be given, and increased pensions will be paid while the ex-serviceman is in school. A single man will receive $80 a month, a married man $90 and $5 for each dependent child.

Delos Wheeler Lovelace

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK. — Five times now Viscount Waldorf Astor has been elected mayor of English Plymouth; and since no one claims to have been dedicated to his removal he may outlast our President Roosevelt in office.

Plymouth's Mayor Has 2 Terms Up On Our Top Man

Astor would have been a ranking member of the Park Avenue set here if his father hadn't grown hippy over flaws in our economic system and popped off to London. Ennoblement followed, the more easily, perhaps, because of American millions taken along.

Besides being Plymouth's semi-permanent mayor, the viscount is the quieter half of the conjugal partnership completed by the one-time glamour girl and always remarkable Nancy Langhorne of Virginia. They have five children and maybe it was the feeding of the five that started Astor's present interest in nutrition.

Most people who plump for food reform are lean, and so is the viscount, a rangy, self-conscious fellow 64 years old but looking younger. Oxford is his university. There he played polo, ran in steeplechase races and grew expert with the saber. His wealth is still great, thanks to the fur-bearing Jacob, founder of all Astor fortunes.

A BRITISH admiral has been saying that only three good things ever came out of Germany . . . music, sausages and Marlene Dietrich. He will, doubtless, grant that others, including the Scandinavians, produced good music. And Homer sang of sausages centuries before any Germans thought of even so simple a skin game. But on Dietrich he is as right as rain.

A Keg Is the Last Thing Dietrich's Outline Resembles

Although she has lived here for 13 years, she is Berlin born, and as uniquely German as a keg of Pilsener. But not Nazi. When she was naturalized four years ago Goebbels read her right out of the Reich.

A little trip into the thesaurus might have uncovered several better words than that "keg." Burgess Meredith never would have said of a keg, as he did of Miss Dietrich, that he wished all women looked like her.

Just when Miss Dietrich was born in Berlin is not at hand. However, she was married in 1924 to Franz Seiber, and she has an 18-year-old daughter, a recent bride. So her age must be about . . . Yep! Just about! If not exactly.

Miss Dietrich used to be a stormy petrel. Once she and Garbo had their knives out. Once she was in Mae West's hair. And she made more than one director back up. But she has been swinging less often from the floor since she made her come-back on those famous underpinnings, singing "See What the Boys in the Back Room Will Have." Lately, helping sell Victory bonds, she has been singing, "See What the Boys in the Back Room Will Give."

IN GREEN lofty Bogota, President Alfonso Lopez Y Pumarejo has reorganized his cabinet. By shrewd compromise, he probably hopes to prevent repetition of Axis-inspired disturbances. All Liberal factions now are included in the set-up.

United States Has Staunch Friend in Colombia's Chief

Like liberals everywhere, the Liberals of Colombia differ greatly in degree. President Lopez is farther to the left than many. He has pressed . . . sometimes against opposition in his own party . . . reforms in social legislation, taxation, education; in fact he initiated many of them during his previous incumbency.

For he has been president before . . . '34 to '38. Not trusting to any second, or third term tradition, the Colombian constitution forbids successive elections. So in '38 Dr. Eduardo Santos came in, but in 1942, in his 56th year, Lopez came back.

The United States is fortunate to have him. A thorough-going democrat, he is also our thorough-going friend. He came here in his youth, after classical studies at Oxford, to investigate business administration.

He did not enter politics until after his marriage in 1912 to Dona Maria Michelsen; he has had a fling at banking and at newspapering. He comes from a wealthy banking family.

After serving in the Colombian house of representatives, he devoted himself to electing Dr. Enrique Herrera, the first Liberal president of Colombia in 1930. Later Lopez served Herrera, as minister to London and delegate to the League of Nations. He has visited this country often since studying here, notably in August of 1942.

PNEUMONIA DEATHS

Just as we are congratulating ourselves that physicians are not worried much about their pneumonia cases since the sulfa drugs have been shown to be so effective in curing pneumonia, thus saving many lives, we learn from physicians, hospitals and insurance companies that pneumonia is again increasing.

In the Statistical Bulletin, Metropolitan Life Insurance company, we read: "The rise in the death rate in pneumonia will be noted with surprise by many people who for the past few years have heard so much about the striking decline in the death rate following the use of sulfa drugs in the treatment of the disease." The death rate was lowered from about 9 per cent to 3 per cent because the sulfa drugs were able to defend the body against what is called the coccus form of pneumonia (small round organisms seen under the microscope).

However, the type of pneumonia which is now causing so many cases is not the coccus (pneumococcus) type but a virus type; that is a very tiny organism which cannot be seen under the microscope. Despite their ability to defeat the pneumococcus type of pneumonia, the sulfa drugs have no effect upon this type of pneumonia.

A point of interest is that a recent study of fatal cases of this type of pneumonia among policyholders of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company shows that a large proportion of the deaths were among younger persons. Of the 150 deaths recorded in the company's experience since last November, 36 per cent were between the ages of 15 and 44 years, as compared with only 18 per cent (of the total number) of pneumonia deaths in a normal year.

It has been known for some time that war conditions increase the number and severity of nose, throat and lung ailments; the influenza epidemic of 1918-19 is still in our minds. This means that during the coming months of cold weather, the greatest possible health precautions should be taken.

"Those doing hard manual labor or putting in long hours of overtime should be encouraged to get as much rest as possible in their time. Every effort must be made to maintain good nutrition which is quite possible within the limits of rationing."

Headache in Morning Is Sinusitis Symptom

When a definite case of sinus disease is present with pus formation, there is no difficulty in recognizing it.

What about mild or early cases of inflammation of the sinus?

In the Canadian Medical Association Journal, Dr. Keith Hutchison, Montreal, states:

"The symptoms of acute inflammation of the sinus—sinusitis—are definite and I always accept the midmorning headache as evidence of a true sinusitis, even though nothing definite appears on the first examination."

This midmorning headache is important because there are so many kinds of headache that the physician is grateful for any and every clue.

"When an intelligent patient reports that he felt well on arising and then about 10 o'clock in the morning a severe frontal headache came on which persisted till midafternoon then disappeared and the patient went to bed free of pain and discomfort only to go through the same symptoms the next day, a clear-cut diagnosis of acute catarrhal sinusitis may be made and treated accordingly."

The treatment outlined by Dr. Hutchison is to put the patient to bed, hot cloths on the face, ephedrine solution in the nose, plenty of fluids and a rigid rule of no smoking. Two to four days' rest generally effects a cure.

Because the symptoms are not severe, "just a little head cold," many patients refuse to go to bed, with the result that the cold "hangs on" and instead of there being simply a watery discharge from the nose, the discharge may become mucous and even pus formation occur.

The patient with an early or light sinusitis should go to bed and follow the treatment described if he wishes to prevent chronic catarrh or sinusitis.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—What causes neuritis?

A.—There must be some cause for your neuritis—infected teeth, or other infection, possibly pressure on nerve supplying the arm. See your dentist.

Q.—Would a half grain of saccharine in coffee or tea be harmful for an adult or a boy of 17?

A.—Saccharin tablets (¼ grain) three times a day will do no harm; also all right for boy of 17 to use. Sugar gives more energy, of course.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY O'HARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin can ride any horse on his family's Wyoming ranch, but he wants a colt of his own. His father, a retired army officer, refuses to give him one until his school grades improve and he learns to take responsibility. Ken's mother tries to protect him from the stern discipline of his father and the youthful bullying of his older brother, Howard, who always manages to do things right. When Captain McLaughlin learns that Ken has not been promoted the colt seems farther away than ever. But Nell convinces Ken's father that the colt may be just what Ken needs to teach him to take responsibility.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER IV

When Ken and Howard reached the corrals, preparations were almost completed. Doc Hicks, six feet two and built like a Hereford steer, never wasted time. A day's work often meant three or four such jobs as this, with perhaps a hundred miles of Wyoming roads to cover in his high-powered dusty black car, piled full of boxes and satchels, instruments, serums, bottles, lariats, halters. The big vet and McLaughlin were talking together, at the same time that they kept an eye on what was going on, Tim mending the fence of the little round corral where the gelding was to be done, Doc's assistant bringing the lariat from the car, Gus tending the fire which had been built just outside the fence.

The boys went close to their father and stood listening, and McLaughlin's hand dropped to Ken's shoulder in a natural, casual manner. It was an important, exciting, day—

"No, it's more of that black grease I want," said McLaughlin. "I've got the can in the stable; come on, I'll show you—"

They walked off. Howard went over to Gus and looked at Doc's black leather bag where it stood on the grass beside the feed box which Gus had upturned and covered with a piece of Nell's clean white sheet. In that bag were the instruments.

Ken climbed the corral fence and sat watching the two-year-olds.

Ken felt the singing spirit of them, the young hearts, the free, overflowing power, and his hands tightened on the rail of the fence. A choking filled his throat.

"I've got one too," he muttered. "Oh, you beauties—in a year, my yearling will be like you—"

Longing to be closer to them, he slipped down from the fence and ran to his father.

"Dad, can I bring them in?"

"Don't have to bring them in," said his father. "All I have to do is show 'em a bucket, and they'll come in of themselves. Go get me a bucket of oats."

Coming back with the bucket, Ken paused to watch Doc Hicks opening his bag, laying out some instruments on the clean white sheet. Howard was kneeling beside him, absorbed, looking at every instrument. Howard liked things like that; instruments, doctor-stuff—Doc took a jar out of his bag, filled it full of alcohol and put a pair of surgical scissors in it and a small sharp knife.

"What's that?" asked Howard.

"Scalpel," answered Doc. He looked at the boys, grinning in his rough way. "How'd you like to be doing it?"

"I'd like it," said Howard promptly. "I'd like to be a vet."

"How 'bout you?"

Ken didn't answer. The color was fading from his face. He tried to look scornful.

Rob opened the gate and stood calling the stallions. He shook the bucket and whistled his trilling whistle. It carried to the colts and several of them raised their heads from their grazing and looked at him. They all looked, standing still, facing him. One started to walk slowly toward him, then the others. In a moment they were all cantering, bearing down on him.

McLaughlin fed them first, let each one dip his mouth into the bucket and have a taste of the oats; then let one through and closed the gate. The other colts stood there, crowding and pushing, now and then kicking at each other.

Bill was ready with the lariat.

Bill's eyes were as keen and steady as a marksman taking aim, as he stood in the middle, whirling the loop of his lariat. Suddenly it snaked out along the ground; both forefeet of the colt fell in it. He went down with a crash, and Tim was kneeling on his head before he could move. McLaughlin and Gus tied his feet. Doc went in with his knife, and the colt screamed and tried to struggle. It was over in a minute.

They loosed him and he got to his feet. They opened the gate into the big corral, and the colt trotted in there and stood by the fence, head hanging down, blood streaming.

One after the other came in prancing, was thrown and castrated, then moved into the other corral. The men worked more and more quietly. Doc's joshing ceased, McLaughlin's face looked angry and strained.

Ken had to hold on to the fence. It wasn't only the blood and the cutting, it was the way the colts stood when it was over. They crowded into a bunch in the corner of the big corral and stood motionless and shocked, one or two off alone by themselves.

Between operations, McLaughlin went to them with a bucket of oats and offered it with gentle words, "Well, old boy, pretty tough, isn't it—"

A few of the colts lifted their heads at the familiar voice, dipped their muzzles into the bucket; but most of them stood quiet and would not move. McLaughlin patted them, stroked their necks, comforted them.

Ken felt himself going. He slid down the fence, and stood with his face against it, hanging on.

"Look at the kid," said Bill, and McLaughlin turned, and in two strides was beside Ken.

"Here, here—" he had him by the shoulder.

Ken fought him off, furious, sobbing—

"Why, son—"

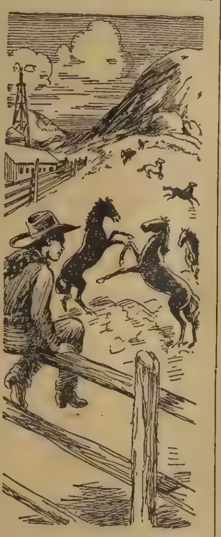
Ken broke away from his father, ducked through the bars of the fence, and vanished around the stable. He ran a long way, up the hill and into the pines, and threw himself face down on the ground.

He was thinking of his own colt—a year from now—when they would be gelding it—he saw it suddenly as clearly as if it was there before him, a bright golden sorrel, like Banner—he saw the blood running down its legs—

After a long time he heard a car starting. The engine picked up, it was climbing the hill behind the house, the sound faded away. Doc Hicks was gone.

Ken pounded with the toe of his boot on the earth.

He heard a match struck close by, and raised his head to see his father standing there, lighting his pipe.



"I've got one, too," Ken muttered.

McLaughlin sat down beside his boy and puffed at his pipe. He put out an arm and drew Ken against him.

"Kennie—"

"Oh, my colt, Dad—my colt—"

His father's arm held him tighter and Ken pressed against it, crying bitterly.

At dinner, McLaughlin said the first thing he was going to do was to get Rocket into the corrals, and into the chute, cut the piece of rope off her neck, then drive her out of the Stable Pasture and out onto the range with the other brood mares.

"Until I get that done," said he, "I can't turn the gelded colts into the Stable Pasture—she'd get mixed up with them and I'd have a heck of a time cutting her out again."

"How long will you keep the colts in the Stable Pasture?" asked Nell.

"About a week. I've got to keep my eye on them. They'll have to be exercised daily. After that, they can go out onto the range with the others. You boys can give them a hard run every day. Ride 'em like hell. This is your chance to whoop it up and yell and act like cowboys."

"Why?" asked Howard.

"If there should be an infected one amongst them—which is always possible—he'd just stand around till he dies. Make him run. That causes drainage of the wound, stirs up circulation. If they're left alone, they'll stand around and mope and won't eat enough to keep up their strength."

Ken hadn't wanted his dinner. Nell was looking at him. She said, "You can leave the table if you want, Ken. Put up my hammock for me. I may want it later."

Ken got the hammock, hung it near the Pergola and lay down in it on his back, with feet and hand dangling over the sides, giving little shoves against the ground.

They do it to all the horses in the world, Ken thought, only a few left for studs. And to all the steers—

Nell came out with her apron tied around her and her coffee cup in her hand and stood looking at the sky.

"Golly, it's hot!" she said. "It's time we had the canvas up."

She looked over at Ken, as she stood stirring her coffee, and then sat down in one of the hickory chairs beside him.

"It doesn't really do them any harm, Ken," she said.

Ken wasn't surprised. She could always read his thoughts.

"Doesn't it, Mother?"

"No. It has to be done. Don't feel badly about it, dear. It isn't nice to watch. I was sorry you had to. In a week, they won't know that anything ever happened to them."

"Won't they?"

"Just look at Highboy. And all the great race horses."

"All gelded, Mother?"

"Most of them. A few are stallions, but more are geldings. Ken, you know the world is full of unpleasant things. Pain and operations and sickness and discomfort. You mustn't mind. That's just the way life is. Besides all that, there is health and goodness and soundness and fun and happiness, too, for horses as well as boys—much more of the good things than the bad—"

He turned his face to her, beginning to smile; and she put out her hand and pushed the damp hair back from his forehead. "Take the bad with the good. That's the way grown-up people do. You've just had a little bit of growing up today."

"I really do feel an awful lot different, Mother," he said. "When I got up this morning and didn't even know I was going to have a colt seems awful far away."

"People grow up that way," said Nell. "In spurts. All of a sudden, they are years older."

Ken's face became thoughtful. "Besides, I can have a filly instead of a horse colt. Dad rides a mare."

McLaughlin's voice, laughing loudly, came out the kitchen window, and the horses on the Green raised their heads, looked at the house and walked expectantly toward it.

McLaughlin appeared in the doorway. "Look at the buggers. Beggin for oats—"

He disappeared again. There was always a bucket of oats hanging on a hook in the enclosed porch outside the kitchen door. He came out with the bucket and went down on the Green to the horses. They crowded around him.

On such occasions he insisted on their good behavior. This meant observance of rules of fair play and turn about. A horse that stuck his nose into the bucket and would not take it out would get a good smack on the side of the head. If they whirled and lashed each other in their jealousy and greediness, he put the bucket behind him and delivered a lecture, the tone of his voice expressing such surprise and indignation that they would hang their heads and all but promise never to do it again. Sometimes he would be completely surrounded and hidden.

The light changed suddenly, and McLaughlin looked at the sky. The heavy cloud bank in the southwest had engulfed the sun and a coolness came into the air.

"It's going to rain," he said. "Will you ride this afternoon, Nell?"

"Later," she answered. "I've got to bake my bread now before the fire goes down."

"I'm going for the mail—anything you want?"

"Two cakes of Fleischman's yeast, and Gus wanted tobacco—Rough Cut—the next time anyone went to the store."

She went back into the house and the boys ran to the big red Studebaker, where it stood on the hill behind the house. Howard got in the front seat, and Ken in the back.

Just about to let in the clutch, McLaughlin paused and looked at Howard.

"By the way, Howard, when did you ride Highboy last?"

"Yesterday afternoon."

"I was noticing his legs—you turned him out with dirty legs."

"I groomed him," Howard wriggled.

"Yes, down to his knees."

"He kicks."

"And whose fault is that?"

Howard sat in silence.

"This would be a good time," said McLaughlin, "to take him up to the stables and groom him. He's right there where you can easily catch him."

"Can't I go with you to the store first?" asked Howard.

McLaughlin sat looking around at the weather signs, as if he had not heard.

Just like his father to wait until a little fun was up and then choose that time to make him groom Highboy.

He got out slowly. Ken climbed into the front seat.

"Take out the stone from in front of the wheel," said his father.

Howard obeyed and the car slid down the hill, the gears gripped, the engine started, and it rattled over the cattle guard and was off down the stretch of straight gravel road over the little stone bridge that spanned Lone Tree Creek, on up and around the shoulder of the wooded hill, and out of sight

HEARING Jack Benny talk at luncheon about his overseas trip to entertain the armed forces was an experience that all of his many fans should have shared. "Nothing happened to me." That was his theme. "I didn't almost get killed; I wasn't uncomfortable. I'm going back to Hollywood and urge all the actors to duplicate my trip if they can; I saw places I'd never have seen otherwise." He said that when he went into hospitals he was at a loss; "I'd say 'Hullo' and a man would say 'Hullo' and I wouldn't know what to say next; I'd think 'Maybe he just doesn't care about meeting me.'" Most of the time he talked about how swell the rest of the troupe were!

Here's a tribute—Charles R. Rogers recently signed a seven-year contract with Pat Starling, whom Henry Clive, the artist, described as "The most perfect Venus in America"; you'll see her in "Song of the Open Road," previously called "It's Great to Be Young." Looks as if somebody didn't know that when a thing is perfect, it can't be any more so—or is that quibbling?

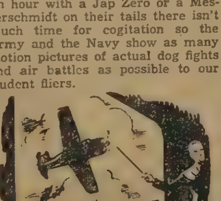
School Days

When our fighters fly at 400 miles an hour with a Jap Zero or a Messerschmidt on their tails there isn't much time for cogitation so the Army and the Navy show as many motion pictures of actual dog fights and air battles as possible to our student fliers.



Pictures of trainer flights, bombing flights and flights by fighters are all a part of the routine for our student pilots and must be drilled into them just as it is necessary for us to remind ourselves daily of the necessity to buy an extra $100 Bond in September. U. S. Treasury Department

VERBENA HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

A very interesting and outstanding meeting of the Verbena Home Demonstration Club was held at their new club house October 7th. With the help of the men and donations from friends the Club women had worked tirelessly to repair the house. Broken windows were replaced, floors cleaned and oiled, walls painted and curtains hung. The club women are very proud of the club rooms and have made plans for other improvements.

The arrangement of Fall colors formed a beautiful background for the splendid exhibits of handiwork of the club members. The foods exhibit contained many kinds of canned meats, fruits, vegetables and jellies. Beautiful crewel work, quilts, hooked rugs and smaller articles were on display.

Miss Barber gave the demonstraion, a most helpful talk on the buying of men's and boy's clothes.

In a short business meeting reports were made and new committees were appointed. Handicraft was taken as the principle project with war work the outstanding activity. Meetings set for Red Cross knitting every Thursday afternoon. A Christmas bazaar was planned.

A welcome was given three new members, Mrs. H. G. Daniels, Mrs. J. B. Fort, Mrs. Judson Messer and a number of visitors

After meeting adjourned an informal social hour was enjoyed and refreshments were served. Members, visitors and a host of young people registered on the club's book.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

This juvenile delinquency talk reinds us of what Mark Twain said aout the weather: Everyone is talking bout it but nobody doing anything bout it.

We received our first Christmas ard last week. It came from England ulius A. Sample was the sender and e appreciated the card very much. Whether a Christmas Card arrives December or in May, doesn't matr. It's the idea of having that somene think enough of you to send you e, that counts.

Angel's Trumpet—A most beautiful ower. Dr J. L. Bennett brught us o large branehes or stems or what er you call them, this week. There ust have been at least that many looms on them, and all open. We mputated the lower extremities and ok them home and entered them in ur side, back, and front yards. Hope ithin a few years to have some beauful Angels Trumpets of our own and we do we'll bring you some.

Being an "old man" has it's draw cks. Last week we were talking to G Searcy and J D Smith both of ncle Sam's Army, and both home n furlough. Ex Sgt. Smith asked us hy we weren't in the army—a quesn that we have to answer quite ofn now-a-days—and we told him at we got too old, too fast. Searcy, id, "We have men in our outfit, who e better than fifty years old," We omptly tucked our conversation been our legs and slunk off into the ght.

Folks & Things received this letter st week from James Carl Martin d we are herewith publishing same the hope that our boys all over the orld will take advantage of this ought and write in to their old pals. this way numersous old friends will d where their former buddy is and friendships will be renewed. If we n't publish yours the first week, n't worry, we will place it in line d it will appear in it's turn.

ear Ben;

When I get the News every week read all these letters from the felws in service so I decided to "get on e ball" and drop you a line too. I e by the last issue of the News that ck Lawrence is getting the paper w. I would like for you to tell him contact me at the above address cause I lost the address he sent me the way, I think it would be a ce project for the News to sponsor column of this kind. I would like to ar from a lot of my old friends in e service and would write to them t I don't know their address. How out starting a column for boys to ite in to you and let you publish a tice for the serviceman they wish contact to write them.

Wish I could be there in Chilton unty this year to help kill a few uirrels. I am up here in the mountns with the bears but I don't want have any misunderstanding with em.

Tell everybody hello for me and ink that suggestion for a new coln over thoroughly.

Sincerely,

James Carl Martin, ASN 34801814

Clanton Tigers To Play Marion Thursday Night

The football game scheduled between Marion Institute and Chilton County High School for Friday night has been changed to Thursday night, November 11th, These two teams met last year in one of the most exciting games of the season, The Marion team is coached by two former teachers of Clanton, Mr Dewey Cox and F H Spicer. Both of these men know how to put out winning teams and a good game is assured when this team comes to Clanton Thursday night,

The high school band is preparing something special for the last game of the season, and a good crowd should be on hand to see the last game of the season,

CHILD OF K. A. HARDY HURT IN FALL FROM AUTOMOBILE

Last Thursday afternoon little Gail Hardy, daughter of Mr and Mrs K. A. Hardy received painful but not serious injuries when she fell from the rear door of a four-door sedan. The accident occured on the Montgomery Highway near Prattmont and probably the only thing that saved the child from serious injury was the fact that her mother was driving only about 30 miles per hour. She was taken to St Margarets Hospital and given first aid treatment and then brought back home. Latest reports from her father are that she is recuperating nicely at her home.

STANTON

A large number of people from our Comfunity attended the chicken supper given by the Maplesville High School Thursday night. Martha Alice Smith of Maplesville won the contest for "prettiest girl" and Bob Davis of Stanton won for the "prettiest boy."

Mildred Parnell of Selma spent the week end with relatives.

Our congratulations and well wishes to Mrs "Corrie Huff" Hillman.

Phil Hicks Hand was a visitor in the home of his grandmother, Mrs Mary Hicks, last week. Phil returned to his home in Washington, D. C, last Wednesday, and reports for induction at Chevy Chase. Maryland on Nov. 8th. He just had to see relatives and friends before entering service.

Mr Edward Parnell entered King Memorial Hospital Monday for operation on his face. For sometimes past Mr Parnell has had a small growth on the left side of his face and doctors saw fit to operate. We wish him a speedy recovery.

Mrs Clifford Gay, (nee Lovella Fulford) and son are at home with Mr and Mrs Jim Gay, while Clifford is in service

Mr and Mrs Charlie Gay visited with Mrs J. D. Gay at Sprott last Sunday.

Mr and Mrs Robert Gay are the proud parents of a daughter.

Mr and Mrs F C Samek, of Miami, (nee Mary Frances Latham) announce the birth of a son on Oct. 23rd

PLEASANT GROVE

The people of this community are prowd to hear that Mrs Emmett Miskelly who is in the West End Baptist Hospital is improving Mrs Velma Price, Mrs Agnes Childress and Mr Nolen Smitherman, went to Childersburg Monday to apply for work.

Mr and Mrs Tom Childress had as their guest Sunday, Mr and Mrs Ivie Childress and family.

Miss Emogene Waldrop of Montgomery spent the week end with her parents, Mr and Mrs I N Waldrop.

Mrs John Wright has been sick for some time but is better at this writing.

Mrs Ada Childress and little daughter, Dot, spent Monday with Mr and Mrs Hunter Rasco, the afternoon guests were: Miss Laurine Spivey, Miss Martha and Jenny Pruitt, and Mrs Davis Hodgens.

Mr and Mrs Bill Pruitt have moved from this Community and we regret to give up this good family. They have lived here for several years.

Sgt James S. Rasco, son of Mr and Mrs Hunter Rasco, of Jemison, who sustained a wound in the left arm, when struck by shrapnel last March, is now being treated in a Tennessee, Hospital.

ESSENTIAL USERS COME FIRST WITH TELEPHONE CALLS

Because of wartime shortage in telephone facilities, persons in Clanton wishing to obtain service may experience difficulties unless they can qualify as essential users, according to T. E. Harris, District Manager for Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company.

"Essential users are those persons essential in the discharge of responsibility for public health, welfare and security," Mr Harris explained.

"Telephone facilities are now operating at capacity in many areas of this exchange and generally, additions cannot be made," he said, "so if you request the installation of new service or if you are planning to move, a reasonable length of time may be necessary to determine if facilities are available or can be made available."

Further information may be obtained from the Southern Bell business office.

What Can We Do ?

Juvenile delinquency is not caused by High School dances. When we have recreation we stay out of mischief. Why doesn't our church have a game room once a week or why don't our town people provide us a place of recreation? Do they want us to grow up and be criminals just because that was all that we could find to do to entertain ourselves. We live in a Democracy and we want to be able to live it the way it should be lived. Unless we have the right recreation for our leasure time, some might seek to do things that hinder the growth of their minds toward a great and good democracy.

Why don't we have bowling allies and other places as other towns have? Is it because the mothers and fathers had rather their children seek bad amusement or be a wall flower? We know there is a war on and material is hard to get, but we need recreation and we need good, clean recreation.

Since the cream of the crop are having to go and fight our battles, maybe never to return, we are going to have to be as fit as they were, to carry on their work. Dancing isn't the only thing in the world there is to do, but all we have to do is dance and go to the picture show. We like to play games and gather together just as much as we like to dance. But there is no place for us to gather together and play games and have a good time.—The Student Council, C. C. H. S.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to the many friends and Members of the American Legion for their kindness shown us during the death of our husband and father, D. B. Fox.—Mrs Olivia Fox and children.

Bond Sales Exceed Quota By $55,725.50 Says Ch'm Pattillo

Bond sales in Chilton County during the Third War Loan tottaled $609,725.50, according to the announcement of J. C. Pattillo, Executive Chairman of the County War Finance Committee who quoted official figures tabulated by the Federal Reserve Bank. The county's quota was $554,000.

"Our county has achieved an outstanding rcord," the chairman said. "and we at home can take justifiable pride in the manner in which we backed the attack. I want to thank each individual in the county who helped in any way to make this achievement possible."

Total Bond sales in Alabama during the campaign were $143,124,043, with every county in the state again topping the quota set for it by the Treasury Department. Every county in Alabama met its quota during the Second and Third War Loan Drives. The quota for Alabama for the Third War Loan Drive was $108,000,000, and the state passed this goal by 132 per cent to rank ninth in the nation.

Only in the sale of E Bonds did Alabama fall short, selling $30,000,000 of a $35,000,000 quota. Sales of the Treasury securities to individuals, partnerships and personal trust accounts were 127 per cent above the quota, while sales to corporations, associations and other investors were 138 per cent above the quota.

These figures also include the first fifteen days in October which accounts for the more than fifty thousand dollars above the quota. There was no quota for the month of October.

Word from Chairman Pattillo Tuesday morning reported a quota of $31,600 of November and urges all workers to put their efforts to reaching this goal.

Adair Named New Scoutmaster For 57 Program Thurs. Night

The Boy Scout movement in Clanton will be given added impetus on Thursday night when the boys will present two programs to the public.

Henry Adair, a new instructor at the High School, has accepted the position of Scoutmaster of Troop 57 and is busy with the Scouts' parts in the events. Field Scout Executive Charle B. McKee of the Montgomery Area Council will be in Clanton to assist with the programs.

The Thursday chapel program at the High School will be a patriotic occasion, for Armistice Day, conducted by the Boy Scouts. Executive McKee will give a talk on "The Scouts' Part in the War," flag ceremony and Scout rituals will be on the program. An attempt is being made to get the national Boy Scout sound-color motion picture "Scouting Trails to Citizenship" here for the chapel.

The Kiwanis Club program for Thursday evening will also be in charge of the Scouts and much of the High School program will be presented to the Kiwanians and their guests. Plans are being made to have the Scout Troop present as Kiwanian guest of honor. Executive McKee will be present to assist with the program.

Every Scout is urged to have himself and his uniform in readiness for the two programs and the leadership is looking forward to more public cooperation in conducting the Boy Scout program during the 1943-44 season.

Our Sunday services were rained out but we sure thank the Lord for the nice rain. We were in need of it and He always knows best so we will all be at church next Sunday to our regular preaching service which Bro. Hughes. We will all study our same BYPU lesson and have it next Sunday night.

We invite everyone who can to come out to church and do all we can to keep the work going on. Let's all go to church and be in service for our Lord every chance we get. Everyone is welcome and invited to our church.

FUTURE FARMERS SELL BONDS WORTH MILLION

Over a million dollars worth of War Bonds sold, is the record of Alabama Future Farmers during their recent FFA Jeep campaign.

Leading the Alabama chapters in total amount sold is Ozark with $217,000.00. Other high chapters were Midland City $135,537.50; Lexington $77,500.00; and Luverne $70,150.00 Fifteen other chapters sold over $10,000.00 worth of bonds.

The goal set in the campaign was 200 jeeps. Records show that enough war bonds were sold to buy 900.

Meeting Begins Friday Presbyterian Church

The pastor, Rev J. D. McPhail, will arrive in Clanton Friday morning to be of assistance in preperation for our weeks meeting, beginning Sabbath morning at which time the pastor will preach; and at the evening hour Dr MacGuire of Montgomery, will preach and each evening through Friday night. We extend a cordial invitation to the pastors and their people of Clanton to worship with us at these services. You will hear the old Gospel clothed in pure and understandable english; Dr MacGuire is a pleasing speaker and interpreter of God's word as it applies to humanity.

The officers and membership of this church will be happy to welcome you to all and any of these services. Come and worship with us.

The pastor will preach at Marbury at 2 p. m. Sabbath afternoon.

Farm Bureau Federation Oppose Consumer Subsidies to Farmers

The Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, in its 22nd annual convention ere last week, went on record as opposing the payment of consumer subsidies, in lieu of fair, prices to farmers. We hold that it is unfair to pass on o present and future taxpayers part f the grocery bill of civilians who today are receiving the highest wages nd salaries ever known, and who are pending a smaller percentage of their incomes for food in all their experience" the resolution declaired.

The Farm Bureau Federation also demanded that "the plain terms of the price control act of October, 1942, be carried out"; favored continuance of the AAA and the Commodity Credit Corporation; and urged Congress to "enact legislation retaining all needed functions of the Farm Security Administration and placing of the entire program in the hands of other existing Federal and State agencies."

Officer Gets Thrill When He Sees Plane Named For Hometown

Warrant Officer Harold Kinney has seen hundreds of planes come and go at the North African air field where he is stationed as a supply officer, but he thought his eyes were playing tricks on him not long ago when he saw a pursuit ship on the flight line with "Spirit of Shadyside, Birmingmah Alabama," stencilled neatly on the side.

The young warrant officer is a native of Shadyside, and the sight of that ship purchased by the folks back home meant something very special to him. He wrote his wife, who lives at 2328 23rd Street—

"The Spirit of Shadyside" is at this field. What a beauty! Surely looks mean with all the guns mounted. If all the folks that bought Bonds could only see it! Seems like its growling to get going, like it's afraid some of the other planes will get ahead of it in battle."

The pursuit ship was purchased by the citizens of Shadyside during special Bond campaign put on by the Shadyside Civitan Club which ended last April. J. H. Hargrave was president of the Civitan Club at the time, and H. T Duncan was chairman of the drive

SAILOR ON LEAVE

On Sunday October 31, a group of friends gathered at the home of Mr and Mrs J P Smith to be with their son, Johnnie, who is in the Navy at San Diego, Calif.

Those who were present were: Mr and Mrs G W Sansom, and daughters, Mr and Mrs J P Smith and children, Mr and Mrs Sam Headley Mr and Mrs Jim Smith, Mr and Mrs W H Trammel and Children; Mr and Mrs C E Sansom and children Mrs Daisy Crane; Mrs Grady Davis and children; Mr John Klinner; Miss Bessie Scott; Mr and Mrs W M Smith and children; Mr and Mrs Harvie Sansom; Rev and Mrs Farnell and son: Mr and Mrs G E Sansom and children; Mr and Mrs N A Smith and children; Mr and Mrs Henry Smith and children; Mr and Mrs Luther Smith and daughter Miss Cora Smith Mr Sol Sansom.

In the afternoon everyone left for their homes wishing for Johnnie much luck in the Navy.

Arrangements have been worked out whereby Alabama farmers may apply to county agents for fingerling ponds.

It is estimated that hog slaughters during the last three months of 1943 will be 25 to 30 percent above the last quarter of 1942.

Chilton County War Chest Drive Less Than Half Completed

Chairman Victor J. Heard Requests All Committees Report To Date

Below is a report on the communities heard from in the War Chest Drive. Most of these are reports where the money was sent in direct and does not indicate that these communities have quit work.

Names are the Community, V-Chm. Quota and amount turned in.

Pletcher - E G Caldwell, $25 - $26.25
Thomas Jr. High - Mrs Aaron Dennis $40 - $41.76
New Cedron - Mrs J. F. Apperson, $4.50 - $4.50
Isabella - Howard Oden, $150. - 141.76
Pleasant Grove - Joe Hicks, $25 - 15.50
Cedar Grove - Mrs J. B. Parrish $40.00 - $13.45
Maplesville - Dr H. M. Nix, $700 - $10
Jemison - A C Wells and Peterson. $550.00 - $50.00
Lay Dam - Tommie Thompson, $200 $50.00
Mitchell Dam - Mrs Hollis and A G. Newton, $200 - $50.00
Clanton $3200.00 - $2544.24.
Total Collections to date - $2947.46.

In spite of the fact that we are far from our County Quota ($7067.89), this report is not as bad as it appears after analyzing the whole of the county set-up. There are yet 37 communities to be heard from.

However this report definitely shows that we can not slow down in this work, each community chairman will have to put on all pressure to see that his community reaches it's allotment. Unless this is done, we shall surely fail, and this must not happen.

We know the people of Chilton County love their county, they have pride in their community, they love the boys fighting for us, they want to help our boys who are so unfortunate to be war prisoners, they want to help all the sufferings of our allies' civilian population, where the hordes of Hitler's and Hiro Hito's barbarians have overrun their countries. let us give every one an opportunity to help in this cause. See everybody in your community personally, or get some one to see them for you.

We can reach our goal, only by work; do your part or have some one do it for you; don't give up, don't slow down, we must reach our allotment.—Victor J. Heard, Chairman Chilton County, Alabama War Chest, Inc.

NOVEMBER 15TH LAST DAY TO BUY NEW AUTO TAG WITHOUT PENALTY

Automobile owners are slow this year in getting around to the Probate Office to replace the old automobile plates with the new shiny yellow and black ones, which must be purchased before November 15th, to avoid penalty. Thought should be taken of the rush that will take place at the last moment and buyers should attend to this important matter at once.

ALL FOR NOTHING

A man came home in the small hours of the morning and, having a wholesome fear of his wife, decided to proceed with caution.

Taking off his shoes, he crept noiselessly upstairs, stealthily opened the bedroom door, and, with the greatest care, crawled into bed. With a sigh of relief, he went off to sleep.

In the morning he looked round for his wife, and suddenly remembered she had been staying with an aunt for the past two weeks.

Right?

Billy—Which apple do you want, Tom?

Tom—The biggest one.

Billy—You ought to be polite and take the little one.

Tom—Why should I lie just to be polite?

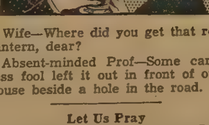
School Daze

Johnny—Don't you know Sir Cumference?

Jimmy—No. I never met him.

Johnny—That's funny. He gets around an awful lot!

DROP IN SOMETIME



Wife—Where did you get that red lantern, dear?

Absent-minded Prof—Some careless fool left it out in front of our house beside a hole in the road.

Let Us Pray

A Sunday School superintendent who was slightly overenthusiastic about regular attendance announced at assembly: "Out of our whole school this Sunday only one student is absent today—little Jimmy Crockett—let us pray he is ill!"

Friend-in-Law

Usher—Are you a friend of the groom, madam?

Lady (arriving at church) — I should say not! I'm the bride's mother!

SELLING POINT

He'd been standing in the town square for some time, trying to sell his wares without much success. But now he'd managed to collect a crowd, and started again with renewed hope.

"Now here's a comb for you!" he said hoarsely. "And what a comb! You can twist it, bend it, hit it with a hammer, and it won't break. You can—"

Then a tired voice came from the crowd:

"But can you comb your hair with it?"

No Improvement

Smith—Why don't you change the sign over your store by putting in your full first name. "Trade With A. Swindler" doesn't look very good.

A. Swindler—I figure that wouldn't be much improvement. You see my first name is Adam.

Please Don't!

Hypnotist—Now, ladies and gentlemen, I shall make this man forget everything.

Voice in the Back—Hold on, he owes me $5!

Politics Seen as Key in Farm Subsidy Problem

Acceptable Compromise Lacking; Presidential Veto Forecast for Any Bill Banning Use Of 'Economic Stimulant.'

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

The administration is in the midst of one of its fiercest contests to "hold the line" against stabilization. It is the old question of subsidies for farm products and it looks like a fight to the death. The house agriculture committee, with Representative Steagall and others swinging over to the Republican side, is backing the bill which would renew the appropriations for the Commodity Credit corporation and cut out the subsidies to processors, distributors and some direct cash aid to farmers. The present legislation expires in January. A presidential veto is taken for granted for any bill banning the use of subsidies. Administration supporters believe that such a veto can be sustained, but they see a tough, bitter fight ahead.

The key to the whole difficulty is violent partisanship. Successful politics is like successful living—in the family, in the community, in the world—it depends on the ability to compromise. In this fight, there seems to be no one able to work out an acceptable compromise. Already the feeling is bitter.

Cost of Living

Complicating the problem is, as usual, labor's insistence that the cost of living has gone up higher than statistics show, that the Little Steel formula is no longer a fair yardstick for wage increases since decisions of the War Labor board, plus insistence of the director of stabilization, hold down wages while the administration has not carried out its promises to roll back the living costs.

The farm organizations and the processors and the distributors oppose the roll-back. They don't put it that way. They say they oppose subsidies for rolling back consumer prices. They argue that subsidies to increase production and support prices in a free market are all right —and are horses of another color. The President sees no difference. Subsidies which permit the government to buy up commodities or make loans at a minimum price when the market price dips below that figure are all right, say the farm bloc, but, they claim, the "new" subsidies go further than that in that they mean payments direct to the processor and distributor and also buying and selling by the government. This, they claim, is in itself inflationary because it means payments out of the treasury. They say they don't believe that the money will get back to the farmer, that it means "grocery bills paid by the government," with very little real saving to the consumer, and finally, which is the real rub, it means too much government control.

Subsidies and Votes

Of course, there is the point that the politician doesn't like to mention —nobody who depends on votes wants to be in a position later on of having to remove those benefits. Another point, not stressed, is that subsidies to processors mean that the government has a right to look into the books of private industry.

But to the President, it is subsidies or inflation. At a recent press and radio conference, the President said that he got the head of the Farm Bureau federation, Edward O'Neil, to admit that letting prices go up in a free market, which the government says would have to be the alternative of the subsidy if the farmer was to get the incentive for increased production, would mean a little inflation. The President then told the story about the man who took just a "little" cocaine. He soon became an addict.

It was then that a woman reporter, known for her spicy questions, asked if the President didn't think that if his measure was carried we might become subsidy addicts. The President didn't seem to think so. He pointed out that agriculture has been getting subsidies since 1933.

Whether or not there is danger in any of this mild economic stimulant which the administration feels is a wartime necessity, everybody admits that runaway inflation must be avoided if possible. The whole complicated machinery of stabilization was created to prevent it.

The proponents of the subsidy plan say that the fight against them is purely political. They say the Republicans naturally take the side opposite to the administration because they can win some farm votes as champions of higher prices to farmers if they take this stand. On the other hand, they believe that the anti-subsidy bill will be vetoed eventually and the Democrats say the veto will be sustained. If so, the Republicans will not be criticized for supporting a measure which is defeated. And the Democratic support in the house agriculture committee, subsidy supporters say, was "bought" by allowing the present subsidies for the products grown in districts of the congressmen who supported the bill, to stand.

The administration followers say that it seems strange for the Republicans to raise a cry against subsidies when tariffs are subsidies. They mention the sugar "subsidy."

As for complaint that the subsidy on agricultural products would not reach the farmer, they call attention to the milk subsidies at present in operation where the man who milks the cow gets the subsidy direct.

Meanwhile, we know that the cost of living has already gone up. We know that we need full production of foodstuffs. We know that many farmers can't get the feed required to raise the stock or to fatten it to its most efficient weight for slaughter.

Payment of any money out by the treasury does mean more money in circulation but the subsidy proponents point to the kind of inflation we get when prices aren't controlled. The administration says it is better to control a few processors and distributors, even if Uncle Sam has to snoop into their books to see he isn't cheated, than to let that vicious spiral of prices and living costs start to mount.

In the next weeks you will hear a lot more of these arguments.

Food Contribution

The other day when I stepped into the broadcasting studio just as the Farm and Home Hour had ended, I found some cookies, some Brown Betty and a meat loaf sandwich waiting. These samples had been saved from a more elaborate layout of good things made with soy beans which had been the subject of the F & H broadcast.

I ate them with pleasure. Although the meat loaf was 25 per cent soy grits, it tasted exactly like meat to me. The cookies and the Brown Betty were excellent.

Soy flour and soy grits—the bread had some soy flour in it—are both on the market ready to contribute vitamins, mineral, protein, vim and vigor to our food, reducing the consumption of scarcer and more expensive products. A saving of from 20 to 25 per cent in meat and still having almost identical food values is nothing to be sneezed at.

Soy, it is pointed out, is not a substitute but a supplement to other foods and you would be surprised how many tasty dishes can be produced with it. The Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics has a handy little pamphlet containing recipes, and you can get one by writing to the bureau, care of the department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

There are recipes for mint loaf, chile con carne, suggestions for use of soy with vegetables when they are served as a main dish; soy in sauces and mixed with cereals to give a richer protein diet—many suggestions for making what you have go further and accomplish more.

A Letter

Frankly, when I get a letter that makes me real mad, I sometimes mention it on the air. I shouldn't ever do it, I suppose, because I usually get a flood of sympathy which perhaps I don't deserve but one of the best replies I ever had was from a man in Spearfish, S. D., who wrote to me as follows:

> "Each morning at 11 a. m. MWT, I tune you in. Now, I may be mistaken, yet it seems to me that at times you think some of the letters you receive are 'hitting below the belt' which has always been considered cowardly and unjustified. But in a great many cases, if we don't hit below the belt, we just make a total miss as it seems that some of the stuff that is put out for us to follow shows that there is NOTHING above the belt to hit at."

Nazi occupation authorities in Holland have even cut the Dutch horsemeat ration one-third. The weekly meat ration coupons, which used to be good for 150 grams of horsemeat, now are good for only 100 grams, or about two ounces, according to a report published in a German language daily in Holland. The cut means a great deal to the Dutch, whose living standards have lowered.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER
Ceylon, Africa and tropical America are expected to provide the U. S. with 54,000 long tons of crude rubber during 1943. In 1939, it is estimated, 499,473 long tons of crude were imported by this country.
Para, Brazil, was the first great rubber center. Founded in 1615, it became an important port for foreign trade about 1775. A hundred years later it was the rubber capital of the world.
Rubber obtained from a native wild vine in the Belgian Congo made Leopold II of Belgium wealthy during the 1890-1910 period. Plantation rubber development killed the Congo vine boom.

THIS bag was planned as a gift for someone who was finding days in bed difficult enough without having books, magazines and writing materials scattered about. If you like to take an assortment of reading matter to bed, sick or well, you will enjoy a bag like this. Its hanger hook may be sewed to box springs and there you are with everything handy.

The bag shown here was made of a remnant of heavy cotton upholstery materials in tones of green with a touch of red in the pattern. The red was repeated in the sateen lining. The sketch gives all the dimensions and shows how the lining and the outside part were made. A coat hanger was cut down to measure 12 inches from end to end and was placed between the lining and the outside; these being stitched together around the top, as illustrated.

SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

THE SANCTITY OF THE HOME

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:14; Matthew 5:27-30; Mark 10:2-12.

GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.—Matthew 5:8.

As the divinely appointed center of man's life, the home holds a place of such importance that it is the special target of Satan's offensive. That has always been true, but it seems that in recent years the onslaught against the home has been intensified.

Books, plays, movies, magazines, all contribute their filthy efforts to break down all sense of moral responsibility. Sex is magnified, and not in any useful or normal sense, but rather for the stimulating of unholy desires and purposes, the breaking down of Christian standards of living, and the ultimate prostitution of the most sacred of all human relationships to the lowest level of which animals might well be ashamed.

All this means that this lesson should be taught with a holy boldness and plainness which will make it effective for God in our homes.

We do not like to talk about adultery and related sins. We must speak with care and tact, but perhaps the time has come for some straightforward dealing with an unpleasant situation.

I. Protect the Purity of the Home (Exod. 20:14; Matt. 5:27-30).

Any violation of the divine plan for the marriage of one man and one woman, in loving communion for the founding and maintenance of the home, is a direct violation of the law of God.

It is also a violation of the law of man. It brings serious results in the destruction of the home, and in the ruin of individual life—physical, moral and spiritual.

The words of Jesus broaden the interpretation of the commandment to cover all sexual impurity in thought, word, or deed.

We are to be firm and definite in our dealing with this temptation to moral uncleanness even though it be as painful as tearing out an eye or losing a hand. The command here is not necessarily to be interpreted literally. Tearing out an eye will not help if there is lust in the heart. The point is, go to the root of the matter, and get rid of it even if it hurts. Most of us are far too easy on our sinful impulses. We dally with them when we should destroy them.

II. Recognize Marriage as a Divine Institution (Mark 10:2-8).

The Pharisees, who had devised some ingenious schemes for getting rid of an undesired wife, wanted to get Jesus involved in the question. They put him up against Moses who had allowed divorce.

Jesus made it clear that this was not in accord with God's plan and only took place because of their sinful hardheartedness.

As a proper background for the discussion of divorce He set up the divine origin of marriage. He made it clear that marriage was ordained by God, and that it involves a holy union of two individuals which makes them one.

All those who look forward to marriage should realize that it is not a casual thing, or a merely temporary legal contract. It is a union for life—be it for better or worse, in sickness or health, in prosperity or adversity. All who are married should highly regard their sacred vows.

The high place of marriage in Christian teaching dignifies that relationship and denies the misleading and destructive theories of men.

III. Follow God's Law on Divorce (Mark 10:9-12).

Failure to observe God's law in these matters may involve a person in the guilt of gross sin. This passage and others teach that divorce is to be permitted on the one ground of adultery (Matt. 5:32).

Divorce and remarriage other than on grounds permitted by God involves the parties in the sin of adultery. Men may make laws based on the civil contract of marriage which provide differently, but man cannot remove marriage from its place as a divine institution, nor can he add to or take away from God's law concerning it.

Aware, as we are, of the laxness of some branches of the church in such matters, and the almost entire lack of standards in the world, we cannot but present the plain teachings of our Lord and urge every reader to follow the commandment of God's Word.

There can be no question that divorce is a major evil in our day. Statistics are positively shocking, but they are cold and quickly forgotten. But who can fail to see, and who can forget, the awful woe brought into American home life by divorce.

Bad as it is, the awful effect on parents is nothing compared to the nervous, moral and spiritual shock which comes to children in broken homes. And that problem is everywhere.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS

by Lynn Chambers

A fragrant pot of coffee and a few tasty cookies can do the job of entertaining that a dinner once did if there's a spirit of friendliness and plenty of good conversation.

Keep Up Morale, Entertain Simply Even in Wartime

Even if all foods were rationed I'd still say, don't ration hospitality for we need friendly get-togethers, the refreshment and relaxation that being with one's friends gives.

Dinners or entertainments with stupendous foods are out of style at least for the present, but that doesn't mean you can't invite people over for a steaming cup of hot coffee and a few simple but tasty cookies. And, if you want to do things more elaborately, why, it's quite the thing to ask Mrs. Jones to bring over an extra supply of sugar or butter or canned goods if she has them—and is willing to share.

Some time ago progressive dinners were quite the fashion. Now again they can become fun. The plan is to serve, let's say three courses, and have each course at a separate home. It's a good idea to have the homes within short walking distance of each other. Serve soup or fruit cocktail at first home, the main course at the next home, and then have dessert and entertainment at the third home. Or, after dessert, the group can plan to go to a movie or concert or to attend some sport in season.

And now for the business of food—with a few points or none at all. Here are cake and cookie recipes which are the cream of the current crop:

Applesauce Cake.
(No icing needed!)
1 cup sugar
¼ cup shortening
1 cup applesauce
1 egg
1 teaspoon soda
2 tablespoons water
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup raisins
1¾ cups cake flour

Cream shortening and sugar. Add applesauce and well-beaten egg. Add soda dissolved in water. Sift dry ingredients and add to mixture. Fold in raisins and bake in a greased square pan in a moderate (350-degree) oven 1 hour.

Honey Oatmeal Wafers.
(Makes 16 wafers)
1 egg
⅓ cup honey
1 cup oatmeal
⅓ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons melted butter or margarine
¼ teaspoon vanilla
⅓ cup chopped nutmeats

Beat egg until light. Add honey, continuing to beat. Then fold in remaining ingredients. Drop by spoonfuls, about 2 inches apart on a greased baking sheet. Flatten slightly with a knife dipped in cold water. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven about 10 minutes or until a delicate brown.

A nice type of cookie to have on hand during these times is this one for old-fashioned gingersnaps. The recipe makes 10 to 12 dozen "snaps" and the dough keeps indefinitely in the refrigerator so that it can be used and made up into cookies as needed:

Gingersnaps.
(Makes 10 to 12 dozen)
1 cup molasses
½ cup shortening
3¼ cups sifted flour
1½ teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon soda
1 tablespoon ginger

Heat the molasses over low heat to the boiling point. Put the shortening in a large mixing bowl, pour the hot molasses over the shortening. Stir until shortening is melted. Sift the flour, ginger, soda and salt together and add to molasses mixture. Mix thoroughly. Form into rolls on slightly floured waxed paper and chill in refrigerator. Slice very thin and bake on a greased cookie sheet in a hot (425-degree) oven 8 to 10 minutes.

Having friends over for dinner? They'll enjoy this light souffle put together quickly and easily with mushroom soup and chicken.

Chocolate Pinwheels.
(Makes 3½ dozen)
1½ cups sifted flour
½ teaspoon double-acting baking powder
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or margarine
½ cup sugar
1 egg yolk, unbeaten
3 tablespoons milk
1 square unsweetened chocolate, melted

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift again.

Cream butter until light, add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg yolk and beat well. Add flour alternately with milk, mixing well after each addition. Divide dough into two parts. To one part, add chocolate and blend. Chill dough until firm enough to roll. Roll each half into a rectangular sheet, ⅛ inch thick, and place chocolate sheet on top. Then roll as for jelly roll. Chill overnight or until firm enough to slice. Cut into eight-inch slices. Bake on an ungreased baking sheet in hot oven (400 degrees) 5 minutes or until done.

A delicious souffle with a few piping hot biscuits and honey makes a lovely dinner for a chilly night. Simple though it is, it will satisfy your company well:

Thrifty Souffles.
(Serves 6)
3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
½ teaspoon salt
1 can mushroom soup
1 cup chopped chicken
3 egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon-colored
3 egg whites, beaten stiff

Combine tapioca, salt and mushroom soup, of consistency to serve, in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water and cook 8 to 10 minutes after water boils again, stirring frequently. Add chicken and stir until mixed. Cool slightly while beating eggs. Add egg yolks and mix well. Fold into egg whites. Turn into greased baking dish. Place in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate (250-degree) oven 50 minutes or until souffle is formed.

Lynn Says:

Hospitality Unrationed: Even if you're doing your entertaining in the kitchen you can do it up right! Use a gay checkered cloth as the background for your table, and a wooden chopping bowl as the centerpiece for fall flowers or highly polished fruits. Set candles in small squashes.

Have everyone help with the dishes after supper and then play old-fashioned games such as slogan contests, food favorites of famous people, food favorites of the family, scramble names of kitchen utensils and have guests unscramble them.

For children's parties, have Mother Goose theme. Children can come dressed as a Mother Goose character and for entertainment have the child read the rhyme he represents.

Large-Sized Vestee

THE older woman sometimes has difficulty in finding instructions to make a smart crocheted sleeveless vestee. This one was especially designed for sizes 38-40 and 42. It is comfortable, well-fitted and can be worn in the house in our winter heat-rationed rooms and is equally comfortable for out-of-door wear under a heavy coat. Make it of wool sport yarn in American Beauty, navy blue, brown or dark green.

Makes Statement In Reference To Race For Treasurer

I wish to say now. that some time ago, to be exact back in July, I stated in both our County Newspapers that I was thinking of running for the office of County Treasurer in the Democratic Primary election to be held next spring, and a short letter in connection with same

Since that time I have seen and heard from practically all over our County and our City here and have met with enough incouragement to say now, to all of the voters of our County, that I will be a candidate for this office at the proper time. You will all see my announcement in our County Newspapers. I want to say now to one and all of our voters that I have not already seen or heard from that I am making a personal appeal to you in this letter here that if you are not under any obligation to vote for someone else for this office, I will greatly appreciate your vote and influence. I would like to see you all in person before the Election but you know I will not be able to do this on rationed gas. As stated in my former letter, I realize that we have good and competent men and women in both parties and I am submitting my race to all of our people. I feel if there was ever a time when we should all pull together it is now. I do not care for any speechmaking, friction or mud slinging in the coming campaign and I will not have any on my part. I will probably let you all hear from me all along, if necessary, in a few short letters in our Newspapers.

If our people elect me to this office and I believe they will, as I have never held and office in our County, not withstanding, I was born and reared here and I expect to spend the remainder of my life here. I would like to serve my native county and my people that I esteem so highly, and that I have lived here with so long, for at least one term at their County Treasurer.

I hope to live long enough to see the day when prohibition will sweep over our country from coast to coast which in my opinion will ease more heartaches and bring more peace, satisfaction and real happiness to all of our country, than any one thing I know of, except the ending and wining of this war.

I don't want the Treasurer's Office to make it a side line but will give it my personal attention.

Now if elected to this office I am seeking and I have all assurance that I will be, I will feel greatly honored and in this connection I want to say I feel very keenly the great responsibility of the duties to be performed and if elected I will promise you one and all faithful service, first, last, and all the time.

Yours most truly,

—C. REESE MULLINS

Telephone Installations Affected by Wartime Conditions

Because of the shortage of raw materials, it becomes more difficult as the war progresses for the telephone company to fill requests for telephone service. So unless you qualify as an essential user—one who is essential in the discharge of responsibility for public health, welfare or security—you may experience difficulty in getting telephone service.

If you plan to request the installation of new service or if you now have service and plan to move, a reasonable time may be necessary to determine if service can be made available. For further information, please communicate with our business office.

There will be an Executive Board meeting of the WMU officers for 1944, at 3 o'clock, Friday, Nov., 12th at the Clanton First Baptist Church. All officers are urged to please be there as this is a most important meeting.

We are very glad to report that Marion Mims is home from the Hospital and doing nicely.

Mrs Steve Berry is visiting Mr and Mrs J. M. Bennett in Piedmont, this week.

Mr and Mrs Dusty Tatum and little son have moved to Birmingham where he has been transfered and will be connected with the Alabama Power Company there. We wish them lots of good luck and happiness in their new home and we wish to say that Clanton's loss is Birmingham's gain.

Mr and Mrs W. J. Billingsley had the happy privilege of spending last week end in Birmingham with their son and daughter, Mr and Mrs W. C. Billingsley, in their new home in Edgewood. Mrs W. C. Billingsley and Mrs W. J. Billingsley attended the District Meeting of the WMU at the First Baptist Church Friday and also heard Dr John L. Slaughter at the 11 o'clock hour Sunday. Saturday was Mrs Billingsley's birthday and even though it was her 62nd, she says it was the happiest that she has ever had.

Mrs Roswell Owens, Mrs Houston Nivens and Mrs Grady Heflin, attended the District WMU meeting in Birmingham last Friday and Clanton is very happy and honored in the fact that two of our local women were elected to offices of the 9th District. Mrs Heflin was elected Young Peoples Leader and Mrs Arthur Willis, was elected Secretary - Treasurer.

Flem Higgins of Howard College was home last week end for a visit with his mother.

Sgt James B. McCary had a furlough recently and came home for a visit with his family. Having arranged for an apartment before he left Camp Prickett, he was able to take Mrs McCary and little Jimmie back with him to live, as long as he is stationed there.

Mr and Mrs Clifford Jones are the prowd parents of a fine baby boy whom they have named Archie Clifford. Jr. He was born on Nov., 4th at the Central Alabama Hospital and weighed 8 and one-half pounds.

Mr and Mrs Walter Fleck are parents of a 10 lb baby girl. Born Nov, 2nd at Central Alabama Hospital and they have named her Julia Ann. Mrs Fleck and little Julia Ann went home Tuesday and are both doing fine.

Clanton is glad to hear that Rev. O. C. Lloyd will still be pastor of the Methodist Church for the next year. He and his family are an asset as well as an inspiration.

Mrs Huston Nivens, Mrs Roscoe Connell and Mrs Steve Berry spent last Wednesday in Birmingham.

Mrs Sam Cutwright of West Virginia is home for an indifinite visit

JOIN THE FARM BUREAU

BY DOING THIS YOU WILL Help Insure Fair Farm Price Protect Agriculture

Produce Food For Victory

Farm Bureau Membership Enlistment Is Scheduled For Week Of November 8th To 13th

WORKING WITH CONGRESS AND OTHERS INTERESTED IN AGRICULTURE, THE ORGANIZATION HAS WON MANY GREAT VICTORIES IN PROTECTING FARMERS' INTEREST IN RECENT LEGISLATIVE BATTLES.

Farm Bureau Record of Progress

SOME ACHIEVEMENTS IN 1941, 1942, AND 1943

1. Supported war program by cooperating fully and furnishing leadership in food for victory program, war bond and stamp sales, salvage campaign, civilian defense, and other war activities among farm people.

2. Supported successfully continuance of National Farm Program, includeing AAA and Commodity Credit Corporation.

3. Sponsored laws which place a floor under prices of farm products at not less than 90 per cent of parity price. Because of these laws the loan rate on cotton for 1943 is 9 cents per pound above that in 1940, price supports are in effect on peanuts at an average of around $140.00 per ton, on hogs at $13.75 per hundred, Chicago basis, and on many other farm products.

4. Worked continuously to get policies adopted to provide essentials for maximum production, including manpower, machinery, fertilizer. insecticides, and transportation facilities. Specific achievements include increase since this time last year in allocation of materials for producing machinery from 20 per cent to 80 per cent of the amount used in 1940, legislation and regulations under which farm workers were deferred from military service to produce food, and appropriation of funds to be used by Extension Service in recruiting and placing farm labor.

5. Advocated and helped secure provisions in Price Control Acts to assure farfers that price control power could not be used legally to force farm prices below fair or parity price levels.

6. Helped work out plan under which the poultry disease control work could be cntinued in Alabama.

7. Supported continuance of Tenant-purchase program under Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act and successfully advocated provision of law to stop perversion of this program by use of it as a cloak under which to carry on collective farming experiments.

8. Supported legislation establishing Agricultural Experiment Stations in the Piedmont and Upper Coastal Plains areas.

9. Advocated additional appropriations which resulted in doubling the amount of State funds available for agricultural reasearch work in Alabama to find out new facts about farming.

10. Helped secure appropriations to make possible an adequate program for the marketing of farm products.

11. Sponsored legislation to promote production of fish on farms for conservation, recreation, and additional income.

12. Supported passage of State farm-to-market road bill providing State aid in the construction of "farm-to-market" or "county roads."

13. Maintained in Washington and Montgomery at all times an efficient legislative research department to represent farmers and to fight for fair treatment for agriculture.

14. Represented farm people and spoke for Alabama agriculture.

Congress Has Passed Scores of Laws Taking Money out of the pockets Of Farmers And Putting It into The Pockets Of Other Groups. Industry And Labor And Others Got Such Laws By Organization And Making Themselves Heard In The Congress And Legislatures And Other Branches Of Government Where Policies Are Made

Farmers By Limited Organization Have Achieved Laws Which Give Them Some Protection On A Temporary Basis.

The Farm Bureau Will Give Farmers Parity With Other Groups. It Can Be Made A Continued Reality Only By A Strong Organization.

1,000 Members Is Chilton County's Goal For 1944.

Industry Is Organized! Labor Is Organized! Farmers Must Organize!

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Terrific Air Attacks Spur Allied Drive Against Nazis on Central Italian Front; Moscow Conference Offers Blueprint For Lasting Peace in Postwar World

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

An Allied transport is shown rumbling over pontoon bridge thrown up by American engineers across the Volturno river in Italy.

EUROPE:

Blast Communications

Roaring over France's once paradisaical Riviera, Flying Fortresses took pot-shots at communications lines shuttling troops between southern France and northern Italy. To the south, Allied medium bombers blasted harbors above Rome, which the Nazis have been using to relieve strained road and rail facilities.

As their heavy bombers smashed far back of German lines, Allied troops slowly drew up for their next assault on Nazi mountain positions in central Italy. As rain continued to fall in swirling sheets and muddied up the country, U. S., British and Canadian soldiers captured strategic heights for observing enemy action and took over important road junctions for shuttling supplies.

As the Allies edged forward, the Germans snuggled deeper into their new posts along the 2,500-foot high Massico ridge facing Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark's Fifth army on the west, and the rugged country confronting Gen. Bernard Montgomery's Eighth army to the east.

Italian King on Spot

Noted for his political tight-rope walking, King Victor Emmanuel of Italy now threads a very shaky line, with the new democratic forces in the country demanding his abdication.

Prince Vittorio

Led by former foreign minister and refugee Count Carlo Sforza, Italy's democratic elements have expressed approval for setting up King Victor's six-year-old grandson, Prince Vittorio Emmanuel, as the nominal monarch, with a regent like Marshal Badoglio to represent him until he comes of age.

Chief objection to King Victor is that he not only allowed Mussolini to come into power, but that he also supported him throughout his administration, renouncing him only when it appeared Italy would lose the war and the smart thing to do would be to jump onto the Allied bandwagon.

Removal of King Victor Emmanuel would sound the death knell of monarchy in Europe, since he is one of the last rulers with any actual governmental powers.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:

Last Step

Gen. Douglas MacArthur took the final step toward driving the Japanese from eastern Australasia with a massive attack designed to clear the enemy from the big air and sea base of Rabaul in New Britain.

Feeder point for Japanese forces in the Solomons and New Guinea, and nerve center for enemy resistance in the whole eastern Australasian area, Rabaul stood threatened as U. S. forces spilled over into the remaining Nipponese holdings in the Solomons, which flank the base and offer means for harassing any Allied force attempting to move against the big pivotal position.

Occupation of the Treasury Islands heralded MacArthur's drive in the Solomons to cut off Rabaul. Then, U. S. troops landed on the last two important Jap strongholds of Choiseul and Bougainville, with units of the enemy fleet and air force offering resistance.

ELECTION NEWS:

GOP Maintains Growth

Continued growth of Republican strength was evidenced in a smattering of important state and mayoralty elections.

In New York, GOP candidate Joe R. Hanley won the lieutenant-governorship from Democratic candidate Lieut. Gen. William N. Haskell by more than 340,000 votes of approximately 3,308,000 cast. Hanley's victory assured the GOP of control of the state if Governor Thomas Dewey should make the race for the presidency, since, as lieutenant-governor, Hanley would step in his shoes.

New Jersey's governor during World War I, Republican Walter E. Edge, returned to the political arena to win the office again during World War II by defeating Democrat Vincent J. Murphy by approximately 100,000 votes. Edge succeeds retiring Governor Charles Edison.

Republicans held their 62-year control of Philadelphia, with GOP Mayor Bernard Samuel besting Democrat and White House favorite William C. Bullitt by more than 64,000 votes.

FOUR POWERS:

Postwar Blueprint

From out of the conference of foreign ministers in Moscow was fashioned a four-power pact between the U. S., Great Britain, China and Russia pledging a finish fight with the Axis and this blue-print for the postwar world:

1. Establishment of an international organization of both large and small sovereign nations to maintain peace and security; 2. Before the establishment of such an organization, the four powers will act together to preserve order; 3. Regulation of the armaments of nations.

For Italy, the powers dedicated themselves to destroying Fascism and promoting democratic government. They refused to recognize Germany's annexation of Austria in 1938, telling that country its future treatment will be conditioned by its assistance in overthrowing Naziism within its borders.

The U. S., Great Britain and Russia planned creation of a committee to advise on political questions in countries reconquered by the Allies.

MINES:

Back in U. S. Hands

With the nation's coal pits back in U. S. hands, Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes conferred with United Mine Workers President John L. Lewis to end the walkout of almost 360,000 bituminous miners.

Having given the pits back to private ownership October 12 after having taken them over last July, Ickes found them in his lap again, following their seizure by President Roosevelt after the UMW began its walkout over failure of negotiations for a signed contract.

The big bone of contention lay in the War Labor board's refusal to ratify a new contract drawn between the UMW and Illinois Coal Operators, providing for an 8½ hour day, with compensation for underground travel time and a daily wage increase of $1.50. Instead the WLB recommended an 8½ hour day, with a daily pay boost of $1.12½.

To Ickes fell the task of reconciling the UMW and WLB differences, even as a danger of a coal shortage arose, with deliveries prohibited to anyone with 10 days' supply on hand, and sales limited to one ton to householders.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

ENEMY ALIENS: Since Pearl Harbor, 7,884 enemy aliens have been interned or paroled after a hearing, Attorney General Biddle reveals. That is more than half of the 14,738 persons seized as potentially dangerous. Biddle says that 3,771 aliens have been interned, of whom 1,853 are German, 1,798 Japanese, and 111 Italians. A few Hungarians and Rumanians are held.

GROUND GAINER: The Notre Dame football team is establishing a new mark for ground gaining. The average is now about 485 yards a game. The army team is close behind with 434 yards.

SLEEPERS: Soldiers will soon travel across country in new triple-deck sleeping cars, the Pullman company announces.

SUBSIDIES:

Asked by FDR

Declaring that government subsidies are comparatively cheap for (1) stimulating production of certain necessary and select crops; (2) preventing inflationary tendencies, and (3) encouraging sale of food through ordinary channels instead of black markets, President Roosevelt asked congressional approval for his food subsidy program.

By use of subsidies, the President said, food prices can be kept at lower levels than if processors, distributors and retailers were each permitted to mark up their margins. Failure to provide stabilization through subsidies, he said, would bring about justifiable demands for increased wages.

Use of subsidies to stabilize prices is presently costing the U. S. 800 million dollars a year, the President said. Of the sum, 450 million dollars is being used to maintain meat and butter prices by subsidizing the producer.

Mr. Roosevelt answered the demand for a food czar by asserting that the different duties of the War Food administration and Office of Price Administration made consolidation of the two bureaus impractical.

What People Are Doing

When Ensign George Swiggart Miles appeared for duty at the navy department in Washington, D. C., he reported to his mother, Lieut. Amy Brown Miles, in charge of officer personnel.

A gold prospector from Leadville, Colo., bewhiskered F. E. Gimlett, broke into a meeting of the house ways and means committee studying new taxation. "I want congress to put the WACs and WAVES back in the kitchen with pots and pans and babies," he stormed, before he was led from the room.

After calling every available non-father in LaPlata county, Colo., to service, draft board clerk John Craig put his name at the top of the induction list for fathers. Craig's job went to his wife, and no sooner was she sworn in, than she summoned him to report for induction. They have four children.

RUSSIA:

Surge Into Crimea

Taking no time to catch their breath, Russia's marching Red legions stormed into the Crimea, the great body of land off the southern Ukraine commanding the Black sea routes.

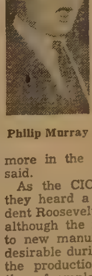
Lost to Russia after the fall of Sevastopol in 1942, the Nazis primarily have used its former luxurious resorts as health havens for wounded soldiers. When it fell to Germany, 200,000 Russians were killed or captured, and the exact number of Nazis remaining is unknown, since that depends on the proportion that could be evacuated while rearguards fought bitter delaying actions at Melitopol.

Farther to the north, German rearguards battled fiercely in the Krivoi Rog area to hold off the Russians while the Nazis withdrew from the great bend of the Dnieper river.

CIO:

5¼ Million Members

Growth of the CIO to over 5¼ million members increased the ranks of organized labor to over 12 million, what with AFL strength estimated in excess of seven million.



Philip Murray

Announcement of CIO membership was made by its president, Philip Murray, at the opening of the CIO's sixth constitutional convention in Philadelphia, Pa. To the 5¼ million members, the CIO will add two million more in the coming year, Murray said.

As the CIO delegates convened, they heard a message from President Roosevelt, in which he said that although the movement of workers to new manufacturing centers was desirable during the early phases of the production program, stabilization of employees at their present occupations was now essential.

TOKENS:

For Rationing

The tokens that will be substitutes for ration coupons for small purchases were described by the Office of Price Administration as being made of fiber, and between a nickel and a quarter in size. They are colored red or blue, with orange edges, it was said. Red tokens will be used for meat purchases, and blue for processed foods. The new system will go into effect in February.

Who's News This Week

By

Delos Wheeler Lovelace

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—Some years ago a few vice presidents were whooping it up in the General Electric company's camp in Ontario when one of the boys suggested serenading the president. So they toted their eyedropper piano close to the imperial tent and roared: "Hail, hail, the gang's all here," into Gerard Swope's ear. The piano player was Philip Dunham Reed who next day wrote his folks in Wisconsin his regret that he ever had taken a lesson. But everything came out all right. In a few years Swope was gone and Reed was chairman of the board.

Everything Seems To Come Out All Right With Reed

Now at 44, Reed is taking over the United States Mission for Economic Affairs in London as W. Averell Harriman moves on to our ambassadorial mansion in Moscow.

Reed figured first to be an engineer, studied at the University of Wisconsin, but he switched to law at Fordham and that came out all right. Soon he was earning $12,000 a year in New York. Although he had a wife, son and daughter, he boldly resigned to take $4,500 a year in the law department of General Electric, and that came out all right, too. It led to that chairmanship of the board. He resigned to work under Harriman whom he succeeds and nowadays he doesn't even worry about when to have his hair cut. His secretary tells him and he marches obediently to a barber.

Properly trimmed he is tall, with an air so handsome it is easy to believe he had a big part in a class play at Wisconsin along side Fred M. Bickel, known now on Broadway as Frederic March.

AMONG the waitresses in the most crowded service canteen in Washington is a slender matron with lively blue eyes and a dark curly bang who doesn't look her 46 years . . . not by quite a few of 'em. She will admit though, freely, that she has a son 21 years old, her only son, in West Point. Her husband has been overseas for 15 months. That's why she gives all the time she can to the canteen and to Red Cross work. It is Mrs. Ike Eisenhower speaking.

Ike Has Been Her Career Since She Was but Eighteen

She first met Ike when she was but 18. She was Maimie Doud, a doctor's daughter, of Denver, Colo. With her parents she visited an army camp in Texas. At the officers' mess, she met the future Allied commander in the Mediterranean area. He talked her out of a date she had in town, talked her into becoming engaged two months later. She's been seeing to it that his uniforms were pressed ever since, until June of last year at Fort Meyer, Va.

Pictures of him are found at every turn in the suburban Washington apartment where she waits for him to come home. The one on the piano came from North Africa. There is a complete scrap book of his doings, too. Their home used to be known as the Club Eisenhower. She is hospitable and friendly.

She strikes up friendships with butchers, bakers and neighbors, especially when . . . like herself . . . they are waiting for someone to come home. Her ancestors fought in the Civil and Revolutionary wars and she knows how their wives felt.

FOODSTUFFS in Britain are so well distributed that although quantities are far below normal, Britain is better fed than before the war, according to William Mabane, parliamentary secretary to the ministry of food. Under Lord Woolton, Mabane can certainly take part of the credit, and it doesn't seem strange to him that a bachelor like himself should do a good job with anything pertaining to food. He believes that men can outcook women every time, but that this is no reason why some women should cook so badly.

Here's a Bachelor Who's Done Good Job on Foodstuffs

Tall, thin, gray-blond and saturnine, Mabane has been an M.P. since 1931. His voice with its Yorkshire accent is often lifted on food topics. It was he who startled the treasury benches during a report on the point system of rationing by quoting Marie Lloyd "A Little of What you Fancy does you Good."

He was not nourished by a family of restaurateurs, but by the boot and shoe business, and took a fling at it himself after Cambridge university where he was distinguished as a runner. There seems to be some connection there.

In the First World war he fought his way up to a captaincy and was wounded. He tried social service; and in 1929 worked his way around the globe, visiting the United States which he has since revisited. He likes to travel, golf, ski and play "fox and geese" on a checkerboard. He likes to garden, too.

Robot Radio Operator

The lives of many torpedoed seamen may be saved by a new invention.

It is an automatic wireless transmitter. The ship's name and code mark are inscribed on a film, and the vessel's position is inserted on the film as often as conditions demand.

When a vessel is torpedoed or mined, the transmitter comes into action and continues to send out the ship's name as long as the ship remains afloat without the radio operator standing by. The inventor is Captain Espeseth, a Norwegian seaman.

When the soldier talks about "the skipper" he means his captain, the head of his company. And that's just what the title "captain" means. It comes from the Latin word "caput" meaning "head." Another leader high in the Army man's favor is Camel cigarettes—they're first choice with men in the Army. (Based on actual sales records from service men's own stores.) When you're sending gifts from home, keep in mind that a carton of cigarettes is always most welcome. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY O'HARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin can ride any horse on his family's Wyoming ranch, but he wants a colt of his own. His father, a retired army officer, refuses to give him one until his school grades improve and he learns to take responsibility. Ken's mother tries to protect him from the stern discipline of his father and the youthful bullying of his older brother, Howard, who always manages to do things right. Nell convinces her husband that the colt may be just what Ken needs, so in spite of the fact that he has not been promoted, Ken is to have a colt. But he is having a hard time choosing one.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER V

There were two miles of winding road with a fine hard-packed surface of reddish decomposed granite; then a sharp turn under the big sign that said GOOSE BAR RANCH, and out onto the Lincoln Highway.

"Dad," began Ken.

"Yes?"

"I hate the gelding."

"I do too, son, but it's got to be done."

Ken sat thinking about it. Especially about the race horses that were gelded and still were big and powerful, still ran races.

His spirits were rising. He felt that he was catching something of his father's attitude about it. He could even think back to what happened in the morning without sharp stinging feelings in the palms of his hands. All the same—"Dad, I've decided to take a filly instead of a horse colt."

McLaughlin laughed. "O.K. But don't take it too seriously, Ken."

Ken sat thinking about his colt. He had a week to choose. He would ride up to the Saddle Back every day, look over the yearlings—

"Something I want to say to you, Ken."

Ken looked up. The man-to-man way his father spoke to him made him feel they were almost friends.

"It's this, Ken.. I'm giving you a colt. Any colt you want. And yet, I'm not satisfied with the performance you've given this spring. You know that. Maybe you think it's funny I give you the colt when what you deserve—for flunking all your exams and pulling that stunt yesterday—is a good hiding."

Ken's face sobered, and he looked straight ahead.

McLaughlin continued. "I don't want you to think I'm letting you off. I'm not. I haven't gone soft—don't get that into your head. I expect just as much of you as I ever did. And this isn't any reward, because you haven't won a reward."

"What is it?"

"It's a partnership. I'm going to need the help of both of you boys, and you have to be trained so you'll know how to give it. You're going to train the yearling. I'll give you a little help just with the first breaking, but you'll train her, and she'll train you. I want you to make a good pony out of her. I want her to make a man out of you. Get me?"

"Yes, sir." Ken looked up with a wide smile lighting his face.

"But that's not all," said his father. "You've got other duties. You can give some time to your colt—not all your time. You've got two of these foals to halter-break—"

"Yes, sir."

"You've got to help exercise four horses for the Rodeo; run the gelded colts every day for half an hour for this whole week; help with all the ranch work the way you always do. I don't want to find you welching on work because you're off playing with your colt—"

"No, sir."

"This giving you the colt is a kind of bargain between us. I give you the colt, you give me more obedience, more efficiency, than you ever have in your life before. Is it a bargain?"

"Yes, sir."

McLaughlin slapped his hand on Ken's knee, and a flush colored the boy's cheeks.

As they arrived at Tie Siding, there drew up from the opposite direction a sample of the type of conveyance which is to be seen on every mile of the western highways. It was a Ford sedan, bulging and sagging like an old washerwoman. The top of it was piled with mattresses, chairs, tables, bedding. The rear end was festooned with bundles and boxes tied on with knotted lengths of clothes line; an old rusty stove, half covered by a bed quilt, was roped to one fender. Humanity of all ages packed it from floor to roof, and poured out when the door opened.

Mrs. Olsen, wife of the man who ran the combination Post Office and store, came hurrying out in her neat white pants and jacket.

"Hello," she said cheerfully.

She had a trim, close-cropped black head, a great deal of rouge on her cheeks and lips, and a quiet, efficient way of going about things.

"I'll take two gallons," said the tall, oldish man who had climbed out of the sedan, and he stood over Mrs. Olsen as she put the hose into the tank and the gas began to pour.

Others of the family scattered around both sides of the store to the rest rooms. Several of the children crossed the road to stand watching a pair of brown bears that were in a big cage of woven steel wire. Ken and his father got out of the car and went to the store, in which a number of men were making purchases or sitting about.

Other cars were stopping for gas, and Mrs. Olsen came running in and out to make change.

Old Reuben Dale, their neighbor on the west, asked, "Any sign of mountain lions on your ranch this summer, McLaughlin? I've lost two calves out of the pasture on my place down near your Castle Rock Meadow, and I've got a notion it's a lion. Bert heerd a cat scream the other night when he went out to bring the cows in."

"Cats," said McLaughlin slowly. "No. I haven't seen any. Haven't heard any either, but I think I'm short a colt—"

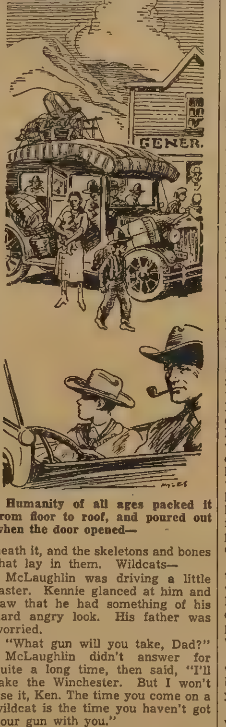
"They love horse meat," said Reuben, grinning.

As Ken and his father left the store with the mail and the yeast and tobacco and three lollipops and a peppermint patty for Nell, Ken looked up at his father. "What colt, Dad?"

McLaughlin didn't answer, and they got into the car. Ken asked again, "What colt are we short?"

"Rocket's. I think she had a foal. She hasn't got it now. Before I drive her out of the Stable Pasture, I'm going down to Castle Rock Meadow to take a look around."

Ken felt excited. He thought of the aspen grove, of Castle Rock, as big as a hotel, with all the caverns and passages and tunnels underneath it, and the skeletons and bones that lay in them. Wildcats—



Humanity of all ages packed it from floor to roof, and poured out when the door opened—

McLaughlin was driving a little faster. Kennie glanced at him and saw that he had something of his hard angry look. His father was worried.

"What gun will you take, Dad?"

McLaughlin didn't answer for quite a long time, then said, "I'll take the Winchester. But I won't use it, Ken. The time you come on a wildcat is the time you haven't got your gun with you."

The week that followed during which Ken was to choose his yearling was a busy one for everybody.

It rained every day out of one big purple cloud which drifted away at night, so that the mornings came in hot and clear, but by noon it was over the ranch again, and would start to rumble, then shiver and crack with lightning; then the downpour of rain, while the horizons all around were calm and blue, with fleecy white clouds motionless upon the hills.

Nell called it the Goose Bar sprinkling system. It brought out the strong, fresh colors of the flowers; dark salmon geraniums in the ultramarine blue window boxes, and red, pink, purple and white petunias in the flower border. The roofs of the buildings were red and clean, with no dust on them, and the grass as green as a billiard table.

The boys were riding Lady and Calico and Buck and Baldy, the horses that were being trained to rent for the Rodeo.

"When you're hunting for Rocket and looking over the yearlings and chasing the geldings you might as well be training these plugs," said McLaughlin.

"Which shall we ride?" asked Howard.

McLaughlin, stretched out in a chair on the terrace with his pipe just before supper, gave this careful thought. "Now, let's see. Lady's nervous and she runs away. Went over backwards with Tim last week. Baldy, stubborn brute, argues with you but he's always right. More sense than a man. Calico, a running fool. Never knows when to stop. Wears himself out. Howard, you take Calico, and don't forget for a moment that he hasn't got sense. He'll be in a lather over nothing. Too willing. His mouth's hard. Don't encourage him to lean on the bit. Hold him in but don't carry his head. Talk to him a lot. He'll quiet down for the voice better than anything else. Ken, you take Lady. I'm giving her to you because most of the time you don't know where you are. You sit like a sack of meal, almost forget to hold the reins—she'll not know you're on her back. I've noticed when you're on her, she's never gathered. Goes about as if she was grazing. It's a good thing. Good for that mare, anyway. Eases her down. But watch out for her running away. Just don't let her get going too fast. When she does, it suddenly comes to her that she'll take the bit and run away; kind of goes to her head. I want to break her of that habit this summer. She's a fine horse."

"I'll help with Lady too," said Nell. "She always behaves well with me. I love to ride her. We understand each other."

"O.K. As a matter of fact, you could ride any of them, and it would be a good thing to change about. Any of you could ride Buck and Baldy. No use telling you what to do with Baldy, he'll do what he pleases, but it'll usually be the right thing. He won't object to orders unless they're unreasonable. And Buck needs a lot of suppling and he's not as bridle-wise as he should be. Take them down into the practice field and do figure eights on them for an hour every other day. Just get them a bit quicker at answering the aids; more up and coming. Practice starts on the trot and the canter. Use saddles. Groom them before and after. Now remember, boys, this will be a daily duty for you, don't forget it, or neglect it, and I don't want to have to watch you or bother about it. You can keep the four of them in the Calf Pasture, they'll be handy to get at and won't get mixed with the other horses. Give them all the riding you can."

A Colorado buyer, Joe Williams, came to see if McLaughlin had any horses to sell. He came once or twice every year, collecting horses that he afterwards sold at the local auctions; but the prices he offered were so low that his appearance at the ranch was always the signal for Rob McLaughlin to lose his temper.

Williams offered thirty-five or forty dollars for an old brood mare with her spring colt; twenty or thirty for an old gelding broke for saddle and work provided his teeth were good enough to keep him in flesh; but as he paid cash down, and the only other way of getting anything at all for horses that were not fit for good markets was to ship them to the glue factory in a carload of old plugs and wild broncs dragged in off the range, McLaughlin, after hours of argument, loud words and insults, usually made a deal with him. Nell always urged him to. "After all," she said, "they're only getting older, and it's hard to keep them in condition, and he can get eight or ten of them into his truck, and even at his prices, that means a couple of hundred dollars."

On this occasion McLaughlin said that he'd get in some horses that were useless to him from his outlying pastures, and they'd make a deal; and Williams drove away, promising to be back inside of a week with his truck.

The really big event of the week was that McLaughlin engaged a bronco-buster to break the three-year-olds.

Ken saw the man first when they were coming down from the stables just before supper one evening, and the bronco-buster was standing on the Green talking to Nell.

He was very small and neat. His legs were thin and bowed in tight blue jeans that were rubbed to light blue inside the thighs and on the seat. His waist was not much larger than Ken's and was belted snug. His small face was bright red and blank-looking. His blue eyes were so direct they made other eyes seem shifty.

Nell introduced him, just saying that this was Ross Buckley who was going to ride in the Rodeo and had a couple of weeks of free time right now, waiting for the Rodeo, and thought he would put it in breaking some horses.

"I heerd you-all had some hot-bloods up here," said Ross in a pleasant, drawling voice. "Thought I'd like to have a try at 'em, if you've got any that need breaking."

Nell said, "Come on, Howard and Ken—time to clean up for supper," and walked away with the boys, leaving McLaughlin there talking to Ross.

Ross had arrived in a Ford sedan piled to the roof with saddles and bridles and blankets and lariats, and when Nell had talked to him and found out what he wanted, she kept him there until McLaughlin came down from the stables.

McLaughlin engaged him, and took him up to the bunk house and introduced him to Gus and Tim, and every day since he had been working in the corral at the broncs.

And in addition to all this, hours had been spent every day, looking for Rocket; but no one had seen hide nor hair of her.

Ken had not yet been able to decide on his colt.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

TIME was when an actor was likely to lose his public if he stayed off the screen for even a short time. Some can't risk it now. Alan Ladd doesn't belong in that class—a large part of the public is remaining faithful to him while he's off serving his country, and refusing to put anyone else in their idol's place. He worked hard for his success—had years of encouragement but few good roles, and put in time working in radio before he got a good role in "Joan of Paris." Then he tested for "This Gun for Hire," and when Paramount executives saw his test they didn't bother about testing anyone else. His success in that role was like Marlene Dietrich's in "Morocco"—instantaneous.

Gary Moore, who co-stars with Jimmy Durante over both CBS and NBC, will make his picture debut under David Selznick's sponsorship, and will be developed as "a sort of combination of Fred Allen and Bob Hope"—which should be something! It'll be Allen on writing ability and Hope from the slant of his delivery.

Howard Petrie, announcer of the Moore-Durante air show, had both Paramount and RKO after him with a long-term acting contract. He stands six feet four and weighs 240 pounds—right up with Paramount's Bill Edwards, of "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay."

Hildegarde, the new radio star who has the "Beat the Band" show on Wednesday evenings, introduced a song called "She's Got Bars on Her Shoulders and Stars in Her Eyes"; the WACs couldn't resist the title so adopted the ditty for their official recruiting song.

Pompeii's emergence into front-page importance because of the fighting around Naples inspired RKO to reissue its spectacular "The Last Days of Pompeii," originally released in 1935; its cast includes Alan Hale, Basil Rathbone, and Louis Calhern.

Dick Haymes' first tests at 20th Century-Fox turned out so well that his part in "Four Jills and a Jeep," with Carole Landis, was made bigger and bigger. Meanwhile, his radio sponsor pays for the lad's popularity. Half the program comes from New York, with a full orchestra, chorus, and Jim Ameche featured—another orchestra and chorus goes on in Hollywood, accompanying Haymes' songs.

Flossie Flynn, head of Loew's Telephone Information Service in New York, says that recently her office has been swamped by inquiries about Metro's two-reel short, "Heavenly Music," a tale of a jive musician who can't get into heaven until he convinces a jury of famous composers that swing is real music—says she gets more calls asking where it's playing than she does on feature productions.

It's taken 14 years for Hollywood to get around to remaking "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," done in 1929 as a silent. Benedict Bogeaus, a business man who bought Hollywood's General Service Studios a year and a half ago, bought the screen rights and put Rowland V. Lee in as director—and now the picture's timed right to coincide with the work of the Committee on Inter-American Affairs.

The Ellery Queen cast likes to be heard above the incidental music of the organ, except when guest detectives turn up early, during the dress rehearsal—then, when the crime's solution is given, the organ fairly roars, drowning out all voices.

TO YOUR Good Health

by DR. JAMES W. BARTON

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THYROID EXTRACT

When an individual is nervous, jumpy, overactive mentally and physically, heart rapid, the physician usually advises a metabolism test which shows the rate at which the body processes are working. In a case such as the above, the test will usually show that the body processes of this individual are working 15 per cent or more faster than normal. And the cause of this speeding up process is an overactive thyroid gland. The treatment is rest and iodine and if necessary removal of the thyroid gland by surgery or X-rays.

Dr. Barton

On the other hand, where the individual is sluggish mentally and physically, is overweight, and skin shiny, the metabolism test will usually show that the body processes are working at a rate of 15 per cent or more below normal. The cause is an underactive thyroid gland and these patients are given thyroid extract daily to bring the rate at which the body processes work up to normal.

The above symptoms of the overactive and underactive thyroid gland describe what should be called advanced cases. What about cases where the symptoms are not so pronounced?

In the slightly overactive cases, rest of body and mind is needed, and in the slightly underactive cases some stimulation of mind and body is needed.

Physicians have been finding many children in whom nose and throat infections, and also intestine disturbances and infections occur so often that they suspect some underlying condition of the body as being the cause. Dr. M. H. Stiles in "Archives of Pediatrics" (children's diseases) states that because some children were having distension of the abdomen and other symptoms pointing to a lack of thyroid juice in the body, studies of the basal metabolism were made in a group of 30 children and teen-age boys and girls, in whom there were persistent colds, bronchitis and inflammation of ears and of stomach and intestine. Of the 30 children studied, 90 per cent had basal rates below zero or less, and 60 per cent had rates of minus 10 or less, and for the whole group, the average rate was minus 11.

Of the 30 patients studied, 18 were given thyroid extract. Of these 18, there were 15 who showed great improvement, and only three were not improved. Where, then, these symptoms keep occurring, the metabolism test might well be given.

Excess Fluid in Body Puts Strain on Heart

When the heart is beginning to fail, the first symptom noted is shortness of breath after exertion, and especially after eating. Palpitation—hard beating of the heart—is another early symptom of a failing heart. Even lying down does not ease the shortness of breath or quiet down the palpitation for some minutes.

Another symptom to appear in early heart failure is swelling of the ankles or of the other parts, especially the liver.

The first thought in the treatment of early heart failure is to reduce the amount of work done by the heart by resting more, strengthening the power of the heart muscle yet quieting it if necessary. The drug used to strengthen the power of the heart is digitalis which not only slows, steadies and strengthens the heart action, but helps to drive the water from the tissues. The work of the heart is greatly reduced by reducing the amount of water in the tissues.

In Southern Medicine and Surgery, Dr. J. B. McLester, Birmingham, the noted food and nutrition authority, makes the following suggestions in the treatment of heart patients.

"Weigh the patient every day; increase in weight is the first sign of excess fluid in the tissues. The increase in weight occurs several days before the appearance of liquid—swelling—in the ankles and other tissues. If the swelling (edema) is present or if the weight increases, have the patient stop using salt in his food and rest as much as possible." Excess water in the tissues must be removed by use of ammonium chloride, in 15 gram doses, three times daily for three days, if the low salt diet fails to remove it.

Here's Word from Bill!

". . . and tell my old gang down at the Telephone Company that I'm thinking of them. I see tons of telephone materials every day over here—in the form of tanks, shells and field communications equipment. We need a steady stream of these supplies to win—and being a telephone man, I know that telephone lines have to carry many calls affecting production and transportation of fighting equipment. So I hope you homefolks are helping to keep the wires clear, for war calls which MUST go through. Love,

BILL"

Fellows like Bill Jones—on the fighting front—know what they're talking about when they say that Victory depends upon an unceasing flow of supplies. And at home, those directing the war effort rely on the telephone to keep munitions and men moving forward.

These urgent calls pass through the same local telephone equipment you use. Yet facilities can't be expanded to meet demands fully, because the necessary materials are being made into planes, tanks and guns.

By avoiding unnecessary local calls—and by speaking briefly whenever you talk—you help relieve crowded lines and switchboards for war duty. In that way you help speed vital war calls.

NO ARMISTICE TODAY

TWENTY-FIVE years ago this world went wild with joy. The world cried "Peace". But there was no peace. There was only a truce.

This time there must be no truce. This time we are grimly determined to see the job through. We will make whatever sacrifice is necessary. We won't let it happen again.

Armistice Day this year marks the beginning of a new call upon our patriotism. A call directed especially to the people of this community.

One of the gravest threats to our all-out war effort is a shortage of pulpwood. We who live in the pulpwood-cutting areas are asked to make good that shortage. We will be paid for our wood, of course. But we are asked to do it as our special part in the war—backing up our own boys in the service.

In whose honor will you cut your cord? A son? A brother? A friend?

Give us his name, and yours, so that both may be entered on the roll of honor. No boy shall die because we failed.

A LETTER FROM Ch'm. J. C. Pattillo

Our War Bond quota for the month of November is $31,600.00 and it ap- pears that sales are quite small in proportion to the amount to be raised Does this indicate that we are relax- ing or that we are forgetting that this terrible war is still on, that it is still possible that we should lose it? Hitler in his recent speech screamed: We will not stop fighting at a quart- er to twelve but will fight on to five minutes past twelve. What did he mean by this and what does it mean to us? I think it means that this war is a war to the death of one side or the other and the side that stops fighting first will be the one that dies.

All of the war news is encouraging to our side but if this good news makes us slacken our effort and stop anywhere—and the home front is as much a fighting front as the real bat- tle front—we will be taking a great risk of losing that last battle of five minutes past twelve.

We did fine in our third war loan and have been making a great show- ing in all of our former quotas but that counts only for past needs, that money has gone into the fighting of the past, the fighting is still going on and will go on to that last battle at five minutes past twelve. Therefore. let me urge in the name of our gallant boys at the front, that we at home keep on with that steady flow of sup- port that will insure the winning of tthalast battle. Let our cry ever be, ON TO VICTORY, and that means, keep buying War Bonds and Stamps·

Sincerely,
J. C. Pattillo,

LT. COMMANDER CALLOWAY COMMENDED FOR WORK UNDER ENEMY FIRE

The Commander in charge sends the story of the Japanese attack, last Sunday, on the Navy Hospital at Bouganville Island. One of the many emergency hospitals set up to care for the wounded during battle. In his story he highly commended his sur- geons who were operating at the time of the attack, on their successful at- temp to save the lives of the 50 pa- tients they had at that time. Not one of the injured died in the confusion and several required delicate brain surgery, before they could be moved·

The Commander stated, "Although our operations were performed under small battery powered lights, I can't pay enough tribute to my men who did all the work."

Heading the list of surgeons who were named was Lt. Commander R. R. Calloway, son of Mrs L. A· Calloway, of Clanton.

November is Xmas Mailing Month

Delivery of the annual flood of Christmas gifts and cards on time, al- ways a serious problem, will be more than a problem this year—it will be an impossibility — unless Christmas mailings are made largely in Novem- ber. Postmaster General Frank C. Walker warned today.

Transportation facilities are bur- dened to the limit with war materials and personel, and the Postal Service has sent more than thirty-one thou- sand experienced employees into the Army and Navy, according to Mr Walker. The only solution to the Christmas problem is: MAIL IN NO- VEMBER· Mark your parcels, "DO NOT OPEN UNTIL CHRISTMAS" That is the only way to avoid disap- pointment on Christmas Day not only for many civilians but also for millions of members of the armed forces who are still in this country.

It is also the only way to avoid the possibility of a Christmas emergency in the transportation and postal ser- vices. If the public will cooperate by mailing their Christmas parcels dur- ing November, we can handle a small volume of light, last-minute mailings, such as cards, up to December 10—but we can do that and avoid emergency only if November is really Christmas mailing month.

Postal officials pointed out that the volume of mail now is far above any previous records, that railway cars by the hundreds have been di- verted to war service and that the air lines have only about half as many planes as they once operated

More than two hundred thousand extra temporary employees will be largely women and high school boys and girls who are unable to work the long hours usually required and whose work will be relatively slow.

To deliver the Christmas mails on time, therefore, it is necessary that mailings be spread out over a longer period so that available transporta- tion equipment and postal personnel can be used during more weeks· It will be utterly impossible to make the deliveries by Christmas if mailers wait until the last three weeks before the holiday, as in normal years.

There is another reason for shop- ping and mailing earlier than ever before. Retail stores are short hand- ed. Purchasers can avoid shopping in crowded stores, long waits for ser- vice, and other inconveniences of late shopping if they buy now. They will also doubtless have a better choice of merchandise than will be available later·

Postmaster General Walker obser- ved that his warning is not an attempt to tell the public what to do; it is only an advance notification of what will happen if they mail late. He feel that the public is entitled to the facts, and that when they know them, they will decide to MAIL IN NOVEMBER

FIRST LT. H· N. DENT, JR. "KILLED IN ACTION"

First Lt. Hampton N. Dent, Jr. age 24, and whose home was in St Mat- thews, S. C·, was killed in action on October 24th. His wife, Doris Newell Dent, received the message Saturday, Nov. 13th.

STATE SUPERINTENDENTS ARE WARNED AGAINST DANGEROUS ANTIFREEZE

The State Department of Educa- tion has warned all county schools superintendents against "harmful and destructive" antifreeze, of which more than one-half million gallons had been shipped into Southern States prior to stopping production of the dangerous compounds last Jan. 20th, according to Dr A. R. Meadows of he Department of Education.

This action was taken, according o Dr. Meadows, on basis of informa- ion received from the Office of De- fense Transportation. "At least four of the dangerous compounds have been found in Alabama" Dr Meadows said. "Others may have been shipped into the State. School officials were advised to get in touch with the ODT district office or advisory committee if unable to secure satisfactory anti- freeze. Last year, a number of motor blocks were ruined, due to freezing of he cooling liquid and to improper are of the cooling system."

NEWS FROM

PATES CHAPEL

Well it seems that Mr Cool weath- er visited us enough last week for several to think it was good old hog killing time, as many were killed. And nearly everybody is gathering corn, too, but, was glad to get some rain hoping it will cause many wells that are real low to furnish more water·

There were no church services Sunday morning or Sunday night, be- cause of the rain but was a good ser- vice Saturday night. As you will no- tice there is a small change in our service. In place of Sunday School and preaching the first Sunday morn- ing and BYPU and preaching Sun- day night, Bro Nix will preach Sat- urday night at 6:30 o'clock, Sunday School Sunday morning at 10:30 Preaching and BYPU at 2:30 Sunday afternoon in place of Sunday night It will not be changed the Fourth Sunday. Preaching and Sunday school at 10:30 and BYPU and preaching Sunday night at 6:30. This change was for the convenience of Bro. Nix· to serve his other churches. So let everybody come to Church and Sun- day School and BYPU and build them up more. We are sorry that sick ness is keeping some away· The ones who are not sick should come to ser- vices. Where there's a will, there's a way.

We are glad to know that some of the Soldiers are home on furlough. Erastus Cleckler is home for a few days· Also Clarence Robinson after 20 months in the Army. Othel Baker who is from a Camp in Oklahoma was a visitor in our Comunity.

Mrs Earl Hayes and daughter was the week end guests of her parents. Mr and Mrs Jimmie Franklin.

Miss Cathrine Maddox guests for the week end was Misses Marie Hayes and Leona Dawson·

Mrs Nealie Pate is visiting her daughter for a few days, Mrs Barble Price.

We are glad to know those on the sick list are inproving: Mrs Pearl Cleckler; Miss Louise Patterson, are both improving.

We are sorry to report that Mr Jack Pate's little boy broke his leg again.

Miss Sarah Ray is doing just fine although confined to her bed for sev- eral weeks with a broken leg and hip

Mrs Martha Gibson, who was op- erated on several weeks ago, made a trip back to the hospital Saturday for an examination, and returned She is doing fine. Mrs Pearl Gibson and Cathrine Maddox accompanied her on the trip.

We are hoping that everybody will go to services some where each Sun- day, and do dearly hope that the ones on our sick list will soon be up

Condensary Now In Operation At Thorsby

The condensary at Thorsby, Ala- bama, recently opened by the Fore- most Dairies, has been in operation three weeks and is receiving milk from 92 local farmers. The milk is a very high Jersey, butterfat tests rang- ing between 4·5 to 6.2 percent fat.

Since opening the condensary, the government has offered a subsidy of 40 cents a hundred, which will net a farmer 80 cents a pound for his but- terfat. Four haulings are now in op- eration, and four additional hauling routes are being organized.

It is planned to reach the 5,000 lb., daily milk receipts by the first of the year, and 20,000 pounds during the flush season next spring. The cow program for securing additional cows is now in operation, and the Foremost Dairies is assisting producers in se- curing high grade milk cows. It is planned to bring in 500 producing cows from nearby counties, Mississip- pi, and Georgia cattle sections on an installment plan to be paid out of milk checks· The milk checks receiv- ed by producers are running from 23c to 30c per gallon, according to the test. Money, formerly sent to Wis- consin and Michigan for condensed milk and butter, and butterfat amount ing to several thousand dollars a year will now be diverted into the dairy industry in Chilton county and ad- joining counties.

IN MEMORY

In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Chester Ottis Williams, who passed away one year ago last week. Our darling boy is gone. His voice is hushed and still, A place is vacant in our home that never can be filled. We have missed you oh so much since your place is empty here with us. We loved you then: we love you yet. Your loving deeds we'll nev- er forget. To us you were so very dear and your presence seems so near. Forget you? Dear we never will, all we can say "It was God's Will." Lov- ing and kind in all his ways. Upright an just to the end of his days. Sincere and true in his heart and mind. Beau- tiful memories he left behind.—Mr and Mrs W. D. Williams and family.

Mrs A. N· Minor is attending the State Baptist Convention in Mont- gomery, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, as a representative from Clanton Baptist Church. While there she will also visit her children, Capt. and Mrs L. W. Street·

Miss Bernice Lowe of the Universi- ty spent the week end at home. Shs brought a class mate. Louise Inzer as her guest.

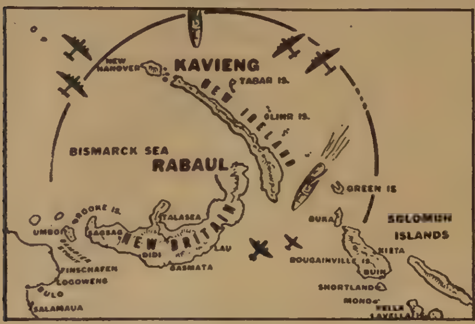
Huge production of 1943 required about 21,600,000 man hours of labor— 41 percent for major crops; 31 per- cent for major livestock; and 28 per cent for other crops and livestock and farm maintenance.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Allied Drive Through Italy Is Slowed By Hard Fighting and Stout Defenses; U. S. Campaign for Rabaul Threatens Entire Jap Southwest Pacific Position

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.



Attention in the South Pacific is focused on the great Jap naval base of Rabaul on New Britain island, which U. S. air forces have pounded from New Guinea on the west and the Solomons on the east.

ITALY:

Fight for Main Road

With their artillery commanding the mountain heights, German troops fought doggedly to seal off a pass leading into the long, level corridor to Rome.

Complicating the Fifth army's task to break through, was steady rain, which muddied the country. A succession of German counterattacks were designed to disturb U. S. and British groupings for concentrated assaults against Nazi positions.

To the east, the British Eighth army picked its way slowly over the mountainous central sector, with strong German armored formations holding it off on the flat coastal stretches of the Adriatic.

Shipping Gains

As a result of Italy's surrender, the Allies have come into control of 170,000 tons of merchant shipping and 149 warships, besides many smaller craft.

Adding to this trip-hammer blow against the Axis sea strength, was the destruction of 527,000 tons of enemy shipping in the Mediterranean, mostly by submarines.

While the enemy was being lambasted, 22,526,485 tons of Allied merchant shipping reached North African ports, including Casablanca. Losses in action totaled 1½ per cent of the total tonnage.

AGRICULTURE:

Less Cotton

On the basis of conditions prevailing November 1, the department of agriculture estimated a 1943 cotton crop of 11,442,000 bales of 500 pounds each, compared with 12,824,000 bales last year, and a 10-year average of 12,474,000 bales.

Yield per acre was set at 253.4 pounds of lint cotton. The average last year was 272.5 pounds, and for 10 years, 217.0 pounds.

For Texas the 1943 crop was estimated at 2,825,000 bales; Mississippi, 1,320,000; Arkansas, 1,090,000; Alabama, 950,000; Georgia, 845,000; Louisiana, 745,000; South Carolina, 700,000; North Carolina, 610,000; Tennessee, 500,000; Oklahoma, 375,000; California, 360,000; Missouri, 305,000; Arizona, 141,000; New Mexico, 116,000; Virginia, 25,000; and Florida, 16,000.

U. S. Fat Supplies

About 44 pounds of fats and oils will be available for civilians during the next year, compared with 47 pounds in 1943, the War Food administration announced in revealing that total U. S. needs will approximate 11,700,000,000 pounds.

Of this vast amount, the U. S. will produce 11,300,000,000 pounds, or 90 per cent of the total, and 1,100,000,000 pounds will be imported.

Of the 8,000,000,000 pounds allocated for food, civilians will get 70 per cent of the supply, while the army will receive 9 per cent. The remaining 21 per cent will be divided between exports, lend-lease and requirements for feeding liberated countries.

Industrial users will be allotted 3,600,000,000 pounds, with 2,100,000,000 pounds going into soap and glycerine production. About 600,000,000 pounds will be allocated for civilian and military paints, varnishes, linoleums, oil-cloth and other coated fabrics. The remainder will be used for lubricants, printing inks, leather and textile processing.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:

Focal Point

Two years ago Johnny Doughboy never heard of Rabaul.

Today, this great port on New Britain island is the focal point of the U. S. drive in the Southwest Pacific, with hundreds of bombers soaring over it to dump tons of explosives on the ships lying in its waters and the planes parked on its many airdromes.

With Rabaul lost, the Japs might as well pull up their stakes in the area to the northeast of Australia. Today, not only does it block any general move the U. S. might make northward to the Philippines and Japan, but it also acts as feeder point for barges supplying New Guinea and the Solomons.

Using such barges which can carry from 35 to 150 troops, the Japs reinforced their embattled forces on Bougainville island, their last stronghold in the Solomons from which U. S. Doughboys fought to expel them.

HITLER:

'Fight to Finish'

Adolf Hitler

Declaring that "the last battle will bring the decision, and it will be won by the people with the greatest persistency," Adolf Hitler broadcast to the world Germany's resolution never to give in at the 11th hour.

But speaking in London one day later, Prime Minister Winston Churchill said Germany was doomed to defeat in 1944, in a campaign that will be the most severe and costly in life experienced by the Allies.

In 1918, Hitler said: "Germany's final collapse was due less to force of arms than to destructive propaganda . . . The people were simple . . . The leaders were weaklings . . ." Claiming that Nazi war production had risen despite persistent bombings, Hitler said civilians suffered most from Allied air raids, but vengeance would be wreaked on England. ". . . We cannot reach America . . ." he said.

Because of their disturbing effect on enemy morale, Allied bombings are one of the prime forces against Hitler's regime, Churchill said. "The back of the U-boat campaign has been broken," he asserted.

WORLD RELIEF:

Planned by Allies

To rebuild shattered Europe after the war and relieve the privations of its people, 44 United Nations signed an agreement establishing an organization to conduct the work.

Supplies needed for the undertaking will be contributed by participating nations, and of the 46 million tons of food, seed, fuel, clothing, raw materials, machinery and medical items that will be required during the first six months after the war, the U. S. will furnish 9½ million tons.

Money required for U. S. participation must be appropriated by congress. Plans call for putting the distressed people back on their feet, then gradually withdrawing support as they restore their own economy to the prewar levels.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

PEACE SCARE: Stocks, bonds and commodities broke on rumors of peace with Germany. Shares on the New York market fell from one to ten points before rallying. Low grade bonds dropped sharply. Wheat went down two cents a bushel, wool two to three cents, cotton $1.35 a bale. Two billion dollars of "paper valuation" were lost in the sharp decline.

POST OFFICE: Revenues of the postal department have passed the one billion dollars a year mark for the first time in history. For the 12 months ending September 30, total income was $1,006,000,000, Postmaster General Walker reveals. Expenditures totaled $994,000,000, leaving a surplus of $12,000,000. The period is neither a regular fiscal nor a calendar year.

LABOR:

Lewis Sets Example

John L. Lewis' success in obtaining a daily wage increase of $1.50 for his United Mine Workers seemingly has shaken other labor leaders from their reluctant compliance with the administration's "Little Steel Formula" for holding pay boosts to within 15 per cent of 1941 levels.

Representing 900,000 members, the executive committee of the CIO's United Steel Workers decided to demand higher wages, with the exact extent yet to be determined. It was in awarding the steel workers a raise of 44 cents daily two years ago, that the War Labor board developed its hotly contested wage formula.

While the steel workers made their move, spokesmen for 1,100,000 non-operating railroad union employees rejected the government's offer of graduated pay increases ranging from 10 cents an hour for all wages less than 47 cents an hour, to 4 cents an hour for wages of 97 cents and over per hour.

Oppose Workers' Draft

Solution of manpower shortages in different areas through co-operative efforts of labor-management-agriculture committees instead of draft legislation, was recommended by union, business and farm leaders in a special report to War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt.

To get community programs operating, it was recommended: 1. There be surveys of manpower supplies; 2. Determination of local urgency for products and services; 3. Surveys of needs of employers; 4. Controlled flow of available manpower to shortage areas.

The report stated that large numbers of workers have yet to be transferred to essential industry. Longer working hours in some instances, and increased recruitment of women workers, also were suggested.

RUSSIA:

Near Europe

On the northern front, Russian troops stood within 20 miles of the old Polish border, while it was reported that the Germans were mobilizing all able-bodied men in Estonia and Latvia to help in a last ditch fight for these states commanding the Baltic sea route.

To the west of fallen Kiev, the Reds moved on the last railroad linking German armies in the north with those to the south.

On the southern front, German forces still held their ground at Krivoi Rog and Nikopol, guarding their general retreat from the big Dnieper river bulge. Near the mouth of the Dnieper on the Black sea, the Reds were only about 100 miles from Rumania.

Some 75,000 Nazi troops holding the strategic Crimea peninsula which guards the Black sea routes, tried to reduce Russian concentrations on its eastern shore.

CIVILIAN GOODS:

More Forks, Spoons

To extend the life of flatware, the War Production board has authorized the release of small quantities of nickel for plating under silver and chrome knives, forks and spoons. At the same time, WPB allowed purchase of alloy steel from distressed stocks for use in manufacturing restaurant and institutional flatware.

To bolster dwindling stocks of infants' and children's hosiery and underwear, the WPB granted priorities on necessary yarns for production of such goods.

Priorities will cover cotton knitting yarns for use in making infants' ribbed hose, sizes 3 to 5½; infants' half socks and anklets, 3 to 6½; children's half socks, 5 to 7½, and ⅝ and ⅞ hose to 9½; boys' crew and slack socks, 7 to 11½, and boys' golf hose, 7 to 11½.

DEMOBILIZATION:

British Plans

Release of soldiers only when employment is available is being studied by the British government, along with plans for holding workers in war jobs until conversion to civilian production is completed.

To assure new industries of adequate labor supplies, the government is considering controlling employment, so as to prevent any rush into old, established lines.

The government's present intention is to start demobilization as soon as the European fighting ends, but it recognizes that many troops will be needed for occupation of the continent, and many more will be shifted to the Pacific for the war against Japan.

BALL PLAYER

Spurgeon Ferdinand ("Spud") Chandler, Yankee pitcher, was named most valuable player in the American league by the Baseball Writers' association. He won 20 games and dropped four during the season. In the series, he pitched the first and last games, winning both.

Previously, the association had voted Stan Musial, Cardinal, most valuable man in the National league, and Walker Cooper, teammate, second.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

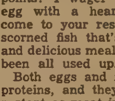
Stuffed Eggs Are Colorful in Spanish Sauce
(See Recipes Below)

Point Wisdom



There should be some sort of an "E" award for the housewives who go about their business daily, keeping their homes in order and feeding their families nutritious, well-balanced meals in spite of high prices and hiked-up point values.

And to you ladies who rate or would rate the household "E" aren't you finding new respect for foods low in points or which require no points? I wager there's many an egg with a heart of gold that's come to your rescue and hitherto-scorned fish that's made a hearty and delicious meal when points have been all used up.

Both eggs and fish are complete proteins, and they are just as important as meat in building and repairing body tissue which is necessary every day. Both can be combined into just as looked-for dishes as meat and cheese which are rationed.

A word of caution when you cook those precious eggs. Use low temperatures whether you fry, scramble, cook or bake them, otherwise you will have tough, leathery eggs. Cook them carefully, and ah! you will indeed discover how delightful they truly are. Use variety in serving eggs, too, and don't just go through the humdrum monotony of serving them plain boiled, scrambled or fried.

Spanish Eggs on Toast.
(Serves 4)
8 stuffed egg halves
4 slices of toast
Spanish sauce

Lay slices of toast on bottom of baking dishes. Prepare Hot Stuffed eggs as suggested in following recipe and arrange eggs on top of toast. Pour hot Spanish sauce over and around eggs. Garnish with toast triangles. Serve at once.

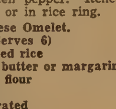
Stuffed Eggs.
4 hard-cooked eggs
⅛ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper or cayenne
3 tablespoons salad dressing
1 teaspoon chopped parsley

Cut eggs in half lengthwise or crosswise. Remove yolks, press through sieve. Add seasonings and dressing. Beat until fluffy and refill egg whites. Top stuffed eggs with buttered crumbs and broil or bake in hot oven about 6 minutes or until crumbs are browned.

Spanish Sauce.

Prepare about 3 cups of your favorite tomato sauce and season rather highly. Add 2 tablespoons chopped onion and 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper at the last.

Eggs a la King.
(Serves 3 to 4)
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
Salt and pepper
6 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
¼ pound mushrooms
1 tablespoon chopped pimiento
1 tablespoon chopped green pepper



Melt butter or margarine in top of double boiler; add flour and stir to a smooth paste. Add milk gradually, stirring constantly, and season. Cook 5 minutes over boiling water. Add eggs, sliced mushrooms sauteed in butter or margarine, pimiento, and green pepper. Reheat. Serve on toast or in rice ring.

Chinese Omelet.
(Serves 6)
½ cup uncooked rice
4 tablespoons butter or margarine
4 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
3 eggs, separated
¼ teaspoon paprika
1¼ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon dry mustard
4 tablespoons grated cheese

Cook rice until tender. Rinse with hot and cold water. Make a sauce of butter or margarine, flour and milk. Cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Beat egg yolks. Add rice, sauce, seasonings and cheese. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a greased shallow pan. Bake at 350 to 375 degrees for 35 minutes.

Do you frequent the fish counters at least twice a week to look for bargains in fresh fish? If you don't, you should, for it's a splendid way of providing your family with a good quality protein food, to say nothing of the way in which you save points for meat.

Baked Fish.

Clean fish and prepare for stuffing. Dry carefully inside and sprinkle with salt. Stuff and sew up fish. Rub with melted fat, salt and dredge with flour. Place on a greased fish sheet in dripping pan. Place over fish small pieces of salt pork or brush with oil. Bake 45 minutes in a moderate (350-degree) oven.

Fish Stuffing.
1½ cups bread crumbs
2 tablespoons chopped onion
½ cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 egg, beaten
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon lemon juice or
¼ teaspoon herb seasoning

Combine all ingredients together and add enough milk or soup stock to hold ingredients together in a moist dressing. Fill fish, then sew sides together with a coarse needle and thread.

Baked Halibut with Spanish Sauce.
2 pounds halibut
Spanish Sauce:
1 can tomato soup
1 small onion chopped
4 tablespoons green pepper, chopped

Place halibut in greased utility dish. Mix tomato soup with green pepper and onion and pour over fish. Bake for 1 hour in a 375-degree oven.

Lynn Says:

Meat Stretchers: Store and cook meat properly for greatest economy. Fresh meat is best stored if wiped with a damp cloth, covered loosely with waxed paper and stored in coldest part of refrigerator.

Variety meats, ground meats and fish should be used 24 hours after purchasing. Ground meat darkens if allowed to stand and spoils more quickly than whole cuts.

Frozen meat keeps indefinitely in the freezing unit. However, after thawing, it spoils more quickly than other meat and should be cooked immediately.

Cooked meats should be covered closely to prevent drying and stored in coldest part of refrigerator. Do not cut, grind or slice until ready to use.

Poultry should be cleaned and washed before refrigerating. It keeps better if stored whole rather than in pieces.

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D.
Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

Lesson for November 21

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

HONESTY IN ALL THINGS

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:15; Leviticus 19:11, 13; Luke 19:1-10, 45, 46.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt not steal.—Exodus 20:15.

Honesty seems to be so obviously right that one might expect it always and everywhere—if bitter experience had not indicated the opposite to be true.

As a matter of fact, dishonesty has become so common that a person who is strictly honest is a bit of a novelty. Some even think he is peculiar.

Under such circumstances the Christian needs to be vigilant lest he also accommodate his own ideas of honesty and begin to justify little evasions rather than being absolutely upright.

The teaching of Scripture on this matter is very plain.

I. Honesty and Fair Dealing (Exod. 20:15; Lev. 19:11, 13).

The very commandment against stealing implies that men have a right to that which they have made, earned, or saved. If no one had property rights there could be no stealing. Some of our modern isms deny such rights, but their reasoning is clearly not biblical or Christian.

"Thou shalt not steal" forbids every kind of theft, and the passages from Leviticus indicate that this includes more than robbery or ordinary stealing.

It relates to every kind of false dealing with another, such as oppression or the withholding of just wages. That, too, is stealing in God's sight.

Perhaps we ought to be more specific and apply the truth to our own day. Stealing includes such things as loafing on one's job, "borrowing" money from the cash drawer, taking goods from the stock with which one is working, stealing another man's sermon and preaching it as one's own, "lifting" material out of another man's book without credit, contracting debts which one can never pay, using false weights and measures, adulterating food or other material, "watering" milk for sale, selling worthless stock, dodging taxes or lying to the tax assessor, or using a slug instead of a nickel in the telephone to escape proper payment.

One might add gambling (which is taking another man's property by skill or by chance), making an unduly large profit on the labor of another, making money out of the sorrows and failures of others, etc. To be honest means to be fair—and that has broad implications.

II. Honesty and Restoration (Luke 19:1-10).

The reality and thoroughness of Zacchaeus' conversion was indicated by his willingness to restore all the money he had unjustly (but legally, note that!) taken from his fellow citizens—and that in fourfold measure.

Insofar as it is possible to do so, the honest person will make right any known injustice. To be right with God must mean that we are to be right with men. The testimony of many Christians could be presented to show that they have only entered upon real peace and usefulness as they have made consistent effort to right every wrong, to pay every debt.

Often such actions open opportunities for Christian testimony and point others to the redemption in Christ, which makes a man live right as well as talk right.

III. Honesty and Religion (Luke 19:45, 46).

One might think it unnecessary to urge honesty upon religious folk. They ought to be honest. But here we see in sharp contrast to the quick honesty and restitution of Zacchaeus, the stubborn disobedience and dishonesty of the priests in the temple. Jesus had already cleansed the temple of the traffic in money-changing and the sale of animals for sacrifice practiced there (see John 2:13-17). On that occasion He rebuked them because they made His Father's house "a house of merchandise."

Had they known the change of heart of a converted Zacchaeus they would have heeded His admonition. But they did not believe in Christ and went on with their ungodly desecration of the temple area until it became "a den of thieves" (v. 46).

What happened so long ago needs application to our present day. So apt is the quotation from the "Lesson Commentary" which we have used before that we repeat it now.

Speaking of "the goings on in our own churches" the writer says, "Is a church honest when it assumes obligations that it cannot meet, and is then forced to use all sorts of questionable means to raise money for the benefit of the church? Is a church honest when it turns a building consecrated to the worship of God into a restaurant or a theater, Is a church honest that turns its pulpit into a lecture platform for the discussion of current events or the review of popular books or plays?"

The Rubber Shortage is behind us but the Tire Shortage is still here!

Less than two years ago America faced as frightening a situation as any country at war ever faced.

Unless something was done, and done quickly, we would soon be without rubber.

And without rubber, no plane could fly, no tank could move, no ship could sail, no truck could roll, people could not get to work, materials could not move to and from plants.

That was the situation the Government and the rubber companies had to lick inside of two years if America was to stay in the war.

Did the "impossible" really happen?

Let's see what you think. Right now, there is nearly enough rubber to meet our essential needs.

Today, this threat to American victory is merely an unpleasant memory, because Government, the Rubber Director, and a group of industries—rubber, petroleum, chemical, alcohol—working together, compressed into less than two years a job that would normally have taken a dozen years. But . . .

Because the public saw huge synthetic rubber plants shoot up almost over night, and heard that synthetic rubber was in large-scale production, they figured the tire headache was almost over.

Now—a warning!

This is the situation today—the rubber supply crisis is past, but the long predicted and anticipated tire shortage is with us.

Why is this so, when thousands of tons of Government synthetic rubber are now being made?

Why is this so, when the rubber industry is producing a tremendous tonnage of rubber products and more airplane and truck tires than ever before?

Because, as the Baruch Committee foresaw—the fact that few tires could be made until we had our synthetic rubber supply well on the way, resulted in millions of tires going out of service without replacement—and those remaining have less mileage in them. Inventories of prewar tires are gone.

Because our military needs are way beyond anyone's anticipations.

Because the rubber companies must use a lot of their manpower and machines to make bullet-sealing gas tanks and hundreds of other rubber products for war, in addition to tires.

Because half of today's requirements are for heavy-duty, large-size truck, bus, combat, artillery, and airplane tires, requiring many, many times the labor and materials of peacetime needs . . . and finally . . .

Because the manpower shortage hangs over the tire industry as it does over all industry, and there are just too few hands for the job.

Straight from the shoulder

These problems will be licked when our enemies are licked. Meanwhile, we want to tell you frankly that unless you, and all tire-owners continue to make the preservation of tires a vital personal problem . . . our home-front transportation will break down and slow up the war production of America.

The way out is for you to conserve the tires you've got—stretch their life in every way you can.

How to make tires last longer

Do no unnecessary driving.

Live up to the government regulation—don't exceed 35 miles an hour.

Keep your tires inflated up to recommended pressure, and check them every week.

Avoid hitting holes in the road, or bruising your tires on curbs or stones. Don't start or stop suddenly. Slow down for sharp corners.

See that your wheels and axles are in line.

Switch your tires from wheel to wheel every five thousand miles, and have them inspected regularly for removal of foreign objects and repair of cuts.

And—most important of all—recap your tires as soon as they become smooth.

Though not all civilians will be able to get synthetic rubber tires in the near future, you may be one of those who will. Therefore, you should know . . . and remember . . . these facts:

FACTS ABOUT PASSENGER CAR TIRES

The synthetic rubber tire is not yet an improvement but it will keep your car rolling through the emergency.

In many respects, the new synthetic rubber tires are an unknown quantity.

How they would behave at the phenomenally high speeds of prewar days is purely academic. The patriotic citizen knows that high speeds wear out his treads far faster than the recommended speed of 35 miles per hour, and drives accordingly.

Under-inflation, driving over rough roads, and other abuses are bad for all tires—but today's evidence is that synthetic tires will stand less of these abuses than the tires you have been used to.

But, since these tires will be rationed to you in trust for the nation, it will be your duty to take every possible care of them, and to prevent misuse and abuse.

As we gain more experience with synthetic rubber tires, more and more things will become known about them, and the public will be kept informed.

If you use synthetic rubber tubes, be sure they are properly installed. They should be put into the tire, then inflated, deflated, and inflated again. And they should never be mounted on rusty rims.

FACTS ABOUT TRUCK AND BUS TIRES

On truck and bus tires, particularly in over-the-road, inter-city service, the situation is less satisfactory.

Truck and bus tires are operated under more severe conditions than passenger car tires. They are heavier, thicker—generate more heat. They are all too frequently overloaded, must travel on any kind of highway their work requires.

Again we'll be perfectly frank about it: synthetic truck and bus tires now built will not stand all the abuse that the prewar tire would take, especially overloading. Progress is being made every day—but overloading which damaged a prewar tire can ruin today's synthetic rubber tire.

The Tire Industry is bending every effort to solve the serious problems of furnishing satisfactory and sufficient tires to the truck and bus field.

But a serious threat still exists to our most vital transportation.

So remember this—while the treads of present truck and bus tires are vitally important, the carcasses of these tires have a value to our truck operators, and to the nation, that is beyond price. Unless these tires are made to last and last, there is almost certain to be a breakdown of truck service.

Every one of these tires must be recapped the very minute it needs it—before any damage is done to the carcass. Speeds must be cut down, especially on hot roads. Overloads must be eliminated. Proper inflation is a necessity.

Operators, garage men, drivers, all have a heavy responsibility that they cannot now avoid. These are straightforward statements. The warning must not go unheeded. A new tire warranty recognizes these conditions, but the real job is conservation!

A new warranty—

With conditions as they are, and synthetic rubber in its present stage of development, a new tire warranty has become necessary and has been adopted. It applies to all tires. Under its terms, injuries such as bruises, body breaks, cuts, snags, and heat failures, as well as tread wear are not subject to adjustment consideration.

Nor are injuries or failures which result from improper tire care or misuse or abuse. This includes failure as a result of overload, excess speed, improper inflation, or other non-defective conditions. Or when tires are used on rims not conforming to Tire and Rim Association Standards.

Remember—the tire industry, the Rubber Director, everyone is working together with all their energy, as they have from the outset, to keep America's wheels turning.

Do your part—take care of the tires you've got now!

"Isn't it strange that Princes and Kings
And clowns that caper in sawdust rings
And common folks like you and me
Are builders for eternity?

To each is given a bag of tools,
A shapeless mass and a book of rules;
And each must make, ere life has flown,
A stumbling block or a stepping stone."

What, oh what, can this world be coming too—We learned to day there would be no kleenex.

Luther Davis brought us a might nice war map Saturday. It is published by Southern Agriculturist and has air miles from Allied to Axis cities, plainly marked and also possible invasion routes of the Allies· It is given with subscriptions to the Agriculturist and Luther says he is just waiting to take your order.

Ras Langston, of Jemison, is an accomodating fellow. We are in his debt. He came in the last of the week and after "getting us told" on how to print a newspaper, he obligingly joined in and helped us straighten out our Jemison Routes and also City subscription list. Handling so many names every day, they will get mixed, and then too, the subscriber doesn't always give his full address and this causes confusion. But, anyway, we appreciated Mr· Ras coming in and talking to us and helping us out. May he come to see us often.

Buddy Ellison was home on furlough. He nearly got gipped out of two days though. Seems there is another guy there named Ellison and the names got confused so that Buddy wasn't notified of his furlough until two days after he was supposed to be gone· Buddy's address: ASN 34814576, Co C, 191st Bn. 60th Reg. Camp Blanding, Fla. And by-the-way, when you write, remember, it isn't "Buddy". It's Fayette J. Ellison·

Melvin Mims, from the other direction, up in New Jersey, is home too. Melvin was called home because of the serious illness of his sister who is in a Birmingham Hospital.

The list of fellows who left here last Saturday morning for the induction center at Fort McClellan, looked like a list of the "Who's Who" of young businessmen and farmers. But, who knows? Next months list may BE that of our Who's Who, of the Chilton County business world·

We have often kidded young boys who were entering a printing office to learn the trade, into making useless trips all over town hunting such things as "striped ink," "Rubber chasses," "slug mashers," and the like. Now, would that we could send one out for a "real" set of paper stretchers, to stretch these little number 8 gas coupons through November 21st.

There is nothing like bringing a subject to the front to get something done about it. If something is done about this "entertainment center", (and there should be) for the 'teen agers, you can thank the senior girls and boys at the High School for "taking the bull by the horns" and doing something about it To say the least they got folks interested enough to start talking.

Postmaster Lowe is urging everyone to mail their Christmas packages NOW· You can plainly mark on the package not to be opened until Christmas, and it may prevent someone being disappointed on that day. Read what the postmaster has to say about it in another article in this issue of the News

A newspaper article says if there is no whipping cream to be had, just use as a substitute the white of an egg and half a banana· Then whip until stiff. Now where the samhill are you going to find a banana? It's much easier around Chilton County to find the cream.

The American Spirit Fostered
TWO GREAT REVOLUTIONS!

The First Revolution

The Revolution for Independence in 1776 was for individual freedom from oppression—from taxation without representation—it was for freedom of speech, of worship, to work when, how and where one pleased. This was before steam, electricity or other power lightened the burden of human toil.

The Second Revolution

Then came the Industrial Revolution. Man's energy through machinery and enormous investment was multiplied a thousandfold. His courage—ability—energy—initiative—thrift—investment—were rewarded with personal profit and accomplishment. Free Enterprise flourished—greater employment ensued—wages increased—living standards improved—new wants were created and satisfied—and our country became the envy of the world.

What Next?

War has further speeded science and invention. Progress is marking time until the war ends. Individual Freedom and Free Enterprise await the go-ahead signal to move forward to greater accomplishment.

The Interests of Capital and Labor are Inseparable

The businessman's profit and the working man's wages and living standards are inter-dependent. Serving co-operatively, under a representative democracy and a constitutional government, a better world is in the making.

This Railroad's Part

If granted equal freedom by law, regulation, and taxation, as applied to competitive forms of transportation, the "Old Reliable" and its employees will do the same fine job in peacetime for their Southland as they are now doing in war for the Nation.

Higher wages, increased production, greater prosperity, always follow the investment of Capital. They can be assured in no other way. Capital is entitled to a fair return for its investment and risk. Labor is entitled to an appropriate wage. The public benefits from increased production.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad, with its half billion dollar investment, is regulated enterprise at work. It looks confidently forward to a continued share in developing the South.

POPLAR SPRINGS

We had a nice crowd out to church Sunday but our pastor, Bro Hughes was sick and couldn't be with us. Bro Gillaland gave us a good sermon. We also had a good crowd out to BYPU and had a good discussion. We invite all who can, to be back with us next Sunay and Sunday night.

We don't have much sickness in our community at present and just hope it will last.

I would like to ask everyone to ask a special prayer for our Pastor, Bro. Hughes. He has been a faithful servant for many years and we hate to give him up, so we hope for him a quick recovery so he can be back with us. We pray for all the sick and aged ones everywhere also for all our Soldiers. The more earnest we pray the sooner our boys will be back.

Let's all go to church somewhere, every chance we get. We welcome, all who will come to our church.

Mrs R. A. Mikesell, of Bell Plain, Iowa, has been visiting her parents Mr and Mrs Martin Peterson, of Jemison.

AN OMINOUS THREAT

Following the treachery and tragedy at Pearl Harbor in December, 1941, the Management of this Company declared early in 1942 in an advertisement entitled "America First" that the primary purpose in the operation of this railroad would be the effective prosecution of the war. This pledge will remain in force until our inevitable victory.

On November 9, 1943, a spokesman for certain railroad labor organizations, in testifying before a United States Senate Committee, made the following statement:

> We are going ahead with our strike-vote, and when the day comes we shall fix a date to interrupt the transportation system of this nation. When we are convinced it is hopeless and that we are being stalled or given the run-around, we will put the mandate into effect.

Since this wage dispute is now wholly an issue between the labor unions and the Federal Government, it may be assumed that "stalled or given the run-around" refers to the Federal Government.

It is our desire to continue to run our trains —to the end that guns, ammunition, fuel, food and other vital material may be delivered to their destinations; to the end that troop trains may be handled with safety and dispatch; to the end that we may back the men we sent abroad to fight our battles.

We are still for "America First."

I. B. TIGRETT,
President.

McCLURE SYNDICATE—W.N.U. FEATURES

CHAPTER I

With every slap of her powder puff resentment grew in the amber-eyed girl leaning close to the mirror. It was the color of her hair—such a dark red! Did any hair have to be so dark that it could never, even on top of a Fifth Avenue bus on a sunny day, be described as red-gold? Maybe if she did her hair a different way—but she had no time for experiment. She was late now. And Paul Harris would be quick to tell her, not for the first time, that if she didn't care enough about her job as magazine counter girl at the Devon Arms Hotel to get there on time, he, as manager, would be forced, regretfully, to accept her resignation.

But indignation at her looks and against having to hurry off to work—on Thanksgiving Day, too!—were only items in a long list of resentments that Jan Payson had accumulated. There was the matter of the Thanksgiving dinner she and Dora had just finished to the last scrap. She had set her heart on having a broiler for Dora's Thanksgiving, and to that end had smiled her prettiest every day for a week at the customers who stopped at her stall for reading matter or cigarettes. A smile, she had found, was sometimes good for a tip, but not this week—oh, no, she needed the money too badly this week to have even an extra nickel thrown her way.

A thump on the door made her jump, so that her elbow knocked against a slender vase standing on the dresser and sent it crashing against the marble.

"Who's there?" called Jan, knowing that peremptory thump very well, but pausing to retrieve the rosebud, nevertheless. It put off the actual moment of facing Mrs. Mallord by at least a split second.

"Who are yez expecting?" came the sarcastic rejoinder from without, and Jan, with a sigh, opened the door gingerly. Mrs. Mallord pushed it wide the minute the knob was turned, and took a step into the room. "Well?" she said.

"Well what?" said Jan, bravely.

"Well what?" Mrs. Mallord mimicked her roomer. Then, with a brusque change of tone: "It's the rent I'm after. Give."

She held out a large, rather grimy hand at the end of a stout arm. In spite of herself, Jan's voice shook a little as she explained that, since it was Thanksgiving, she hadn't expected Mrs. Mallord to ask for the rent until—

"Yez can have till Saturday," said Mrs. Mallord, "to pay up or get out, and I'm breakin' a lifelong rule of my house to let you stay a day over three weeks."

"Good-by, darling." Jan stooped to kiss Dora's white cheek.

She smiled gayly from the threshold, then closed the door softly and ran down the stairs. It was drizzling, a fact which she had no opportunity of noting in their flat, for their two windows looked out on the brick wall of the house next door, hardly three feet away. That nickel she thought she had, proved to be nonexistent. Twenty blocks—a generous mile—lay between her and the Devon Arms. Not much of a walk, but quite a run, especially in the rain. And as far as she could figure it out, she would have to move at what was practically a run to reach the hotel anywhere near on time.

There was the Devon Arms, at last, across the street. Jan headed for the employees' entrance, darting in front of a car parked at the curb. So quickly had she bounded across the glistening black road that the man behind the wheel, with his foot on the starter, had no warning of her catapulting approach. At the instant she flew into his line of vision he pressed down, and the long car shot forward.

The edge of the front fender bumped Jan smartly as she clipped past. It was not a hard blow, but it threw her off balance and she sprawled on the wet sidewalk. The man, with an exclamation of alarm, leaped to the ground and lifted her to her feet. "You are hurt!"

Jan turned wrathful eyes on him. "Hurt? I'm ruined!" she cried. She dabbed feebly with her handkerchief at the mud that streaked down the front of her suit.

"Allow me." The young man whisked out a huge square of fine linen and began an expert job of mopping up.

"I don't know how you keep your job, if you can't drive any better than that," Jan said severely. "As a matter of fact, I've a good mind to complain to your employer."

"Let me—" said the chauffeur.

"Oh, skip it! I was only trying to scare you. I won't make trouble."

Jan, who had the door open by this time, waved a friendly hand, grinned a friendly grin and disappeared. The young man stood for a moment, staring at the slowly closing door. Then on an impulse he bounded across the sidewalk and gently pushed it open. Jan was just entering another door at the end of a long corridor. He heard a shrill greeting from within.

"Jan!" a girl was shrieking. "Gee, Jan, you're late!"

Jan walked slowly toward the manager's office and down the two little steps that led to the door in a remote corner of the main lobby. Her fingers had just touched the knob when the door opened suddenly from the other side. For the second time within the hour she was thrown off balance, but this time she did not actually fall. She simply careened against Paul Harris, who had just wrenched the door open—all his movements were as brisk as machine gun fire—and knocked the carnation from his buttonhole.

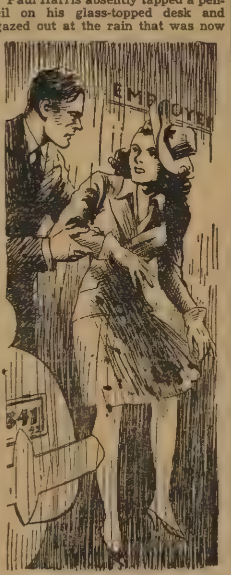
"Oh!" said Jan, "excuse me." She stooped to pick up the flower just as Paul made the same gesture. Their heads clicked. "Oh!" said Jan again.

"Well, well," he began with what he intended for a smile, "so we're here at last, are we? Such a bother, isn't it, to come down to work every day. And quite impossible to get here on time."

"You're firing me, aren't you?" Jan interrupted, her bitterly tried temper slipping its leash. "Then why don't you say so?" Her voice broke and she stopped suddenly.

"Very well, then, here it is in two words: you're fired," said Paul, obviously enjoying her misery. "Stop at the cashier's window for your money."

Paul Harris absently tapped a pencil on his glass-topped desk and gazed out at the rain that was now coming down in torrents. Holidays were always a dreary business, even at the Devon Arms.



"Hurt? I'm ruined!" she cried.

Paul threw the pencil down and, rising, pulled his morning coat into its usual meticulous, creaseless fit. It was generally profitable to walk around the hotel at odd hours.

Paul walked out, satisfied with himself, just in time to see a tall lanky figure advance on Molly, the telephone operator. In his hand he carried a chauffeur's cap and Paul, without seeming to, watched his progress to the switchboard and the lengthy conversation that followed. After a few minutes, however, when the man remained, Paul moved toward the raised platform where the switchboard was placed. Any chauffeur ought to get his instructions more quickly than that.

He was almost upon him before a certain familiarity in the arrogant tilt of the long narrow head made him walk more slowly. He changed his direction slightly, so that as he approached he could see the strongly etched profile of the man who was hanging on Molly's every word.

In the space of two steps Paul's manner was transformed from the domineering one he used with the help to the dignified, courteous manner he employed toward well-paying guests. This was none other than William Anthony Deverest—darling of society and hoped-for prey of every romantic debutante.

Paul's quiet, catlike tread did not herald his coming, and the young man swung around abruptly at Paul's smooth question: "Is there anything I can do, sir?"

"He was looking for Jan Payson, Mr. Harris, and I was just telling him—" put in Molly.

"That Miss Payson is no longer with us," Paul finished quietly. "Miss Elkins is taking her place and will be glad, I am sure, to carry out any commission—"

"But she said she worked here!"

"Yes—ah—yes. She did. At the magazine counter."

"Was she fired?" Deverest demanded, and his tone was so brusque that Paul tactfully evaded a direct answer.

"She was late," Paul's lips thinned to a disapproving line.

Bill Deverest grinned boyishly and ran a hand through his already far from smooth hair. "Yes, I know," he said. "I guess I was responsible for that, in a way."

The manager's eyes widened slightly, but he gave no other indication that these words had started a new train of thought in his quick brain. It was one thing for a clerk to be late, but it was another for a valued customer to admit that he had been the cause of her tardiness.

"Miss Payson has been promoted—ah—that is," he said carefully, "she will work during the evenings, starting tomorrow."

"Oh!" There was disappointment in Tony Deverest's monosyllable. "Say, do you promote people by making them work harder hours?"

"No," Paul said hastily, "of course not, Mr. Deverest. Miss Payson will—will only work for a few hours at night. She—she's to be in the new floor show," he added with a sudden burst of inspiration.

Tony Deverest was suddenly conscious that the pale eyes looking at him so earnestly were a little too bland for comfort. He realized that his innocent intention of taking Miss Payson to dinner by way of apology for the day's mishap was being interpreted in a more serious light by her immediate employer.

"I just wanted to make sure Miss Payson was all right," he stammered. "I mean, I just wanted to see her for a moment—"

"Of course." Paul's manner was diplomacy itself. "We are always glad to see you here, Mr. Deverest. I am sorry Miss Payson is not in, but she'll be here the next time you come," he promised.

"Well—" Tony Deverest turned the chauffeur's cap in his hands as if he had never seen it before. "My man's day off," he explained to Harris. "I'm chauffeuring myself around town. Well, see you again."

Paul Harris recognized opportunity when it whirled through the ornate doors of the Devon Arms and he now proceeded to seize it.

He retreated to his office to consider. A telegram? No, a note. He'd send one of the bellboys with it. With the employees' directory open before him, he observed that Jan lived fairly close by. He'd go himself!

Jan looked at Dora and Dora looked at Jan. The sick girl's fingers were lightly smoothing the pale blue satin of the chaise longue on which she lay.

"I still can't believe it," she said to Dora.

"But, darling, it was only a question of time before somebody realized how good you are. I've always told you that you have an awfully pretty voice and that you really dance very well."

"But a place in their new floor show! And right after he'd just fired me! And then moving us to this lovely, lovely suite—"

She prayed that she could keep the dream a reality for a few weeks. If only she could sing or dance a little better! But they seemed to like her anyway—at least Zambrini, the orchestra leader, who had been coaching her in a cute little song.

A knock at the door interrupted the girl's thoughts and made Dora jump.

"I forget and think it's Mrs. Mallord again," she laughed shamefacedly. Jan patted her shoulder reassuringly, as she went to the door.

"I am Mary Elizabeth Howard," a smart young woman announced. "This is my assistant, Pringle," she added, nodding toward the drab woman who stood beside her laden with a number of cardboard boxes.

"But—but you must have the wrong suite!" Jan protested when she could find her voice.

"Oh, no!" Miss Howard moved quickly about the room, adjusting the shades, pushing back the furniture with quick, birdlike movements. "You're Jan Payson, aren't you?" At Jan's nod she continued, "I'm to do you an evening dress and a few sports things. Mr. Harris said you are to appear in the new floor show."

But Miss Howard was in no such predicament. She flung herself into a chair and proceeded to rap out orders that Jan did not even think of hesitating to follow. She slipped out of her well-washed kimono and proceeded to allow the silent Pringle to encase her in what Miss Howard referred to as "the correct foundation for evening"—to help her don stockings finer than Jan had ever seen in her life—and to fit her slender feet into a pair of evening sandals studded with "jewels." Dora gasped as she looked at them and Miss Howard threw in a word of explanation in her crisp, hurried tones:

"The latest. Jeweled sandals. You're practically the first to wear them in New York."

Government Needs Reports On U. S. Holdings Abroad

Form TFR-500 Supplies Valuable Information Concerning American Stake In Foreign Lands, Aids Reconstruction.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

When Paratrooper Jones landed "plop" in the midst of a field he had never heard of in a country he had only read about in books, he was able to lead his comrades direct to a certain building whose purpose, importance, construction and contents, almost down to the last nut and bolt, were all known in detail by the American high command. Paratrooper Jones knew just where to get to the point he wanted to leave his dynamite and General Smith, at the headquarters, knew exactly the damage that would result to the enemy when that dynamite went off.

Neither would have had that information if a worried banker in Bingville, U. S. A., hadn't painstakingly filled out Form TFR-500 which the treasury department had sent him.

The information asked for concerned American investments in foreign lands, and the information the government got back made it possible for it to get the detailed blue prints of the factory that Jones blew up from the American firm which had built it and, in this case, the construction engineer who had bossed the job.

The function of these annoying TRF-500's which have already located American investments in 102 countries, the largest single one of which is seven million dollars and the smallest forty dollars, serves other exceedingly useful, if not as dramatic, purposes.

Other Functions

One government official pointed out to me another important function this information plays in nonmilitary wartime activities. He said:

"The more complete information the government has on the total American stake abroad, the more successful will be the efforts of our forces on the fighting fronts, the more quickly will the Allied Military Government be able to restore civilian activities in reoccupied areas, the better equipped our representatives will be to safeguard the interests of the American people during the peace table discussions, and the sounder will be the working out of postwar policies in the field of international economic relationships.

"This survey of American investments abroad is an instrument of vital importance to the future of this country. Most other world powers have long since collected similar information. They not only know the holdings of their own nationals all over the world, but their relations with those of other countries. Their plans are well formulated to protect and develop these investments. Our government believes we should not be less well informed."

This official had a particular reason in discussing this situation with me.

First, he wanted to stimulate the people who had received Form TFR-500 in giving as complete a report as possible.

Second, he desired wide publicity in the hope that other American citizens, individuals, corporations, executives of estates, trustees of charitable organizations who might be able to furnish the information desired, would get in touch with the treasury department and turn it over to the government.

Rehabilitation

Aside from its value to military men, the facts are exceedingly important to the Allied officials who are administering rehabilitation in occupied countries. If they know about a plant that has certain production facilities or trained people who can be used in producing what they desire, it greatly helps their work. It has proved in Sicily, and will prove in Italy, of great value to the Allied administrators to get information concerning the citizens so that they can pick those who are of known non-Fascist leanings to cooperate with them.

The information also, of course, is exceedingly valuable to many of the gvernment departments.

Claims for Damage

Another thing that the state department is called upon to do is to assist citizens in getting back their property in countries that have been affected by the war. Also there is the question of claims for damage to American property.

There are more than 100 people in the state department alone who are now working on postwar plans. One of the most important phases of this work is the reopening of trade with the war areas as well as the rest of the world. Of course, the terms under which the trade is reopened may depend on the industrial possibilities of the various areas; and how soon the controls of foreign exchange can be dropped will depend, in a large part, on the extent of the U. S. and other foreign holdings of the obligations of the country in question. All this will affect our exporters here as well as American interests in foreign countries.

The treasury department, as you know, has drawn up the White plan for international stabilization; the British government has the Keynes plan.

None of these projects, treasury officials said to me, which vitally affect the postwar movements of trade and capital, can be intelligibly planned and certainly cannot be put into effect without adequate knowledge of the value and type of United States interests and the number and character of the persons having those interests.

Many other important business negotiations such as private loans to foreign countries, direct investments by American corporations, furthering the good neighbor policy, will be affected by the information in the government's hands. For instance, if the government can say definitely that in a certain area there is very little capital invested in a certain type of enterprise and it is known such an enterprise might be enlarged there, the government might be able to encourage companies with foreign experience to develop such an enterprise.

The Moscow Conference

Washington correspondents for the press associations and some of the country's metropolitan dailies as well as the network broadcasters lived on needles and pins for more than a day and a half before the news of the agreements reached at Moscow were released.

There have been many bad leakages in advance of important international events recently. The state department, the Office of War Information and the Office of Censorship have done their best to protect American newspapers and radio against these violations of premature release of important stories involving foreign countries. The leaks usually have come through foreign officials who whisper a few hints to some of their newsmen friends. They also sometimes occur when news dispatches, radioed in advance for later release, are picked up by the enemy or are divulged in neutral countries.

Every effort was made to prevent such leaks in connection with the Moscow conference. The question of safety of the lives of British and American negotiators was involved. It was feared that if the fact that the conference was over was publicly revealed, the enemy might be on the watch to shoot down the planes carrying Secretary of State Hull and British Foreign Minister Eden and their parties.

Some of us who were affected, learned on the Saturday before the Monday of their official release that copies of the agreements had reached the state department earlier. We had guessed as much since the President commented on the success of the agreement the day before in his press and radio conference. We were told we would receive copies as far in advance as possible which meant that someone representing the various news agencies and networks had to be on duty day and night. Finally, the word came Monday morning that the messages were available and they were given out at ten o'clock for release at one o'clock. We, therefore, had three hours in which to digest the five separate documents.

Fortunately for me, the one o'clock release made it possible for me to report the story a minute and 19 seconds after it was given out on my one o'clock network broadcast.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY O'HARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin can ride any horse on his family's Wyoming ranch, but he wants a colt of his own. His father, a retired army officer, refuses to give him one until his school grades improve and he learns to take responsibility. Ken's mother tries to protect him from the stern discipline of his father and the youthful bullying of his older brother, Howard, who always manages to do things right. Nell convinces her husband that the colt may be just what Ken needs, in spite of the fact that he has not been promoted. Days pass, and Ken has not chosen his colt. But he is a changed boy.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER VI

Ken wakened one morning in the dark and turned to face the window, and when it showed faintly gray outside, he got up and stood watching the dawn brighten in the east.

There wasn't enough light yet for him to see anything clearly. It seemed a world of near-darkness, in which vague outlines appeared and vanished, floating and shadowy. His thoughts were like that, too. He groped for familiar footing in his mind, but everything was changed. Something new had come into him so that he was different. Even Tim said that he had grown an inch since his father promised him the colt, and Howard treated him as if he was important. But something had gone out of him, too; and sometimes he wanted it so that he was in a panic.

But now he was outside. The door was shut. It was windy and dangerous outside— The colt—he began to dress hurriedly. Today or tomorrow he must chose his colt. He would ride up now onto the range and look at the yearlings again.

It was still dark when he stole out the front door and felt the terrace grass under his feet. No one had heard him. That was good. He didn't want Howard along. Going out in the early morning was almost like going into the underwater world, or the world of a picture, or in a dream. Not quite so safe as a dream because he did have to watch his horse, or, if he was climbing on Castle Rock, he had to be careful of his footing, but still nothing like the ordinary world of the daytime.

He walked softly across the Green to the Calf Pasture to get his horse.

Ken had been a night wanderer ever since he had learned to walk alone and to climb over the edge of his crib. Nell would wake, hearing a sound in the hall or living room, would find the baby's crib empty and go searching for him.

She'd find him somewhere in the dark, crawling or standing unsteadily on the tail of his nightgown and would pick him up and carry him back to bed.

She tried tying the bottom of his nightgown in a knot with his feet inside, but he merely became more expert at balancing. Then she hobbled him with a soft diaper, but he learned to swing both feet together over the side of his crib, hang with little monkey hands, drop down, and shuffle instead of walk.

When he was older, sometimes he'd go outdoors in the night.

Often Nell did that herself. Restless or unable to sleep, she would slip from her bed, tie a robe around her, take pillow and blanket and go down to her hammock, and lie with her face to the sky, watching the stars.

Ken found Lady just inside the fence of the Calf Pasture, and when he held out his hand and spoke to her, she didn't move away but let him take hold of her halter and lead her out.

He had been riding Lady all week when he was exercising the geldings and looking for Rocket and inspecting the yearlings. He had gone to look at the yearlings every day, and yesterday his mother had ridden out with him. They hadn't been able to find them anywhere, until suddenly, from a high place, they heard the thunder of hoofs.

"They sounded like a regiment," said Nell, telling about it at supper. "And we looked down and saw them, a stream of color flying down the draw. It was beautiful to watch them! They shone in the sun—sorrel and black and bay and roan—the flowing movement—so gay, so free, so frolicsome!"

And then they had ridden down to the yearlings and dismounted amongst them, and Nell exclaimed upon the way their first year of life changed their appearance — dark chestnuts turned to sorrels, a pink roan changed to a blue, blacks lightened to brown, odd spots and markings vanished completely; and conformation altered almost beyond recognition.

"They look stunning," she told Rob. "Smooth and sleek and glossy, their little hides so full and taut they look as if they would burst."

Ken himself had been dazed by the beauty of them. The rich feeling—one of them his own, but which? He wanted them all, and until he chose, in a way, they were all his.

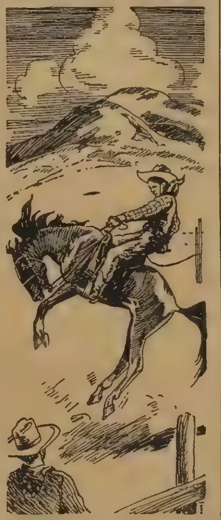
Ken led Lady up the little path through the Gorge, into the corrals, and then into the dark stable, put the catch on her halter, poured a measure of oats in the feed box in the manger before her, and began to groom her. Dad said use saddles—can't see why—better do it anyway—

Lady was a big red roan with a black tail and mane. She moved quickly; her head had a proud, high carriage; her dark eyes were full and intelligent.

Ken slid around her, close to her haunches, one hand on her tail, and then gave her a whack and said, "Get over!"

The mare moved over with her quick strong step and Ken rubbed down her other side. He put on the saddle blanket, then the saddle, and cinched it as tight as he could, remembering the blanket he had lost; lastly the bridle—she had finished her oats. He led her out of the corral and shut the gate. There was a rock there upon which he often stood to mount the tallest horses. He led Lady up to it. First he tried the cinch again. Loose! She always blew herself up when she was being saddled. That was what he had forgotten to do the other day with Cigarette. He took the cinch up three more holes, mounted, and moved off.

The four broncs that Ross was breaking were grazing in the Stable Pasture close by the corrals, and when they saw him, they trotted over to him, and Ken drew rein and stood there, letting them come up and sniff and nicker at Lady; and she nickered back. When he went on they followed for a little while, and then turned back to the corrals—waiting for their oats, he thought. Ross always gave each one a measure of oats before he worked them.



"Might's well keep him going and git it outen his system."

Their names were Gangway, Don, Rumba and Blazes.

Sometimes, Ken thought, as he cantered toward the County Road gate, the names his mother gave the colts in their first summer didn't stick, because the colts changed so. There had been Irish Elegance, so smooth and classy-looking the first summer that Nell said she was naming him after a beautiful, copper-colored California rose. But the second summer he had turned into a little mick, so they dropped the Elegance and just call him Irish.

Ross was having a tough time breaking Gangway, a big blood bay out of Taggert, the tallest and handsomest of the four. Yesterday Ken and Howard had sat on the corral fence watching Ross working with him. Gangway was bucking, and Ross had called to Howard to open the corral gate and let him out. The horse bucked out the gate with him, and Ross swung his quirt, and spurred him, and Gangway sunfished and cork-screwed and jackknifed. Ross sat with a little grin and his quirt going all the time, and when he came past Ken, exploding in great grass-hopper leaps, he said, "Might's well keep him goin and git it outen his system."

When it was over and he had ridden Gangway back into the corral and dismounted, Ross went over to the fence and stood hanging on to it, vomiting.

Ken had to dismount to open the gate to the County Road. He was careful to hold the rein tight as he led Lady through and closed the gate behind him. He found another rock to mount by and started up the Saddle Back.

All the clouds had turned pink, and behind them the sky was a far-away, fiery blue.

The higher he climbed the wider the sky was, and the farther stretched the fleet of tattered clouds. They were getting more color every minute, some of them blazed crimson. All the stars had disappeared except one, which shone between two clouds, bright gold.

Lady wanted her head.

There was a strong current of sympathy between the boy and the mare. When he wanted to stop and look around she understood perfectly and stood with ears pricked and head turning, absorbed in contemplation just as he was. And at exactly the moment when he had had enough, she knew it, and would move forward without the signal.

Today she was excited by the color and the electric quality of the air and the feeling of movement in the grass and the sky, and she kept asking for a free rein. When Ken gave it to her, she stretched out her nose and went up the steepest part of the Saddle Back at a gallop.

Ken looked for the yearlings where they had been yesterday but there was no sign of them. He rode around for an hour, thinking that Shorty would have taken him right to them, but Lady didn't have that much sense, she was just excited and wanting to run in any direction. All the sunrise colors had gone now, and the torn shreds of clouds were purple and gray and stormy looking.

Ken rode up to the highest peak of the Saddle Back so that he could look all around for dozens of miles; but the range was empty; not a head of stock anywhere. Still, he knew they could be hidden in the folds of the hills and never show an ear—but which fold? Which hill?

He rode on, and suddenly, coming around a curve, he saw Banner standing out in front of the brood mares, intent and alert, gathered for action.

Ken had barely time to turn his head when he saw Rocket and a sorrel filly cantering toward the bunch, and then he saw Banner trot out to meet them with lowered head and an expression of irresistible intention in his whole body.

Rocket and the young sorrel halted together. Rocket whinnied. Banner screamed. His head snaked along the grass. He reached them and circled around them both. Rocket began to gallop away. Banner pursued, first on one side of her then on the other. The sorrel colt clung close to its mother's side, whinnying nervously. She got in Banner's way. He gave a vicious, snarling neigh, plunged at the little one and bit it in the ribs. It screamed and fled, Banner pursuing.

Lady was taut and trembling with excitement, as Ken was himself. The brood mares, too, were motionless, watching the chase.

The filly showed Banner a clean pair of heels. How she could run!

Rocket trotted nervously up and down near the brood mares. The filly made a big circle, with Banner thundering after her. She came back to the mares, and as she passed them Banner swerved and went for Rocket. The filly fled past Ken. He saw frightened eyes in a tangle of streaming hair and slim legs, and a pang went through him. For a fraction of a second she had looked at him, and it was like an appeal. He wheeled his mount and followed her, turning in the saddle to look back at Rocket.

Rocket was cantering away again with Banner close beside her and before the curve of a hill shut them from view, Ken saw her come to a stop, and the great body of the stallion rear over her. For a moment the two of them, twisted into one shape, were sculptured against the stormy sky.

When Ken turned and looked again for the filly she was nowhere in sight. He pulled Lady up short. The range was empty, with no movement but the clouds and the grass, and no sound but the panting of the mare he rode and the thud of his own heart beating.

Rocket's colt—a yearling, a filly—and his own. He hadn't had to choose one after all. She had just come to him. His own because of that second's cry for help that had come from her eyes to his; his own because of her wild beauty and speed, his own because his heart burned within him at the sight and thought of her; his own because—well, just his own.

Then, from far ahead of him came an excited whinny—another and another. The filly appeared from nowhere, a tiny shape, running on a ridge in front of him, tail streaming against the dark tattered clouds; she plunged over the ridge, he heard more whinnies, he kicked Lady in the ribs and gave her her head, and in a few moments stood on the ridge, looking down, and saw the beautiful filly rejoining the band of yearlings, who welcomed her with excited chatterings as school-children welcome each other at reunion in the fall.

Ken rode down the mountain in a daze of happiness. No dream he had ever had, no imagination of adventure or triumph could touch this moment. He felt as if he had burst out of his old self and was something entirely new—and that the world had burst into something new too. So this was it—this was what being alive meant—Oh, my filly, my filly, my beautiful—

"For once you're back to breakfast on time," said Rob, as Ken took his seat at the table.

Ever since she had read in the Government bulletins that all prize stock was raised on elaborate formulas of mixed grains—or ground oats—and had noticed that the dogs, when they were hungry, squirmed through the wire fence into the calves' corral and ate the ground oats from the feed boxes, oatmeal had a place on her breakfast table.

Hothouse Lambs Hard to Raise; Expensive Delicacy

Sheep born in the fall and early winter, when sold in the suckling stage between two and four months of age, are known as hothouse lambs, says Pathfinder. The animals not only have to be raised with special care, but they constitute only one in about every 25,000 sheep slaughtered here annually.

Consequently, their meat is a rare and expensive delicacy and most of it is purchased by fine restaurants and other luxury trade.

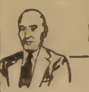
SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER



Of the 125,000 communities in the United States, 54,000 have no rail connection. They depend on rubber tires for their existence and their contacts with other communities. They rely solely on buses, trucks and passenger cars.

Reduction of the national average mileage of passenger cars to 5,400 miles a year through rationing has proved an important factor in rubber conservation. An idea of how this mileage is regulated will be understood when it is known that 55 per cent of the country's cars are operated on "A" gas ration books alone; about 25 per cent have "B," and 20 per cent have "C" books for supplementary supplies.

Why VICKS VAPORUB Is So Good
For Relieving Miseries of Childrens Colds

More than two generations ago—in grandmother's day—mothers first discovered Vicks VapoRub. Today it is the most widely used home-remedy for relieving miseries of children's colds. And here is the reason . . .

The moment you rub VapoRub on the throat, chest and back at bedtime it starts to work two ways at once—and keeps on working for hours—to ease coughing spasms, help clear congestion in cold-clogged upper breathing passages, relieve muscular soreness or tightness. It promotes restful sleep. Often most of the misery of the cold is gone by morning! That's why VapoRub is so good to use when colds strike. Try it!

Postwar Air Routes

More than 100 companies have already made application to the Civil Aeronautics board for certificates or permits to olerate a total of 350,000 miles of new domestic and foreign air routes after the war.

FALSE TEETH HELD FIRMLY BY "Comfort Cushion"

NOW WEAR YOUR PLATES EVERY DAY—
HELD COMFORTABLY SNUG THIS WAY

It's so easy to wear your plates regularly—all day—when held firmly in place by this "comfort-cushion"—a dentist's formula.

1. Dr. Wernet's plate powder forms soothing "comfort-cushion" between plate and gums—let's you enjoy solid foods, avoid embarrassment of loose plates. Helps prevent sore gums.

2. World's largest selling plate powder. Recommended by dentists for over 30 years.

3. Dr. Wernet's powder is economical; a very small amount lasts longer.

4. Made of whitest, costliest ingredient—so pure you eat it in ice cream. Dr. Wernet's plate powder is pleasant tasting.

Listen to
"REPORT TO THE NATION"
On Columbia Network Radio Stations each Tuesday night 8:30 p.m.

I've been wondering what quirk in human nature makes people pass right by a counter where they can buy fuses for a few cents apiece and then get sore as the dickens when the service man isn't there in a jiffy to bring a new fuse when one blows out at home. It seems kind of silly to make a trip of several miles with a service truck just to carry a fuse costing only a few cents, doesn't it? Especially when anyone can replace a light fuse.

* * * * *

Enough of a little makes a lot. Take this idea of saving fat, for instance. One lady said the other day to one of our service people who visited her home, "I don't have but the tiniest bit of waste cooking grease, not over a tablespoonful a day. That's not enough to fool with." Well, it kind of looks that way but if every home in the United States would save only a tablespoonful a day that would be 35 million tablespoonsful! I don't know how many pounds that would make in a month but it would be a whale of a lot and would make enough glycerine for explosives to blast a lot of Japs and Germans into Kingdom Come.

"Cutting pulpwood is essential war work"

says Paul V. McNutt,
Chairman of the War Manpower Commission

"PULPWOOD is an essential war material, used among other things for making rayon parachutes, shipping containers and smokeless powder. Its many wartime uses have created a shortage which is rapidly becoming acute. With these conditions in mind, the War Manpower Commission has recently classified pulpwood cutting and production of pulp as essential war occupations.

"May I urge every man engaged in this essential work, either part or full time, to give it the best he has in him. Let him remember he is wielding his axe and saw in the same struggle and to the same end that other men are wielding bayonets and machine guns.

"I know that the men who work in the forests and pulp mills and the farmers who cut pulpwood from their woodlots are just as patriotic and loyal as any other group of Americans. Now that they realize the importance of their part in the war, I am sure they will respond with the extra hours, extra days and extra effort that is the only possible answer to this dangerous shortage."

Plane In South Pacific Named For Local Girl

"Sis" Goes To War!

Fight The Squander Bug on Home Front

As dangerous as the war itself is the tendency of many Alabamians and Americans to squander their surplus money for non essential purchases in this time of war inflated incomes

Many citizens are now enjoying greater incomes than they have ever before known.

Those who are looking into our state's tomorrows know that much of today's surplus money must be conserved for purchasing power tomorrow to insure a stabilized economy through the period of adjustment to peacetime production and living.

To encourage conservation of money and emphasize the encessity for careful spending, the Alabama War Finance Committee is opening on November 21 a campaign designed to bring to the attention of every citizen the evils of squandering their money. Throughout the Christmas season we are asking that every county organization put emphasis on the Treasury Department slogan, "GIVE WAR Bonds — THE PRESENT WITH A FUTURE."

Remember the Campaign opens November 21.

CHARLES THOMAS WALKER

Charles Thomas Walker, age 77, died at a Selma Hospital on Nov. 18, 1943. Funeral services were held Saturday at Pleasant Hill.

Major Walker arrived Saturday in time for his fathers funeral. He is awaiting asignment before reporting back for duty.

MISS CULP AND PVT. HENLEY ARE WED

Of much interest was the marriage Saturday night, November 13, of Miss Alec Culp and Pfc. Arthur C. Henley. Mrs Henley is the daughter of Mr and Mrs J. D. Culp, while Pfc Henley is the son of Mr and Mrs S. A. Henley, all of the Mt Nebo Community. The vows were read by Rev C. E. Avinger of Verbena in the presence of a few friends. The couple went on a short wedding trip to Atlanta this week.

Report of Foreign Holdings Must Be Reported To PM

Citizens of Clanton who own any property in foreign countries were notified by Postmaster R. W. Lowe today that they must file reports of their holdings with the Treasury Department before Dec. 1. The notice was given by means of a poster placed on display in thepostoffice.

Postmaster Lowe points out that it is necessary for the government to have as complete information as possible on the American stake abroad to assist the military authorities and the civilian governments on the fighting fronts and to bring about sound solutions of the post-war problems.

Report forms, known as TFR-500, may be obtained through commercial banks, of from the nearest Federal Reserve Bank, the postmaster states. Penalties are provided for those who wilfully fail to file reports.

FARM SECURITY FAMILIES NOT WORRIED ABOUT RATION POINTS THIS YEAR

The extra ration points needed to prepare a regular old - fashioned Thanksgiving dinner won't worry Farm Security Administration families this year, according to Mrs Clara P. Allison, Associate FSA Supervisor for Chilton County.

FSA borrowers began preparing for their Thanksgiving almost a year ago. Last winter they started making farm and home plans which provided for a farm victory garden large enough to grow all foods needed for the family throughout the year. All summer and fall they have been filling their jars with a variety of vegetables, fruits, and meats—all raised on their own farm. Now that Thanksgiving time is here, FSA families won't need to save up points for the meats and canned foods to round out their Thanksgiving meal Instead, they will go down to their own storage shelves for their Thanksgiving, and that means more food left on grocery shelves for the use of city families.

Mrs Allison said that a recent survey of FSA families in Chilton County revealed that an average of 400 quarts of fruit, meats, vegetables per family had been canned this year; and that families have a good supply of meats, poultry, potatoes, fruits, pumpkins, turnips, and syrup and most of them have fresh fruits and vegetables.

Death Comes To Percy M. Pitts

Percy M. Pitts, age 53, died at a Montgomery hospital, Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Long prominent in political circles of Chilton County, Mr Pitts served three terms in the State Legislature from this County. He was a member of the Clanton Methodist Church.

Surviving are the widow, two daughters: Mrs Jerry Burke of Montgomery and Mrs C. L. Warren of Conroe Texas. Two sons: Percy M. Pitts, Jr., of Tucson and John Will Pitts of Clanton.. Mother, Mrs Ada McGraw Pitts. Sister, Mrs Vinn Pitts Christian and two brothers: John S. Pitts and Edwin W Pitts, all of Sylacauga..

Funeral services were held from the Clanton Methodist Church Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. E. A. Childs of Montgomery, officiating, assisted by Rev O C. Lloyd, Clanton. Spigener Funeral Home was in charge.

Honorary pallbearers were members of the Chilton County Bar Association.

Pallbearers were: Loren Smith, J. B. Atkinson, Frank Callen, Mr Longshore, Joe Calloway, and Jasper Dennis.

MRS JONES AND MRS GOWAN THANK LADIES FOR GIFTS TO GREEK RELIEF

According to Mrs Hugh Jones and Mrs J. E. Gowan the response to the call last week for clothes for Greek Relief, was wonderful. All kinds of pretty clothes and extra nice clothes were sent in. Those who so kindly aided in this work are especially thanked by the chairmen for their help in making a good showing for Clanton.

White Christmas For Children's Home Is Planned

Scores of children at the Methodist Children's Home at Selma, supported by the North Alabama Conference and the Alabama Conference of the Methodist Church, are again to be remembered and their needs for 1944 provided for through a "White Christmas" campaign to culminate in all Churches of Alabama and West Fla, on Sunday Dec, 19

The Board of Directors of this Home, which includes leaders of Methodism in both conferences, has sent out a call to all Methodists of the state to respond liberally with contributions for the care of the boys and girls in this Home all of whom are either full orphans or part orphans And in this connection it is pointed out that the most tragic group of children here is the one that comes from the broken home. Children from these homes feel that no one in the world wants them.

K. E. Cooper of Birmingham, chairman of the Board, and Dr S O Kimbrough of Anniston, vice chairman, in their call for the White Christmas campaign point out that many improvements are needed including the need of furniture for the boys' cottages. They also call attention to the fact that operating expenses are almost double what they were five years ago, and declare that the Methodist Children's Home must pull out from its place on the bottof of the list among Church supported Homes, and become an Institution of which Methodists of Alabama will be proud.

White Christmas Campaign headquarters have been opened at 507 1st National Bank Building, Birmingham with Mrs O H Horton in charge, any information with reference to this Children's Home, of to the campaign, will be cheerfully given, and supplies for carrying on the campaign in the churches will be sent out from here to all who may make a request for such material.

Week of Prayer And Offering For Foreign Missions

Baptist people around the world will unite this week in prayer and giving that the rest of the world may know of God's gift of love and salvation. We look out on the nations of the world bearing burdens of anguish beyond human comprehension and we long to help. These needs will be presented with prayer and an opportunity will be given to help answer these prayers by giving of our material wealth. There will be meetings of the W M S on Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday afternoons at 3 o'clock. On Friday the women will meet at 10:30 a. m. for a 'Spend the Day' of information and prayer.

We look forward to a large attendance of the people of this community on Wednesday evening at 7:30, Dec. 1st when our young people will present a Pageant of the Nations. From many lands we will hear messages as to ways by which we can help. As we approach the Christmas season, may we feel the urge to give a real "doing without" gift - a worthy offering to the Christ on His Birthday. May our slogan this year be, "Christmas for Christ."

Suggestions To Farmers About New Milk Routes

By P. H. Smith, County Agent

A milk plant for the handling of whole milk opened at Thorsby on October 25, 1943 This is the plant we have been expecting for several months. Since opening, several routes have been established and are now operating in Chilton County. If you are interested in selling whole milk and live on one of these routes, please stop the driver and arrange for him to pick up the milk. If you do not live on a route and are interested in selling whole milk, please contact Mr W. T. Roberts, Foremost Dairies, Thorsby Ala., or contact your county Agents Office for information on how to get a rute started in your community.

The suggestions given below are for all farmers desiring to increase therease their milk during this fall and winter.

(1) Save everything that can be used for feed. If kudzu is on your farm and has been killed by frost, graze it over before the rains beat it into the ground. Graze out all fields.

(2) Plant at least one acre per cow in winter grazing crop. If not already own, plant now.

(3) In addition to the winter grazing, feed a grain mixture. Feed this grain according to the amount of milk the cow gives. Generally a good rule to follow is to feed 3 lbs. of grain feed per gallon of milk. Add one lb of salt to each 100 lbs. of home mixed grain feeds in addition to rock salt where cows can get it.

(4) Several good home grown grain feeds are listed below:

(a) When feeding soybean, cowpea, or kudzu hay:

300 lbs ground corn, 100 lbs of ground velvet beans or oats, and 100 lbs of cotton seed meal, or 400 lbs. of ground meal, 400 lbs ground corn and 100 lbs. cottonseed meal.

(b) When feeding grass hay, shucks or cottonseed hulls:

150 lbs ground corn, 100 lbs ground velvet beans or oats, and 150 lbs cottonseed meal or,:

Grind as much of the above mixture as needed in a reasonable time. Use the mixture most convenient on your farm—USE HOME GROWN FEEDS.

For further information regarding the above, contact your county Agent.

AND SMART, TOO

Jack—You look like a sensible girl. Let's get married.

Jill—Nothing doing. I'm just as sensible as I look!

Right Answer?

Jimmy was in a store with his mother when he was given some candy by one of the clerks.

"What must you say, Jimmy?" asked his mother.

Jimmy hesitated only a moment and replied, "Charge it."

Too Bad

Scrub — Is that player double jointed?

Coach—No, why?

Scrub—Well, then, I must have broken his leg when I tackled him.

Simple Reason!

Sarge—Now I want one of you fellows to explain to me why it's important not to lose your head at any time.

Rookie—Well, you'd have no place to put your helmet!

Wrong Word

Mrs.—I'm afraid our new housemaid is dishonest.

Mr.—My dear, you should never judge by appearances.

Mrs.—I don't. I judge by disappearances!

Ain't It the Truth?

Mrs. Jones—Nowadays with rationing and everything, one can't trust anybody. The grocer gave me a bad quarter this morning.

Mrs. Smith—Let me see it.

Mrs. Jones—I'm sorry, I gave it to the butcher.

Lawyers' Livelihood

Judge—Now, my man, you know that under our system you are presumed to be innocent.

Defendant—Then why all this effort to convict me?

YOU'RE WELCOME

Tramp—Can I cut your grass for a meal, ma'am?

Lady of the house—Certainly. But you needn't bother cutting it. Just eat it right off the ground if you want.

Poor Pop

Billy—I sure embarrassed my dad today.

Jimmy—How could you do that?

Billy—I offered a lady my seat in the bus.

Jimmy—I don't see why that should bother your father?

Billy—I was sitting on his lap!

But Definitely

Undertaker—Are you one of the mourners?

Stranger—I'll say—the deceased owed me ten bucks!

... Come Ye Thankful People, Come
(See Recipes Below)

Thanksgiving!

Traditional Thanksgiving turkey may this year give way to roast chicken, but the feast can have all the spirit of those you have had in former years. Though your meal may be less elaborate, every food can be done to a turn, the frills may be just as interesting, and your thanks can rise to a new height.

Let the charm of your dinner lie in its simplicity. Get the most out of your food and prepare it to deliciousness. The same vegetables that you had with turkey can go with chicken—if turnip puffs or corn pudding or squash or sweet potato and apples are a tradition in your family.

Prepare your chicken with the same care you would give turkey and it will look as nice and taste just wonderful. It's easy enough to truss chicken properly so that it will look nice. Here's one way of doing it:

Trussing Chicken.

Insert trussing needle through body of chicken below knee joint and pull cord through; continue cord through wings. Tie tightly to hold wings close to body. Stuff neck opening of chicken with stuffing and tuck neck skin under cord. Use another piece of cord, and insert needle through legs' rear joint. Stuff body cavity and truss opening with truss pins or cord. Draw cord from legs around tail piece and tie legs down close to body.

The stuffing is just as important as the chicken itself. Have it not too soggy, not too dry, and well seasoned:

Celery Stuffing.

1 cup finely chopped celery
1 tablespoon minced onion
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1 tablespoon butter or fat
⅛ teaspoon marjoram
⅛ teaspoon celery seed
Salt and pepper
Water or stock
2½ cups bread crumbs

Cook celery onion and parsley in fat for a few minutes. Add other ingredients with enough liquid to hold together and make dressing slightly moist.

Roast Chicken.

4 to 5 pound roasting chicken
Salt (⅛ to ¼ teaspoon per pound)
Stuffing
Melted fat

Singe chicken, clean, wash and dry. Rub inside with salt. Stuff lightly with celery stuffing and truss. Rub surface with unsalted fat. Place on rack in an uncovered roaster, breast up. Cover with layer of fat from body of chicken, then with a clean cloth dipped into melted, unsalted fat. Roast, uncovered, in a slow oven (300 degrees) until tender, basting occasionally with drippings. Season with additional salt when half done.

Remove cloth near end of roasting period and allow to brown. A chicken weighing 4 to 5 pounds requires 30 to 35 minutes per pound to roast. A smaller chicken 40 to 45 minutes per pound.

Cranberry Sauce has a place with all fowl, and especially in the Thanksgiving dinner:

Cranberry Sauce.

3 cups cranberries
1½ cups sugar
1 cup hot water

Put berries, sugar and water into a saucepan and let stand for 5 minutes. Then cook 5 minutes. Remove from range and let stand 5 minutes, then cook for another 5 minutes. Cool and serve with roast fowl.

Now, for the vegetables. You will probably have several kinds in mind such as:

Baked Sweet Potatoes and Apples.
(Serves 4)

2 large tart apples
2 large cold cooked sweet potatoes
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons margarine
¼ cup corn or maple syrup

Core, pare and cut apples in slices. Saute each slice in margarine until nearly soft, browning the pieces thoroughly. Cut potatoes into rather thick slices, sprinkle with salt and place a slice of fried apple on the side of each potato. Arrange in a shallow baking dish, pour syrup over all, dot with butter. Bake ½ hour in a moderate oven until potato absorbs syrup.

Two-Hour Rolls.
(Makes 12 to 16 rolls)

1 yeast cake
½ cup lukewarm water
3 cups all-purpose flour, sifted
1 level tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2 heaping tablespoons lard
½ cup milk

Dissolve yeast cake in lukewarm water. Mix dry ingredients, working in lard as for pie crust. Add milk and yeast mixture to make dough. Turn onto a floured board and knead well. Roll and cut into any shape. Let rise 2 hours. Bake 20 minutes in a hot oven (425 degrees).

Your choice for dessert may be a pumpkin pie, or perhaps an old-fashioned steamed pudding with lemon sauce:

Steamed Pudding.
(Serves 6)

1 cup bread crumbs
½ cup sour milk
¼ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 egg
½ cup sifted flour
½ teaspoon baking soda
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cinnamen
½ cup raisins
½ cup chopped nuts

Soften bread crumbs in sour milk. Cream shortening and sugar until fluffy. Add vanilla and blend. Beat egg and combine with milk and crumbs, then add to first mixture. Sift dry ingredients and spices, add raisins and nuts and combine with first mixture. Steam for 1 hour in a greased mold.

Lynn Says:

Conserving Fuel: You'll not only be saving on your own fuel bills but also co-operating with government requests if you save on cooking heat. Here's how:

When using oven, plan to cook several items in it at once. Meat and vegetables, and even hot bread and dessert can all be cooked in oven. It's poor economy to use both oven and surface heat to get a dinner together.

Food should be ready for oven at the same time oven is correct temperature. Do not keep opening oven door to see "how things are coming along."

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER
It was not until almost 300 years after Columbus that first commercial use was made of rubber. Native rubber articles — play balls, bowls, bottles, hats, capes and shoes—were brought to Spain and Portugal from various parts of Central and Northern South America years before the commercial merits of rubber were realized.
A rapidly growing army of more than 500 rubber-growing specialists from the U. S. is now in the Amazon rubber district expediting the collection of crude rubber and conquering the leaf disease that has taken severe toll of the jungle trees.

Paging Santa Claus

by Jane Corby

McCLURE SYNDICATE—W.N.U. FEATURES

Jan Payson lives in a small apartment with her invalid sister, Dora. Hurrying to her job at the Devon Arms hotel she steps in front of a car and is thrown down. The driver steps out to help her. There are some words, and then Jan disappears in the hotel, where her manager, Paul Harris, fires her for being late. Jan thinks the man behind the wheel is a chauffeur, but Paul recognizes him as Tony Deverest, a social lion, as he stands talking to Molly, the telephone operator, shortly after the accident. Deverest is angry when he hears Jan has been fired, so Paul gives Jan the lead part in the hotel floor show, and gets Mary Elizabeth Howard, a smart dressmaker, to outfit Jan.

CHAPTER II

"That's just it," broke in Jan eagerly. "This seems such an expensive dress. I don't know that I can afford . . ."

"Oh, you're not paying for it yourself. Didn't Paul Harris tell you?"

Jan turned back to the mirror to hide her expression. There it was again! That secret, knowing look that she had surprised on Paul's face more than once since that incredible moment on Thanksgiving afternoon when he had told her she was to have a part in the floor show.

In the days that followed Jan found herself far too busy to follow any clues to the mystery that surrounded her. She and Dora lived in a kind of ecstasy.

Jan knew that Paul Harris was disappointed in the crowd that had turned out for the opening, but she had no idea of the extent of that disappointment. A week later his bitterness had grown to such proportions that he had decided to do something about it.

But—and he hated to admit it—he could not bring himself to ask the fragile Dora to go back to that miserable hovel from which he had rescued her. It must be that he was getting soft-hearted, and Paul had not been troubled that way in years. There was a flowerlike quality in Dora's white face and her pain-widened blue eyes that reminded him—yes, it did—of Helen.

The situation was complicated. It made his manner all the more brusque now that a crisis in the form of Mary Elizabeth Howard had arrived. She would have to be paid in some way for Jan's outfit.

"I didn't act hastily," he now told the dress designer, "because sometimes these things take a few days to straighten themselves out. But I've finished waiting. This is the end."

"And what about me?" Mary Elizabeth inquired smoothly.

"You won't lose by it," Paul assured her. "I'm the one who has lost. Her salary—that suite they have." He broke off as Jan, with a laughing remark to the operator, stepped out of the elevator.

"Miss Payson!" Paul called to her, reproof for her untimely laughter in every syllable.

Mary Elizabeth eyed the girl as she approached and almost forgot the annoyance the whole incident had caused her, in admiration of her own handiwork. The girl—in the mid-winter costume Mary Elizabeth Howard, Inc., had designed—was lovely. What a pity she hadn't made good!

Jan, who had been ready to dance across the lobby for delight when she first stepped out of the elevator, felt a sudden chill at Paul's tone. She had been on her way to buy a brand new kitten for Dora.

The uniformed man at the hotel entrance, reaching out a gloved hand at this precise moment, set the revolving door spinning, and it spun William Anthony Deverest, correctly hatted and coated, into the lobby. There he paused, glancing involuntarily toward the magazine stand. The dark girl there, who looked up with obvious interest, made him turn quickly the other way. And then he saw her!

Or was that the girl he had last seen breathless, mud-stained and reproachful? Why, she was beautiful! Seen from the side this way, she seemed, standing still as she was, to be poised for flight, her face uptilted, her lips parted eagerly. Then she turned toward him so that he saw her face. She was in trouble!

Paul was saying, indeed, that he "was disappointed, greatly disappointed, Miss Payson. After all, William Anthony Deverest might have found it impossible to be present on the opening night, but a whole week had gone by and he had never even looked in at the roof garden!"

Jan, dazedly trying to figure out why she should be held accountable for Mr. Deverest's absence, looked away from Paul, seeking enlightenment from her surroundings. Her eyes encountered the gaze of the tall young man near the magazine counter who was staring as if he knew her. And she had certainly seen him somewhere! Oh, yes, that careless chauffeur who got her into difficulties on Thanksgiving Day!

She smiled faintly and Paul, waiting for her reply, caught the smile and followed her glance. Further caustic words died in his throat and he seized Miss Howard firmly by the elbow and propelled her rapidly toward the office.

"What—what's the matter?" Mary Elizabeth protested.

Paul put his lips close to her ear. "William Anthony Deverest," he whispered.

And Miss Howard, looking over her shoulder, departed docilely enough.

"You are Jan, aren't you?" he inquired. How tall he was! Jan raised her golden eyes for a brief instant to his interested gray ones and nodded.

"But how did you know my name?"

"It's quite a long story. I found it out when I came to ask you to dinner as a sort of apology for my clumsiness, that day. Though it's a little late, I still owe you that apology. Will you . . .?"

"I was on my way to buy a kitten," Jan demurred, walking toward the door. "And I haven't much time for dinner. I have to get ready for the show."

Jan laughed and he suddenly decided she looked even more irresistible than when she was sad. "You had your chauffeur's cap with you on Thanksgiving, of course. But you weren't in uniform that day, either. You must have a pretty nice boss."

"He—he's abroad," Deverest said absently. He led the way to the car, but Jan shook her head.

"The shop is only around the corner. My, that's a beautiful car!" she said appreciatively. "W-A-D—initials are so funny when they spell a word!"

"William Anthony Deverest," she repeated aloud, turning a frightened face to the man beside her.

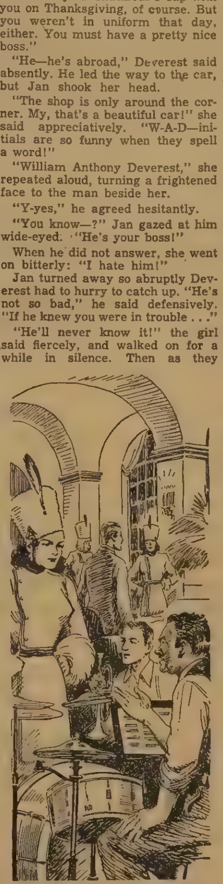
"Y-yes," he agreed hesitantly.

"You know—?" Jan gazed at him wide-eyed. "He's your boss!"

When he did not answer, she went on bitterly: "I hate him!"

Jan turned away so abruptly Deverest had to hurry to catch up. "He's not so bad," he said defensively. "If he knew you were in trouble . . ."

"He'll never know it!" the girl said fiercely, and walked on for a while in silence. Then as they reached the corner, "Here's the pet shop. Isn't that the most adorable kitten you ever saw? By the way, what's your name?"



"Mr. Harris very displeased," he observed deliberately.

"My—my name?" the man stammered. "Oh! Tony — Tony Williams. Say, don't hold my boss against me. That dinner date means a lot to me."

Jan, gurgling at the kitten, missed his intent pleading glance. "You can have a sandwich with me in the cafeteria," she promised; "if you like the kitten. But if you complain about a flea or two, the party's off."

She walked ahead of him through the door and, grinning, Tony followed.

There was a question in Dora's blue eyes as she raised them from the calendar which she had been marking on her knee.

"Only a few more days to Christmas, Jan!" she said absently, her gaze following Jan's movements as she took another evening dress from the closet.

Jan smiled at her sister. She smiled a great deal nowadays, and Dora thought she looked happy even when she was not smiling. Well, if it made Jan happy to go out all the time, Dora put it to herself, with this wonderful Tony Williams, she would be happy about it too.

"Has Paul been to see you lately?" inquired Jan with elaborate unconcern.

The delicate wild-rose color that tinted Dora's pale cheeks gave her her answer even before her sister said: "Well, he was here yesterday. He could only stay a few minutes."

"And wasn't he here the day before?"

"Well, yes," said Dora. "I believe he was."

"And what about the day before yesterday—and don't you expect him today?"

"You're teasing me," Dora protested, pretending to be annoyed.

Zambrini, when he had dismissed the chorus and turned his attention to her, had no fault to find with Jan's rendition of the cute Jingle Bells song which she had been assigned. She was drawing a deep breath of relief after the song was over when the orchestra leader looked at her sharply.

"Mr. Harris very displeased," he observed deliberately. "He say to me—'What's wrong with the show, Zambrini? Why we no get big society parties, lots of crowd?' I tell him it's my business to put on a good show; it's not my business to bring in customers."

"I should think not," said Jan uncertainly, "that's all any of us can do—put on as good a show as possible."

Zambrini shook his head. "Mr. Harris—maybe he's wrong," he continued as if Jan had not spoken. "But Mr. Harris, he still the boss. He thinks we should have more customers. Maybe he thinks we should bring them in ourselves."

"Why—" began Jan.

"You know this Mr. Demares'?" said Zambrini. "The girls gossip—they say you know him. Well, why does not Mr. Demares' come to see the show? He like it, he bring his friends. He has plenty friends. The show a big success then. I pleased, you pleased, Mr. Harris pleased."

Jan had listened, bewildered, to this sudden attack. What could Zambrini mean? What did everybody mean? Linking her constantly with this unknown William Anthony Deverest!

"I'll see Paul right now," she promised, and turned away.

Slowly as she walked, she arrived at Paul Harris' office at last and her sudden wild hope that he would not be there was dashed by his invitation to enter.

"Paul, I've been talking to Zambrini. He—he said something about your being disappointed in the way the show was pulling."

Paul stared at her a minute and then said crisply: "Sit down, Miss Payson. I've been wanting to have a talk with you for quite a while and I think this is as good a time as any. You are a fair dancer and your voice is good. But there are a hundred other girls who are just as talented, or perhaps more so. Yet I picked you without a trial from among the hundreds of girls who would have considered it an honor to be a star in the Devon Arms' Christmas show. Why did I do it?"

"I—I don't know, Paul."

"Well, I'll tell you. I did it because of your friendship with one of the best known men in town—William Anthony Deverest. I've seen it happen before—a girl in the show knows a man like him, he brings a lot of his friends in to see her; they bring their friends and," he threw up his hands in a gesture, "there you are."

"But—"

"But what happens to me?" Paul said. "I hire the girl, I put her in the show and she never asks her boy friend to come in even once. He stays away; his friends stay away; everybody stays away."

Paul threw down the paper cutter with which he had been toying and walked over to the window in disgust. Jan dared raise her eyes finally and studied his slim back in its faultlessly tailored morning coat. She was trying, in the space of a few seconds, to make a decision that would most certainly affect not only her own life, but Dora's.

She could not do it! At whatever cost to herself, she must encourage Paul to believe this fairy story a little while longer.

"I'm sorry, Paul," she said hesitantly. "Mr.—Mr. Deverest hasn't been feeling very well."

It sounded lame, even to herself, but Paul accepted it and turned to her with new eagerness. "Then you'll see that he comes in?"

"Why, yes. At least I'll try."

Paul beamed with delight and escorted her to the door with a flourish. At another time she would have been amused at his sudden transition to the perfect maitre d'hotel, but now she was too miserable to see anything funny about it.

By the time the show was over and she was dressing to meet Tony she had arrived at only one clear decision. She would tell him the whole story and perhaps he would think of some way in which they could manage to satisfy Paul.

"We're stepping out tonight," Tony said, offering her his arm. "I have the car outside and we're going over to the little dance place across the river. Ever been there?"

Jan shook her head and fell in step beside him, her heart heavy again.

"But, Tony, can you afford this?"

As he turned a startled face to hers she colored and added, "I mean I would be just as satisfied to—to go to a movie or something."

"Why, you funny little thing." His hand touched hers briefly and reassuringly and then pressed a button and started the car purring softly. "Don't you worry about me and don't you worry about us taking this car, either. In spite of the way you feel about him, my boss is fairly decent and he wouldn't mind this sort of thing at all."

When armored knights met, it was customary for each knight to raise the visor of his helmet as a means of identification. This gesture has come down through all armies in the form of the salute. Traditional, too, is the Army man's preference for Camel cigarettes. With men in the Army, Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard, actual sales records in their service stores show that Camel is the favorite. It's one of the favorite gifts with service men. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

"FOLKS & THINGS"

We're sorry to hear of the illness of Ralph Bryan. He is confined to his home at present. Latest report is that he is better and we sincerely hope that he will be up and about before long. Clanton just ain't Clanton, if you don't bump into Ralph down town once in a while.

Look Out! You'll run into that fellow with the platter of fresh pork and knock it all over the sidewalk. We don't know what the statistics show, but we'll bet a dollar to a burnt doughnut that more pork was raised in Chilton this year than in many a moon. Everyway you turn you see a man with a platter of fresh pork, running hither and yon. Wish one would run down our alley.

The Yanks have landed in Clanton. No sooner had Melvin Mims moved in and taken over than John VanDerveer breezed into town from the Arizona desert. Before the handshaking was all over Burt Allison hove into sight looking fresh and healthy as could be. Now when you see kakie uniforms huddled on three Cafe stools, no plotting is going on, you needn't call out the Marines. It's just these three catching up on their gossip and their coffee drinking.

One never knows who will be next. We can hardly believe that Percy Pitts is dead. Little more than a year ago Percy travelled to Birmingham to sing, with others, at the funeral of our Father. We were very grateful to them all. Such work is purely a labor of love for one's fellow man. Now Percy has crossed into "The Valley of Shadows," and is surely resting in the shade of those thousands of good turns done for others, during his sojourn here. Peace be to his Soul. Our deepest sympathy goes out to his wife and children in their darkest moment.

Life, Liberty and the persuit of Happiness—Could anything bring this thought more forcefully to mind than these brisk, cold, November mornings in Chilton county? Mindful, of course, of the thousands of our boys on the Fronts all over the world who are unable, for the present, to enjoy these fine mornings.

The day will come, however, in the not too distant future, when things here are again, as they were. When all is peace and contentment. When these same 'boys' can thrill to the beauty of Chilton's autumn mornings, and go his way, safe and secure, in his God given heritage—Life, Liberty, and the persuit of Happiness.

Mr. W. H. Barber, vice-president of Foremost Dairies came to see us last week. Mr Barber is a very human and likable individual and will make friends with the people of Chilton County. He was on an inspection tour of the district and especially the Condensary at Thorsby. Mr. Barber says that the Condensary acts as any other large busines in producing a payroll running to several thousands of dollars each month, to the farmers of Chilton County. The Foremost Condensary at Thorsby is justified in the complete backing of this county and we hope that the farmers realize the benefits and improve their milk stock to meet the specifications of this new industry.

What we said week before last was:

"This juvenile delinquency talk reminds us of what Mark Twain said about the weather: Everyone is talking about it but nobody doing anything about it."

Even a child could understand what we meant by those lines.

But—Here's the way the "Man on the Corner" twisted it around:

"My fellow columnist in the Chilton County News passes off the matter of juvenile delinquency by saying it is like Mark Twain's weather verbage, assuming, I presume, that it is merely a natural trend and that it is foolishness for us even to speak of doing anything about it. When such notable authorities as J. Edgar Hoover become alarmed over a national situation, is it not time we all should consider it more seriously than we do the weather? If we love our children and are interested in their future welfare as well as the moral stability of our nation in years to come, it is high time we were facing this questinn squarely anddoing something about it. Our homes are the first place and our schools and churches are next."

Hometown Paper
LOCAL BOY DECORATED IN ITALY!
GREYHOUND SERVES NEW WAR PLANT

Every hour of the day headline news of overwhelming interest to every person in Alabama is being made all over the world. But without our modern communication systems and particularly our newspapers it would be next to impossible to find out what's going on.

Getting even closer to home, we wouldn't know what local boys are back on furlough—what the ball scores are—who's getting married and when—what's happening in the comic-strip world—what events are taking place all over town.

All of us should feel proud of the fine job newspapers are doing to keep Alabama in touch with the times. It's a strong and free press, serving free people—one of the first things the dictators would suppress if they had the chance! And it would be hard to overestimate the part played by Alabama's great dailies and weekly newspapers in furthering the war effort. Nearly a million people buy these papers—far greater numbers read them—the whole State relies upon them for information and inspiration.

For this reason Greyhound depends upon such newspapers as this one to carry its information on bus service to those Alabamians who travel. Greyhound, in turn, carries many newspapers to rural areas not served by any other transportation system.

As fellow citizens of this State, the Greyhound Lines take much plea helping to make near neighb good neighbors of all the com we serve in Alabama—linking each other and to the rest of the country, as newspapers do.

What's Doing At Isabella High

The local Future Farfers of America met at the Ag. Building Thursday of last week at the usual hour. The principal purpose of this meeting was to initiate 9 candidates for the Chapter Farmer Degree. The basic requirements for the degree of Chapter Farmer, (second lowest in the organization), are that the boy be enrolled in at least his second year in vocational agriculture, be outstanding in various activities, and have at least $25 in the bank or productively invested in some project.

The following boys of the Isabella Chapter were awarded this degree last week, entitling them to wear the silver emblem pin of a chapter Farmer: Jerome Conway, James Owen, Calvin Rasberry, Hershell Patterson, Earl Wilkins, Arthur Tucker, Junior Sims, Delmer Williams, and C. F. Gandy.

If you are looking for some real, down-to-earth enjoyfent, grab your hat and head for the gym by 7:30 Wednesday night, December 1. This is the date set for that big basketball game between the Beta Club girls and the women of the community. Incidently, there is some pretty promising basketball material in this bunch of girls, and they're really working to get ready for this game with the women, because they know that those women won't be so easy to beat. Last year, the girls won, but their mothers may be out to show them a thing or so. Anyway, it should be gobs of fun —lets come out and see. The game is to begin promptly at 7:30 p. m. Eats will also be served.

The Jr. I Class has charge of Chapel last week and presented an interesting little program, giving the history of, and dramatizing the signing of the Mayflower Compact and the landing of the Pilgrims in America. Such programs as this are beneficial, and Mrs Brown and her Jr. I's are to be complimented for their efforts.

Campus gossip two years ago: Willodean's bangs have drawn a lot of attention. It's a queer world, ain't it? Dorothy McLendon and Hansel Grooms seem to have a lot in common these days. It seems that Agnes Mims is inclined to make faces at the bus driver. Ask Melvin Devaughn. Billy McLendon's worried look lately was justified.. Or did you see Mrs Oden going down the road with a shotgun under her arm?

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Fighting See-Saws in Southern Italy As Nazis Prepare for Allied Landing; Reds Capture Important Rail Lines; Food Subsidy War Continues to Rage

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

South Pacific—This picture shows some of the devastation U. S. bombers have caused in Japan's big shipping and air base of Rabaul, feeder point for enemy forces operating in New Guinea and the Solomons. In a recent attack, fighter planes from aircraft carriers protected land-based bombers in their assaults on Rabaul.

Their footing on the southwest shore of Bougainville secure, U. S. troops were being re-enforced for their push inland against the 40,000 Japs reportedly clinging to their last major stronghold in the Solomons. The U. S. brought fighter planes into the action to bomb and machine gun enemy positions hewn into the jungle.

Since Pearl Harbor, a naval spokesman reported 67 U. S. warships sunk: one battleship, four aircraft carriers, nine cruisers, 39 destroyers and 14 submarines.

ITALY:

Fighting See-Saws

Fighting in the mountains see-sawed in southern Italy as the Germans cleared sections of the west coast to the north in anticipation of Allied landings from fleets which they reported were massed in Naples.

Bitter fighting marked the mountain warfare in the Mignano region, where the Germans were guarding the pass leading into the level plain stretching approximately 80 miles to the north to Rome.

One U. S. company alone used 500 hand grenades in the close, rough encounters along the rocky slopes. Anchored in six-foot-deep tunnels securely thatched with heavy timbers and sand bags, the Nazis held strong positions, relatively secure from dive-bombings or artillery fire, but sometimes open to attacks from the side or rear.

SUBSIDIES:

Fight On

With other branches of agriculture, representatives of the livestock trade spearheaded the attack against the administration's subsidy program before the senate agriculture committee. On November 1, President Roosevelt had called on congress to continue government payments to encourage production and reduce consumer costs through retail price reductions, announcing the program now runs the U. S. 800 million dollars annually.

Frank Boice of the American Livestock association told the senate committee subsidies for reducing retail meat prices will save the consumer barely $2 annually. P. O. Wilson of the joint livestock committee declared cattle producers were never consulted on establishment of meat price ceilings.

Opposition to subsidies also was registered by the Grocery Manufacturers of America, representative of 85 per cent of the nation's processed food producers. The organization stated that price control of its products on a subsidy basis was unsound because the cost would have to be repaid in taxation, plus administration expense of the program.

RUSSIA:

Near Poland

Slowly, Russian troops were bending the center of the Nazi battle line back to the pre-war Polish border, with the Reds no less than 50 miles distant from the old boundary at two points west of Kiev.

In addition, the Russ were snapping important rail lines hooking up Nazi forces in the north and south.

To the south, the Germans reported 500,000 Russ attacking at Krivoi Rog, big mine center where the Nazis stopped the Reds' surge through the Ukraine when it threatened to trap huge forces in the Dnieper river bend.

In Washington, D. C., it was announced Russian armies had been aided by the lend-lease of 6,500 planes and more than 3,000 tanks in the two years ended September 30.

WHISKY BUSINESS:

Senate to Investigate

Frederick Van Nuys

Charged with hoarding whisky stocks to evade taxation and raise prices, big distillers were to be called to Washington, D. C., before a senate subcommittee to explain alleged shortages despite reported inventories of five or six years.

Said Senator Frederick Van Nuys, Indiana: "We know that some of the big corporations, which have been buying up little distilleries, are keeping liquor in the warehouses eight or ten years, when most liquor does not age perceptibly after four years."

Senator Van Nuys said other phases of the investigation will concern the practice of distilleries selling inventories to stockholders, and the alleged mixture of straight whisky with 70 per cent neutral spirits for sale under strange brand names to evade price ceilings.

AGRICULTURE:

Assured of Fertilizer

As manufacturers, the army and Tennessee Valley authority have entered into an agreement with the War Production board to supply 625,000 tons of nitrogen for agriculture for the 1943-'44 season.

Under the agreement, the army will realize $47.50 per ton on the nitrogen on an f.o.b. basis, with TVA selling the fertilizer. In certain southern states, Associated Cooperatives, Inc., will act as distributors, and in all other states east of the Rocky mountains, TVA will sell the product through brokers designated by WPB.

To manufacture the nitrogen, the army will operate its marginal facilities for ammonium nitrate, and TVA will furnish specifications for the conditioning materials necessary for a fertilizer nitrate.

Hog Marketing

With a 1943 spring pig crop of 74,050,000, the government is making every effort to assure an orderly marketing of hogs and prevent heavy runs in December and January. To achieve this end, industry representatives have banded into committees at 14 key terminal centers to advise producers on shipments. As a further aid, the War Food administration will release marketing instructions through press and radio.

Complicating the marketing situation is the fact that the record pig crop must be handled in the face of strained transportation facilities and manpower shortages. Storage of the pork and by-products for civilian, military and lend-lease use also will tax refrigerator capacity.

It is pointed out that orderly marketing will assure producers of 200 to 270-pound weights of the minimum government support price of $13.75, Chicago basis.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

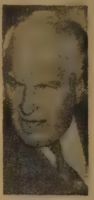
SACRIFICE: Crewmen of a Flying Fortress in England saved the town of Wargrave from heavy damage at the cost of their own lives. They guided the plane, which was just taking off on a raid, over the housetops, and jettisoned their bombs in the river, just before the plane exploded. One man parachuted to safety, but the others were killed.

REWARD: An 11-year-old New York office boy, earning $5 a week, found a pouch containing some jewels. They were diamond rings and pins valued at $115,000. He received nine crisp $100 bills, and two fifties.

HELP WANTED: For the first time in the history of the anthracite coal industry, mine operators are advertising for mine workers in the newspapers.

Farm Speculation



Guy Gillette

To prevent "destructive speculation," Senator Guy Gillette, Iowa, has introduced legislation under which a seller would pay a 10 per cent resale transfer tax on the purchase price of farm land, when the property has been acquired after the passage of the act and resold within a year. The legislation would expire two years after the war. Under another plan, Gillette said, profit on a transaction would be absorbed by a tax ranging up to 100 per cent.

NATIONAL GRANGE:

Goss Re-elected

Meeting in Grand Rapids, Mich., for its 77th annual convention, the National Grange re-elected Albert Goss, Washington, D. C., as master.

Goss highlighted the convention by calling for congressional revision of the present parity formula, which, he asserted, fails to include farm labor costs; wrongly assumes that farm income for the base period of 1909-'14 was in proper proportion to non-farm income; is based upon price rather than income, and is obsolete because the relative value of commodities has changed greatly in recent years.

Also elected were David Agans, Three Bridges, N. H., overseer; W. G. Armstrong, Niles, Mich., treasurer; Harry C. Caton, Coshocton, Ohio, secretary; and Mrs. Bessie Seebert, Chichako, Okla.; Mrs. Blanche D. Newsom, Columbus, Ind.; Mrs. Alice Pearson, Miami, Fla.; and Eugene A. Eckert, Mascoutah, Ill., national committeemen.

WORLD RELIEF:

Study Financing

While President Roosevelt called upon congress to authorize appropriations to finance America's share of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration, the UNRRA considered various proposals for raising funds to carry out the program during its meetings in Atlantic City, N. J.

Saying it is hoped "a small fraction of the national income" of the contributing member nations of the UNRRA will be sufficient for its work, President Roosevelt defined the organization's purpose as an endeavor "to help the liberated peoples to help themselves, so that they may have the strength to undertake the task of rebuilding their destroyed homes, their ruined factories, and their plundered farms."

UNRRA studied three proposals for raising funds: 1. Assessment of member nations on the basis of per capita income; 2. Member nations' contributions of 1 per cent of their national income; 3. Assessments against foreign trade figures of the member nations.

U. S. PLANES:

'Wings on Guns'

So well are U. S. fighting planes armed, that it can be said American engineers are designing guns and putting wings on them.

With that statement, Army Air Force Technician Col. Frank C. Wolfe listed 19 reasons for U. S. planes' tremendous firepower.

Among the reasons were hydraulic and electrically operated gun turrets with multiple gun installations; increased firepower for nose and tail positions of all types of bombers; improved computing sights for all gun positions; fighter gun sights which extend present sighting ranges; improvements in armor plate and bullet resistant glass; remote control and fire control systems.

No less than 70 types of aircraft are being tested at army fields, Colonel Wolfe said, with approved types sent to battle zones for additional tryouts before being finally put into production.

John Bricker

Three times governor of Ohio, John W. Bricker formally announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for President. During his tenure as Ohio's chief executive, the state's debt has been cut 22 million dollars, and a 24 million dollar post-war building and highway fund has been set up from surplus. Announcing his candidacy, Bricker said: "We must keep ourselves strong, liberty-loving, self-governing and use that power and influence throughout the world to bring about better international relations and to prevent the deadly destruction of war."

BULL:

A prize Holstein bull sold for $26,000 at a national blue ribbon sale, the highest price since 1919, when King Sylvia went for $106,000. The highly valued sire is Carnation Madcap Supreme. He is 16 months old. A cow sold for $10,000, next highest price at the sale. An average of $3,280 was established after the first 20 head were sold.

The champion Hereford bull, T. Royal Rupert 60th, has been insured for $25,000, largest policy ever taken out on a bull.

IT'S one of the tales that people of the entertainment world will be telling years from now—that Abbott and Costello story. Last March, when Costello was stricken with rheumatic fever, and doctors said that he would never walk again, Abbott was urged to get himself a new partner. He refused. He went off the air, stopped all picture work. He and Lou had been partners in pictures and radio for 13 years, he was sure that Lou would recover, and he'd wait. His faith was justified last September, when Lou took 60 steps, one for each year of the birthday anniversary his mother was celebrating. They're back on the air now, start a picture late this month. But Fate again has dealt cruelly with the roly-poly comic, for his infant son, Lou Costello Jr., was drowned in the family swimming pool three hours before his adoring dad went on the air, brushed the tears aside and laughed as loud as he could on a coast-to-coast hookup.

"Youth in Crisis," the latest March of Time release, is going to startle a lot of complacent people. Dramatically, movingly, it tells the story of what is happening to our young people because of the disruptions and excitement of war. Dealing with the same problem, RKO Radio is making "Are These Our Children?" Ruth Clifton, 18-year-old high school girl who originated the famous Moline Plan, has been brought to Hollywood to confer with California officials and to act as technical advisor on the film.

TRUTHFULNESS AT ALL TIMES

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:16; 23:1, 7; Matthew 5:33-37; John 8:42-45.

GOLDEN TEXT—Wherefore putting away lying speak every man truth with his neighbor: for we are members one of another.—Ephesians 4:25.

God hates all kinds of dishonesty—a fact which is emphasized by the additional commandment regarding truthfulness which is before us in this lesson.

God is truth, that is, the very essence of His nature is truth. In Him is no darkness at all (I John 1:5). Lying or false witness therefore reveals a character opposite to God. Hence we are not surprised to find in our lesson that Satan is a liar and the father of lies, and that liars are his children.

I. The Nature of a Lie (Exod. 20:16; 23:1, 7).

The commandment against false witness brings before us one form of lying—for it has to do with perjury, that is, the telling of an untruth in court.

This is one of the worst forms of lying, because it may result in the one against whom it is practiced losing his liberty, his life or his property. It may mean the destruction of his good reputation.

It is obvious, however, that the commandment covers all forms of lying, whether in business, in social contacts, in the home, or in the church. We might do well to consider what the Bible has to say about whisperers, talebearers, backbiters, and others (see Lev. 19:6; II Cor. 12:20). A man's reputation may be as easily ruined by a whispered lie over the back fence or the luncheon table as by formal perjury in the courtroom. "Thou shalt not bear false witness" at any time, anywhere, or in any way.

II. The Practice of Lying (Matt. 5:33-37).

The people of our Lord's day (and who can say that the custom has stopped) were in the habit of telling lies and then trying to make others believe them by an oath.

They would swear by heaven, or the throne of God, or some other sacred thing, and thus try to enforce their false word by some great authority.

The liar is always under necessity of doing something—perhaps telling another lie—to cover his falsehood. When his comfort or advantage seems to be endangered because he is not believed, he brings an oath to bear upon his statement.

Jesus taught the great virtue of simple living and simple speech. A plain "yes" or "no" is usually sufficient for the situation. Qualifying words are apt to lead us astray. The life of a Christian should be so true and above board that no oath should be needed to assure one of his sincerity and honesty.

Since not all are Christians, it is a necessity that men be placed under some kind of oath or affirmation in judicial matters. Hence we need not interpret this Scripture as forbidding an oath in court.

It may be well to say a word about swearing in general. It is all too common among men, women and children. No Christian should ever be guilty of it, or that which sounds like it. We need admonition and correction at that point.

III. The Source of All Lies (John 8:42-45).

The devil is a liar, and the father of lies. Liars are members of his family. Jesus said it, "Ye are of your father the devil."

Liars had better consider their "family tree" and see how they like their spiritual father. He is lustful, murderous, and there is no truth in him (v. 44). If you belong to that family would you not like to change families and be born again into God's family?

Sadly enough the constant lying of the world seems to have infected the minds and hearts of Christians. Instead of being cleansed from this worldly defilement they carry its awful tendencies into the church. Is it not too true that gossip (which is almost always lying), false witness, the tearing down of someone's good name, is all too common in the church?

The great lie within the church, and one of Satan's prize exhibits, is the falsehood of modern religious liberalism (so-called) which is essentially a denial of real New Testament Christianity. Jesus said (v. 42) that if God is our Father we will accept Him as the Christ. The one who speaks sweet words about the example, the manhood, the leadership of the Master and who denies Him His place as God is clearly in mind here as a follower of the father of lies.

Note that in verses 45-47 Jesus challenges His enemies to convict Him of sin or of falsehood. No one has ever been able to meet that challenge.

The claims he made for Himself as the Son of God and the Saviour of the world are plain and unmistakable. If we deny them we either make Jesus a liar, or we lie ourselves, and it is obvious that the latter is the case

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY O'HARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin can ride any horse on his family's Wyoming ranch, but he wants a colt of his own. His father, a retired army officer, refuses to give him one when he learns that Ken has not been promoted. But his mother convinces Captain McLaughlin that the colt may be just what Ken needs. He has a hard time choosing his colt until he sees the yearling filly of a "loco" mare named Rocket. Loco is the horse breeder's name for a no-good, untamable horse. Now Ken has come to the breakfast table beaming with joy and simply dying to tell someone of his discovery of Rocket and her colt.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER VII

If you can raise good calves and colts on it, I guess you can raise boys, Nell reasoned. And McLaughlin, with a long line of oat-eating Scotch ancestors behind his brawn and toughness, agreed.

With the oatmeal there was always a big pitcher of yellow Guernsey cream and a bowl of brown sugar. Nell, smiling, pushed them toward Ken, noticing the unusual color in his face. The boy flashed a glance at his mother; his eyes were dark with excitement. His whole face was lit up—transfigured really—and she felt a slight sense of shock. What had happened? He had been different all week, more sure of himself, more alert and happy, but this—

Rob McLaughlin was looking at Ken too, not missing a thing. Something had happened that morning on the range—

"What horse did you ride?" asked he.

"Lady."

"And where is she now? On her way to the border?" jocularly.

"I put her in the Home Pasture. She's out there at the fountain now."

"Was she hot?"

"No, sir, I cooled her off coming home." There was a little smile of pride on Ken's face, and Nell thought, all the right answers, so far.

The examination went on. "Did you give her a good workout?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then don't ride her again today. Take Baldy if you want a horse."

"Yes, sir."

"Break anything? Lose anything?"

"No, sir."

Rob laughed. He leaned over and patted Ken on the head. "Good work, young man—coming along!"

Ken burst out laughing. He was so excited it was hard to sit still and answer properly. He wasn't going to tell about his colt yet—not till tomorrow when the week was up. But it was hard to hold it in, hard not to jump up and run around the kitchen, shouting and crowing. Anyway—he could tell about Rocket—

"I didn't lose anything, I found something!" He boasted, shoveling in big spoonfuls of oatmeal. "I found Rocket. She's back."

When Ken went to bed that night, he kissed his mother, and then threw his arms around her and held her hard for a moment.

Smiling, she put her hand on his head. "Well, Kennie—" her violet eyes were soft and understanding.

He went upstairs, smiling back at her over his shoulder, having a secret with her. He knew that she knew.

He lit the candle in his room and stood staring at the flickering light. This was like a last day. The last day before school is out, or before Christmas, or before his mother came back after a visit in the East. Tomorrow was the day when, really, his life would begin. He would get his colt.

He couldn't quite remember the color of her. Orange—pink—tangerine color—tail and mane white, like the hair of an Albino boy at school. Albino—of course, her grandsire was the Albino—the famous Albino stud. He felt a little uneasiness at this; the Albino blood wasn't safe blood for a filly to have. But perhaps she hadn't much of it. Perhaps the cream tail and mane came from Banner, her sire. Banner had a cream tail and mane too when he was a colt; lots of sorrel colts had. He hoped she would be docile and good—not like Rocket. Which would she take after? Rocket? Or Banner? He hadn't had time to get a good look into her eyes.

Ken began to undress. Walking around his room, his eyes caught sight of the pictures on the wall—they didn't interest him.

The speed of her! She had run away from Banner. He kept thinking about that. It hardly seemed possible. His father always said Rocket was the fastest horse on the ranch, and new Rocket's filly had run away from Banner.

Riding down the mountain that day Ken had traced back all his recollections of her. The summer before, when he and Howard had seen the spring colts, he hadn't especially noticed her. He remembered that he had seen her even before that, soon after she was born. He had been out with Gus, one day, in the meadow, during the spring holiday. They were clearing some driftwood out of the irrigation ditch, and they had seen Rocket standing in a gully on the hillside, quiet for once, and eyeing them cautiously.

"Ay bet she got a colt," said Gus; and they walked carefully up the draw. Rocket gave a wild snort, thrust her feet out, shook her head wickedly, then fled away. And as they reached the spot, they saw standing there the wavering, pinkish colt, barely able to keep its feet. It gave a little squeak and started after its mother on crooked, wobbling legs.

"Yee whiz! Luk at de little flicka!" said Gus.

"What does flicka mean, Gus?"

"Swedish for little gurl, Ken—"

He had seen the filly again late in the fall. She was half pink, half yellow—with streaked untidy looking hair. She was awkward and ungainly, with legs too long, haunches a little too high.

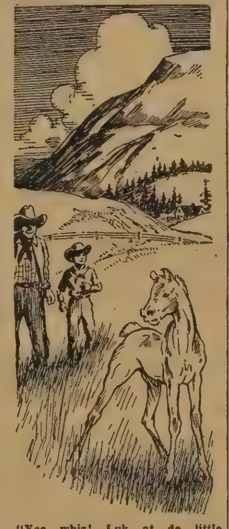
And then he had gone away to school and hadn't seen her again until now—she ran away from Banner—Her eyes—they had looked like balls of fire this morning. What color were they? Banner's were brown with flecks of gold, or gold with flecks of brown—Her speed and her delicate curving lines made him think of a greyhound he had seen running once, but really she was more like just a little girl than anything—the way her face looked, and the way her blonde hair blew—a little girl—

Ken blew out the light and got into bed, and before the smile had faded from his face, he was asleep—

"I'll take that sorrel filly of Rocket's; the one with the cream tail and mane."

Ken made his announcement at the breakfast table.

After he spoke there was a moment's astonished silence. Nell groped for recollection, and said, "A sorrel filly? I can't seem to remember that one at all—what's her name?"



"Yee whiz! Luk at de little flicka!" said Gus.

But Rob remembered. The smile faded from his face as he looked at Ken. "Rocket's filly, Ken?"

"Yes, sir." Ken's face changed too. There was no mistaking his father's displeasure.

"I was hoping you'd make a wise choice. You know what I think of Rocket—that whole line of horses—"

Ken looked down; the color ebbed from his cheeks. "She's fast, Dad, and Rocket's fast—"

"It's the worst line of horses I've got. There's never one amongst them with real sense. The mares are hellions and the stallions outlaws; they're untamable."

"I'll tame her."

Rob guffawed. "Not I, nor anyone, has ever been able to really tame any one of them."

Kennie's chest heaved.

"Better change your mind, Ken. You want a horse that'll be a real friend to you, don't you?"

"Yes—" Kennie's voice was unsteady.

"Well, you'll never make a friend of that filly. Last fall after all the colts had been weaned and separated from their dams, she and Rocket got back together—no fence'll hold 'em—she's all out and scarred up already from tearing through barbed wire after that wild mother of hers."

Kennie looked stubbornly at his plate.

"Change your mind?" asked Howard briskly.

"No."

"I don't remember seeing her this year," said Nell.

"No," said Rob. "When I drove you up a couple of months ago to look them over and name them and write down their descriptions, there was a bunch missing, don't you remember?"

"Oh, yes—then she's never been named—"

"I've named her," said Ken. "Her name is Flicka."

"Flicka," said Nell cheerfully. "That's a pretty name."

But McLaughlin made no comment, and there was a painful silence.

Ken felt he ought to look at his father, but he was afraid to. Everything was changed again, they weren't friends any more. He forced himself to look up, met his father's angry eyes for a moment, then quickly looked down again.

"Well," McLaughlin barked. "It's your funeral—or hers. Remember one thing. I'm not going to be out of pocket on account of this—every time you turn around you cost me money—"

Ken looked up, wonderingly, and shook his head.

"Time's money, remember," said his father. "I had planned to give you a reasonable amount of help in breaking and taming your colt. Just enough. But there's no such thing as enough with those horses."

Gus appeared at the door and said, "What's today, Boss?"

McLaughlin shouted, "We're going out on the range to bring in the yearlings. Saddle Taggert, Lady and Shorty."

Gus disappeared, and McLaughlin pushed his chair back. "First thing to do is get her in. Do you know where the yearlings are?"

"They were on the far side of the Saddle Back late yesterday afternoon—the west end, down by Dale's ranch."

"Well, you're the Boss on this round-up—you can ride Shorty."

McLaughlin and Gus and Ken went out to bring the yearlings in. Howard stood at the County gate to open and close it.

They found the yearlings easily. When they saw that they were being pursued, they took to their heels. Ken was entranced to watch Flicka—the speed of her, the power, the wildness—she led the band.

He sat motionless, just watching and holding Shorty in when his father thundered past on Taggert and shouted, "Well, what's the matter? Why didn't you turn 'em?"

Ken woke up and galloped after them.

Shorty brought in the whole band. The corral gates were closed, and an hour was spent shunting the ponies in and out and through the chutes until Flicka was left alone in the small round branding corral. Gus mounted Shorty and drove the others away, through the gate, and up the Saddle Back.

But Flicka did not intend to be left. She hurled herself against the poles which walled the corral. She tried to jump them. They were seven feet high. She caught her front feet over the top rung, clung, scrambled, while Kennie held his breath for fear the slender legs would be caught between the bars and snapped. Her hold broke, she fell over backwards, rolled, screamed, tore around the corral.

One of the bars broke. She hurled herself again. Another went. She saw the opening, and as neatly as a dog crawls through a fence, inserted her head and forefeet, scrambled through and fled away, bleeding in a dozen places.

As Gus was coming back, just about to close the gate to the County Road, the sorrel whipped through it, sailed across the road and ditch with her inimitable floating leap, and went up the side of the Saddle Back like a jack rabbit.

From way up the mountain, Gus heard excited whinnies, as she joined the band he had just driven up, and the last he saw of them they were strung out along the crest running like deer.

"Yee whiz!" said Gus, and stood motionless and staring until the ponies had disappeared over the ridge.

Then he closed the gate, remounted Shorty, and rode back to the corrals.

Walking down from the corrals, Rob McLaughlin gave Kennie one more chance to change his mind. "Better pick a horse that you have some hope of riding one day. I'd have got rid of this whole line of stock if they weren't so damned fast that I've had the fool idea that someday there might turn out one gentle one in the lot, and I'd have a race horse. But there's never been one so far, and it's not going to be Flicka."

"It's not going to be Flicka," chanted Howard.

"Maybe she might be gentled," said Ken; and although his lips trembled, there was fanatical determination in his eye.

"Ken," said McLaughlin, "it's up to you. If you say you want her, we'll get her. But she wouldn't be the first of that line to die rather than give in. They're beautiful and they're fast, but let me tell you this, young man, they're loco!"

Ken flinched under his father's direct glance.

"If I go after her again, I'll not give up whatever comes, understand what I mean by that?"

"Yes."

"What do you say?"

"I want her."

"That's settled then," and suddenly Rob seemed calm and indifferent "We'll bring her in again tomorrow or next day—I've got other work for this afternoon."

U. S. Office of Air Safety Guards Cadets in Training

Accident Statistics Prove Value of Regional Safety Officers' Work; Program Has Three Main Divisions.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

The army air force has been around the world 134,078 times! That is what air miles add up to—three billion, three hundred and fifty-two million in the fiscal year 1943.

Just how safe is the job of a pilot? Not the job where you have to count on the enemy fighters and the ack-ack, but the job of learning to be a pilot.

"Ninety-five out of every hundred army air force cadets are going through their flight training program with no personal injury of any kind," says Col. Sam Harris, chief, army air force office of flying safety.

The office of air safety is the institution which has built safety into training programs as a highly emphasized part of the whole regime. It has three main principles.

Initial Phase

The first is "prevention and investigation," and the keynote here is experience. The 54 officers who take care of this end of the work have a total air experience of 33 years, 318 days in the air. These men, known as regional safety officers (RSOs) are assigned to each air force and command in the United States.

Here is an example of how the RSO works. He goes to a certain field. He meets some cadets who say they haven't had any breakfast. He puts that down in his notes. He looks the place over, notes a ditch parallel to a runway. He orders the ditch filled, talks with the mess officer and has breakfast served earlier. Then he tackles the boys themselves. He gives them a talk on the importance of instruments. Three separate moves and the accidents are cut down there.

The second principle is "flight control." Here is where the flight control officer, traffic cop of the air, comes in. For traffic control is as important in the air as on the street. The men of this force offer a Pilot's Advisory Counsel. This service leads pilots through or around dangerous traffic or weather conditions.

Suppose the flight control officer in the Seattle center knows Lieutenant Smith is headed in that direction. He also knows that a "cold front" is moving across his path. So he radios Smith, tells him to make for an alternate airport.

No. 3 on the list of safeties is "safety education."

Safety Education

Most of the accidents in training in the United States are due to personnel error—the fault of the human being, not the weather or the machine. This education comes through special movies, through manuals, through cartoons and posters.

Here are some of the slogans that help:

"Hitler and Hirohito cheer . . . when you forget your maps . . . when you pay no attention to telephone wires . . . when you jam on your brakes . . . when you don't check your gas . . ."

Other points are driven home with a little sardonic humor such as "when a pilot thinks he's pretty hot, he's usually close to burning." "To grow old in the natural way, a pilot has to use his luck sparingly . . ."

The first six months of 1943 compared with all of 1942, show these percentages of reduction of accidents:

In primary schools	2.3%
In basic schools	5.5%
In advanced schools	11%

And just see the table for accidents as miles flown go up!

1921-30—Miles flown, 155,818,000—accident rate, 2.11.

1943—Miles flown, 3,351,940,000—accident rate, .716.

That's how America is learning safety in the skyways.

War Brings Recognition To Psychiatry

There will be so many changes after the war that a lot of words will not even have the same meanings. New things and new thinking will appear and people will have to learn the new words in order to think the new thoughts.

Already the war has caused psychiatry to be "adequately recognized," according to Dr. Richard Hutchings, who is the author of "A Psychiatric Word Book" published by the New York State Department of Mental Hygiene and now in its seventh edition.

This is not a book for laymen but it is exceedingly interesting to scan its pages just to see how ordinary words can achieve new meanings as new thoughts about new things develop. The word book is invaluable to the doctor and many others who will be more and more concerned with this important study of interpersonal relations—psychiatry.

Let's take a layman's look at the pages of the little pocket volume.

Starting at the beginning with "a-an." Not the simple articles they look! The definition is not new in this case but shows the special meaning the person who reads psychiatry must know. The definition reads:

"Prefixes derived from the Greek and having the same meaning as the prefix un- or the suffix -less. Without; absence of; not. Cf. amentia, anosmia."

That takes us to amentia which means (1) absence of intellect; (2) a state of mind bordering on stupor; (3) feeblemindedness.

You have heard of behavior but what is behaviorism? It is "the psychological theory which holds that correct conclusions in psychology must rest upon objective study and interpretation of behavior."

You have also heard of conversion. Here is the psychiatrist's meaning of it. "The process by which an emotional trauma (that is an emotional 'wound') after repression becomes converted into a physical symptom in hysteria."

Practical Application

If you think that sounds too high brow, just recall the remark: "He's had that squint ever since he saw that terrible accident."

There are a lot more interesting new meanings clear over to the last word "zoopsia" which you know all about if you ever saw "Ten Nights in a Barroom," the great prohibition play. "Zoopsia" is what we (incorrectly) call "D.T.'s." The definition is "a visual hallucination of animals or insects."

The little book also has an appendix in which there are careful and more detailed descriptions of the emotions—anxiety, fear, pride, vanity, etc., which we now know are as dangerous to our mental health when they get out of control as a flock of flu germs are to our bodily welfare.

I'll give you a definition of the one emotion which is highly important because when it gets the upper hand in politics, it can do as much harm to a form of government as to an individual.

"Egoism and egotism are not synonyms. Egoism is a self-seeking desire to gain advantages at the expense of the rights, convenience or possessions of others. It is essentially antisocial. Egotism is overvaluation of self, one's opinions, ability or cleverness and corresponding undervaluation of others."

Now, just apply that definition of egoism to blocs, political parties, nations and you'll see why psychiatry is important in the new world. The more people who understand it, the more people will understand each other.

The words in "A Psychiatric Word Book" are important words.

Popular Questions

Here are answers to three questions I was asked most frequently on a recent trip to the Middle West:

(1) When will the war be over?

I don't know. I wouldn't be surprised if Germany cracked inside this winter. At least another year to clean up Japan.

(2) What about international cooperation afterward?

I don't know. The feeling I get in Washington is that there will be an honest attempt to form an international league, just as it is suggested in the Moscow conference.

(3) Will President Roosevelt run for a Fourth Term?

I doubt if even he knows that either. He probably will unless the war is done and over.

Aid From Switzerland

For months, Switzerland has been sending materials needed in the war effort to the United States in exchange for food, all of these exports and imports being transported on vessels of Swiss registry through the port of Genoa, says Collier's. Axis countries have not been able to stop the practice because of Switzerland's threat to blow up her three tunnels, whose rail facilities are the life lines between Germany and Italy.

When Your Back Hurts

And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

WE IN AMERICA have a lot to be thankful for this year. This is the one great nation that has not been laid waste by war.

Our boys are fighting in the jungles of the South Seas and in the villages of Italy that our own Main Streets may not become battle fields. By their sacrifices they have held the warfront thousands of miles beyond our shoreline. They deserve our deepest gratitude—a gratitude we should express in work rather than in words.

Let's back up these fighting men in a very practical way. Today there is a great shortage of pulpwood. Pulpwood has a thousand-and-one war uses—from explosives to shipping containers.

And since this is a pulpwood-cutting community, we have been asked to cut an extra cord of pulpwood in honor of every local boy in service.

This is a small thing to ask of us—small in comparison with what our boys are doing. One extra cord for every boy who went to war from the pulpwood areas will be enough to meet the present shortage.

So let's resolve to meet our quota —and make sure that no boy dies because we failed.

Rural Electricity Rates To Be Reduced

The Alabama Public Service Commission in order issued Saturday directed Alabama Power Company to reduce it's rural electric rates in an amount which the commission said will total approximately $163,000 a year. The new rate R-6 which goes into effect December 1, will mean a reduction for every one of the 38,000 ural customers of the Alabama Power Company now served under Rural Rate E-5, the commission stated. The order requires a reduction in cost of electric service to the 294 rural public schools now served by the Alabama Power Company's rural lines of approximately 20 percent.

Another feature of the order is that it reduces from 20 to 15 the number

Plans For White Christmas For Selma Children's Home

With the spirit of Thanksgiving permeating the homes and hearts of Methodists, many have been mindful of the call of the scores of children at the Methodist Children's Home at Selma; and they are thinking of their part in the "White Christmas,, campaign now under way and which will reach a climax with special contributions in all Methodist churches of Alabama and West Florida on Sunday December 19th.

Inquiries about the campaign and the Home, and requests for supplies to carry on the campaign have been coming into campaign headquarters, at 507 First National Building, here, during the week as the result of this spirit of thankfulness for blessings received and the desire to help others less fortunate, especially helpless little ones.

Those in charge of the Home point out that they have also felt the rising cost of living and the need for more funds to meet all the needs of their charges during 1944. Upkeep costs continue to rise all along the line, in spite of the very close attention given to effecting economies by the Superintendent, Virgil McCain, and his staff. Attention is also called to the fact that all finances are handled under the direction of the Board of Directors, composed of 22 outstanding Methodist men and women elected by the two Annual Conferences from over Alabama and Northwest Fla.

In these days of war it is worthy of note that 28 boys have enlisted in the armed services directly from this Home, and are now serving in the different branches of the Army and Navy. Members of the staff and the children receive letters from these boys, in which are frequent expressions of gratitude for what the Home has meant to them.

Checks, made payable to the Methodist Children's Home, may be mailed to the Superintendent at the Home at Selma, Alabama, it is announced by R. N. Burson, the treasurer.

Trapping Season Opens In State

Twenty additional days are permitted trappers during the 1943-44 trapping seasons which opened December 1, it was announced by Conservation Director Ben C. Morgan. The seasons will close February 20. During this period it will be legal to trap civet cat, skunk, fox, mink, muskrat, weasel, o'possum, rabbit and raccoon throughout the state. Otter trapping is prohibited in all counties but Clarke, Mobile and Washington. The season remains closed in all counties on bear, beaver and alligators. Fur catchers must purchase a $2.50 license

Pastures Should Be Limed First Says County Agent

Lime is a soil conditioner and does not replace fertilizer. It is used to sweeten sour soil, and, because of this, plants will grow better. It will increase the food value or calcium content of plants grown on limed soil. Calcium is the thing that causes people and livestock to have a large, strong bone. All soils in Chilton County that have been limed will react favorably to lime.

Since the "sourest" land is usually in pasture, pastures should receive the first application of lime. The low pasture areas in the flat lands around Isabella and Maplesville will stand up to 4,0000 to 5,000 pounds of ground limestone per acre. The same is true of the red clay soils in the eastern part of Chilton County. The pasture areas in other parts of Chilton County will stand up to 3,000 pounds of ground limestone per acre. Use about 2,000 pounds per acre on cultivatable lands. Do Not Apply Lime Where Irish Potatoes Will Be Grown.

Now is the best time to apply lime. It should be disced or scratched into the soil. Disc pastures so as not to destroy the desirable sod. Do not apply phosphate with a heavy application of lime. Be sure to mix the lime with the soil before the phosphate is applied. Farmers desiring to seed a pasture next spring should apply the lime now and complete the fertilizing and seeding in February or early March.

For those who wish, lime is now available through the AAA as a conservation material. It comes in 100 lb. bags and is delivered to the nearest railhead. Those getting the lime take delivery at the railhead. The soil building payment for applying lime is $2.50 per ton.

Quotas Suspended On All Livestock Slaughter

Suspension of all quotas on the slaughter of livestock by commercial slaughterers which was to terminate December 1 has been extended until further notice, according to an announcement by William R. Sewell, Acting State Supervisor, Food Distribution Administration

Today's action will give packers and butchers, who hold a government license, an oportunity to participate more actively in marketing this years record hog crop during the peak season just ahead, he said.

It follows the suspension last week of all limitations on farm slaughter of hogs and the temporary reduction by OPA in the number of ration points required for the purchase of pork products.

Mr Sewell indicated that everything possible is being done to bring about orderly marketing of livestock and to maintain hog prices at support levels. Farmers are urged to cooperate by getting in touch with their marketing agencies before shipping hogs to be sure they can be handled.

Old Age Grant Increased Says Countv Welfare Head

Average grants to the needy aged in Chilton County were increased from $12.59 in September to $20.00 in Nov., it was revealed today by Mrs Katie Gross, County Acting Director of Public Welfare. This increase of $7.41 in average payments was made possible as a result of 1943 legislation appropriating additional monies for old age assistance as of October 1. Mrs Gross explained.

Although the countrywide average is $20.00, however, Mrs Gross emphasized that individual payments vary among families according to differences in family needs and resources, and varying living costs.

While $20.00 does not represent as high a grant as is needed, it is the highest figure yet reached in this county, the director declaired. In addition to this increase in grants, the new money also made possible the addition of 16 needy families of the aged to the assistance rolls, since the first of October, and by the end of November 255 were receiving Old Age assistance.

This expansion of services to the needy aged resulted from the interest of the State Board of Public Welfare of which the Governor is Chairman, and was made possible in Chilton County through the combined efforts of the County Board of Public Welfare and the county and city governing bodies, Mrs Gross said.

Although the major portion of the new money for public welfare was earmarked for aid to the aged, certain

Paging Santa Claus

by Jane Corby

McCLURE SYNDICATE—W.N.U. FEATURES

Jan Payson sings in the floor show at the Devon Arms. She used to sell magazines there to support her invalid sister, Dora, but Paul Harris discharged her when she was late for work on Thanksgiving. Later, when he found out that the rich William Anthony Deverest knew her, he gave her the leading part in the floor show, thinking that Deverest's interest would bring patronage. Jan, however, thinks Deverest is his own chauffeur, Tony Williams, and he does not dare enlighten her, because she tells him she hates Deverest because of his wealth. Harris is disappointed because the show is not a success, and places the blame on Jan. She decides to ease her mind by telling Tony her troubles.

CHAPTER III

It was the opening she had been waiting for and Jan forced herself to seize it. In halting phrases she told him something of the life she and Dora had led at Mrs. Mallord's. She described Paul's sudden interest in her and her bewilderment as to the cause of it.

But as she reached the point in her narrative where Paul had referred to William Anthony Deverest, she felt him stiffen with new interest. She made herself go on, giving him a complete picture of all that had happened to her that day.

"So you've got to produce William Anthony in person, eh?"

"Oh, Tony, I know that's impossible. But if there was some other way—maybe I could meet somebody else—" she floundered and stopped.

"No, that wouldn't be so good. If they want Deverest, they should have him."

Jan sighed. "Well, I guess Dora and I will just have to forget all about it. I can get a job somewhere else."

"But why," Tony demanded. "You know my boss isn't like a lot of these playboys — he's always avoided publicity like poison. Why, many's the time I've gone to a banquet or a dinner and said I was he. I got away with it, too."

"Tony, you didn't!" Jan could scarcely believe her ears.

"Sure I did. And I'll do it again."

There had been a hundred things to see to before Tony could appear at the Devon Arms. Jan had had a talk with Paul Harris and made it clear to him that there must be no publicity about the appearance of Mr. Deverest. "He absolutely forbids it," she told the hotel manager.

Jan hoped that the fatal night when Tony was to show up at the Devon Arms would never arrive. did. If Tony was at the table agreed upon she would die, she knew, and if he wasn't there she would die, too, even more suddenly!

For a moment, as the spot light caught and held her, she was dazzled and could see nobody. But as the song went on and the other girls took up the chorus, the light shifted, and she could see Tony at the ringside table.

It was because she was staring at him so hard that Jan did not see a girl who was approaching his table until she was suddenly at his side, laughing down at him. Tony pushed back his chair and rose instantly, catching both the hands the girl extended to him in his big brown ones.

It was with an effort that Jan took the solo part again as the voices of the other girls came to a stop. She felt as if she could not make a sound. Her throat was constricted with terror, and she was surprised to hear herself singing the mournful notes of the "blues" song that was Zambrini's special pride.

"Why you stay back here?" inquired Zambrini solemnly. "Go out see Mr. Deverest. Mr. Harris like that. Go on—go on . . . out now." He urged her hastily toward the entrance to the supper room. Mechanically Jan obeyed. This was what their plan had been. She might as well go through with it.

Before Jan was halfway across the room to Tony's table he was on his feet and coming toward her. "You were gorgeous," he whispered, pulling Jan's hand through his arm. He settled her in a chair at the table and sat down in his own, hitching it around so that it would be closer to hers.

"I've ordered supper for you," he said briskly, "we don't have to waste any time over that."

"Oh, Tony," said Jan with a little catch in her voice, "will you lose your job?"

"Why should I?"

"That girl—that girl, half buried in silver fox—won't she tell who you are?"

"You mean Marcia? Did you see her stop here?" said Tony comfortably. "That's Marcia Mayfield, very much Social Register, just out this year. She knows—my boss. Just stopped to ask me when he'll be back in town."

"But won't she tell somebody, maybe Paul Harris, who you are?"

"Oh, no, not Marcia! She's too dizzy, wouldn't waste time gossiping to hotel managers. That girl has enough on her hands trying to marry money her first season. You can forget her. We have just time for once around the floor before the waiter comes. Please . . . it's heavenly dancing with you," he coaxed.

Paul Harris was as nearly effusive as was possible for a man of his habitual restraint to be when he saw Jan in the doorway.

"Come in, come in." he invited. Then as Jan obeyed, "Off to see—somebody?"

"I'm going to see Mr. Deverest off," Jan said, trying to appear casual.

"He's not going away again!" exclaimed Paul.

"Yes, he is." This was harder than she had expected. There was a brief but chilling silence. Jan forced herself to meet the suddenly alert gaze that the manager turned on her. There was disbelief in his penetrating stare which changed, as Jan watched him in fascinated distress, to a sort of icy anger. But when he spoke his voice was controlled as ever.

"Will Mr. Deverest be gone long?" Paul inquired.

"Indefinitely," said Jan. She might as well get this thing settled once and for all.

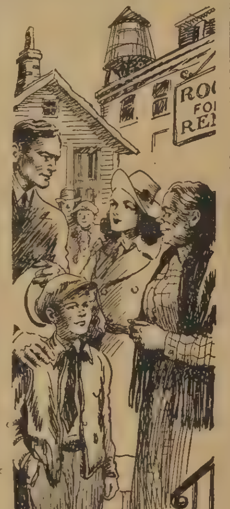
"You wouldn't by any chance have had a quarrel with Mr. Deverest?" Paul began.

"Well, it wasn't exactly a quarrel," said Jan hastily. "It was a sort of—of disagreement."

"Perhaps there is a new—what the columnists call 'heart throb?' "

Jan colored at his tone. "I don't know," she said shortly. "Really, Mr. Harris . . ."

"Come, come, Miss Payson," Paul was suddenly the practical man of the world. "I don't have to explain to you again that your value to the show is chiefly as a drawing card for Mr. Deverest and his friends. I could have hired a girl who could sing and dance as well, perhaps better than you, at less salary than I am paying you. I need never have mentioned supplying her with a room in this hotel, much less a whole suite."



"You have a fine boy there, Mrs. Mallord."

Jan hoped she would not cry. She took a firmer grip on the edge of the desk, staring down at the bright blue blotter which covered the top.

"What do you want me to do now?" she asked in a hushed tone.

Paul was silent. When he finally spoke, she felt the icy fingers that clutched her heart beginning slowly to relax.

She and Dora would stay on in the suite they now occupied.

The wardrobe Mary Elizabeth Howard had already provided for her would see Jan through the season, the manager went on. They would also take their meals as before. And in return, Jan was to receive a nominal salary while continuing her work in the floor show.

Jan, stammering a little, managed to thank Mr. Harris and escaped to the street where Tony Williams was waiting, the car drawn up to the curb.

Together they sat in silence, staring gloomily at the people passing on the sidewalk. Then Jan managed to tell him, a little incoherently, about her interview with Paul Harris.

Tony listened with growing interest as Jan outlined the trouble Jack had been in when he and a group of boys broke into the Y.M.C.A. and went swimming in the pool. She was not looking at him as she spoke softly, and did not notice how the man's jaw tightened and his eyes narrowed at her vivid description of Jack's home life and his companions.

"I'd like to see Jack," Tony said, bringing the car to an abrupt halt, "where does he live?"

"Would you really like to go there?" asked Jan doubtfully.

"I think we ought to see what's going on," said Tony. "Sometimes it helps a kid to talk things over with a man who understands his problems."

Jan, vaguely distrustful of the experiment, directed him through the narrow streets that led to her former rooming house. She was still more hesitant when a crowd of boys gathered around the car as they stopped in front of the door.

"Gee, that's Jan Payson!" she heard a voice from the rear of the group say with awe.

"Jack!" she called, as she stepped to the curb. Importantly Jack Mallord shouldered a couple of boys out of his way and sidled forward.

"Jack, is your mother home?" The boy grinned, and made some unintelligible sound that Jan took for an affirmative.

"Well, you tell your mother that I've brought a friend to see her and we want to talk to her and you."

"Aw . . . gee!" Jack protested, his freckled face reflecting his anguish. "You can ankle in there yourself. She ain't doin' nuttin' now. An' I wanna look at de bus."

Tony signaled to Jan to go ahead and invitingly threw open the door of the car to Jack. "All right, fella, hop in!"

Mrs. Mallord, graciously forgetting the troublesome times when Jan and her sister had lived in the apartment upstairs, was delighted to see her visitor. She hastily wiped off a chair and admired Jan's Mary Elizabeth Howard outfit with extravagant but sincere praise.

"Sure, and it's grand to see you looking so well, Miss Payson, and how is your dear sweet sister?"

Jan told her the latest news about Dr. Curtis, and then went on to explain, growing slightly hesitant in the face of Mrs. Mallord's undoubted independence, that she had brought Tony over to talk to Jack.

"It's a fine thing to have a smart young man talking to the boys," Mrs. Mallord agreed, to Jan's relief, "but you mustn't be thinking, Miss Payson, that because Jackie got into that little scrape he's a bad boy. A finer boy never lived, though it is my own I'm talking of."

Jan hastened to assure her that Jack would be doing Tony a favor in accepting anything her young man might do. With this view of the matter Mrs. Mallord was more receptive to the idea, and she went back to her original plaint that being in trouble with the law took so much time she had missed attending her uncle's funeral.

Jan, her purpose accomplished, took Mrs. Mallord out to meet Tony. She found him just driving back, the expensive car jammed with dirty, gamin faces that were strangely wistful and frankly awed by the perfection of the machine in which they rode. They were a subdued group as they tumbled out of the car and stood in an unmoving circle about it, their eyes fastened fixedly on Tony. He looked pleased and happy and, Jan thought, almost as young as the boys around him.

"You have a fine boy there, Mrs. Mallord. He and I are going to the hockey game tomorrow night if you will let me take him."

Mrs. Mallord, since she did not have to defend her offspring, began apologizing for him. She went on to explain Jackie's goodness of heart as an excuse for his evident lack of polish, and this led to relating how it was that Jackie had had trouble with the law, and the funeral she had missed attending. Jan, worried for fear she would be late, tried to interfere, but Tony seemed strangely interested in the recital, and asked for all sorts of details such as the deceased uncle's name and where he had lived.

"Well, I didn't mean to let you in for all that," Jan said with a little laugh when they finally drove away, "but when Mrs. Mallord starts, it's like a steam roller . . ."

"I enjoyed it."

It didn't seem to Jan that the day was any different from any of the others since her talk with Paul Harris. The morning sunlight, streaming across the deep blue of the sitting room carpet, lay in the same pattern; Dora's smile was just as contented as ever as Jan settled her among the pillows of her chaise longue.

Oh, the blessed relief of these quiet work-filled days! Now that Jan had made it clear that she was not going to be responsible for William Anthony Deverest's appearance at the floor show she felt that life was much brighter.

Making conversation, she remembered to tell her sister what she had heard about the suite being one of the most difficult to rent. Dora's eyes were round with amazement and her definite opinion was that anyone who did not like such a heavenly place must be out of his or her mind. As she spoke, she was lifting her breakfast tray from the table to her knees. Jan watched her in silence, and then commented on it.

"Dora! You lifted that tray so easily. Do you really feel—"

"Oh, I'm well enough—my doctor man has been giving me all sorts of little things to do that I never did before. It was going to be a great surprise for you some day to see me go through my daily dozen all at one time. But I forgot and lifted the tray. I've spoiled the surprise," Dora said sadly.

Jan hugged her so hard that the orange juice and coffee were in grave danger of falling to the floor. She could not speak; her heart was too full for words. But she resolved that if there was ever anything she could do for kindly Dr. Curtis she would never count the cost to herself.

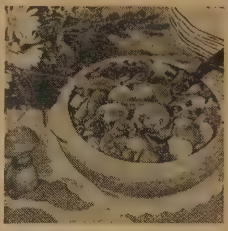
HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Leftovers Used With Care Give Tempting Results



Mushrooms, rich in minerals and the B complex vitamins, combine with beef and give a tasty, nutritionally satisfying casserole.

One of the common ways of making meat points stretch their furthest is the habit of buying a large piece of meat and making it do for several meals. In this way, the family can have the pleasure of a roast from a large piece of meat done to succulence, then the homemaker can easily fashion meat dishes for at least 2 or 3 meals out of that which is left.

Unfortunately foods do not taste as good the second day as the first. Flavors seem to fall asleep, the meat becomes dry and insipid, and the family becomes tired of what they sniffingly refer to as leftovers. This needn't be the case if you spend a little time and effort waking up the leftovers and making them just as appetizing as the food in its first form.

Chicken is first-rate when served in these ways:

Country Chicken Loaf.
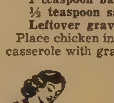
(Serves 6)

2 cups diced cooked chicken
½ cup chopped cooked carrots
1 cup cooked peas
½ cup chopped celery
1 tablespoon minced pepper
1 cup bread crumbs
½ cup milk
2 egg yolks, beaten
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon onion juice
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Force chicken, carrots and peas through a food chopper. Add remaining ingredients and place in a greased loaf pan or a ring mold. Bake about 40 minutes in a moderate oven until firm. Serve with cream of mushroom sauce.

Chicken Yorkshire.
(Serves 6)

2 cups diced, cooked chicken
2 eggs
½ cup drippings, melted
1 cup milk
1 cup sifted flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
Leftover gravy



Place chicken in bottom of greased casserole with gravy. Set in oven to heat. Beat eggs, drippings and milk together. Sift dry ingredients together, add to liquid ingredients and beat until free from all lumps. The batter will be quite thin. Pour over chicken and bake at once in moderate (350-degree) oven. Serve from baking dish with gravy.

Meat leftovers, even if they are few, can give a rich meaty taste if they're used in this way:

Meat and Rice au Gratin.
(Serves 6)

2 cups leftover meat, diced
Milk or soup stock
2 cups boiled rice
2 tablespoons fat
½ cup grated cheese
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

*Recipe Given

Cut meat into small pieces and moisten with stock or milk. Spread a layer of rice in greased baking dish. Place several pieces of small fat on top and sprinkle with grated cheese. Season with salt and pepper. Add a layer of chopped meat, fat and salt and pepper. Repeat with rice, cheese, etc. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven.

Spanish Potatoes.
(Serves 4)

1 tablespoon minced onion
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
4 tablespoons fat
2 cups diced boiled potatoes
½ cup chopped cooked ham
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon paprika

Saute onion and pepper in fat until cooked soft. Add potatoes, pimiento, ham and seasonings and cook until heated through.

Lamb and Spaghetti Casserole.
(Serves 4)

¼ package spaghetti
1 cup diced cooked lamb
3 tablespoons fat
1½ cups cooked peas, or peas and carrots
½ cup water or stock
1 tablespoon parsley
1½ teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon thyme
½ teaspoon curry powder
1 tablespoon worcestershire sauce
½ cup fine bread crumbs
2 teaspoons butter

Boil spaghetti until half cooked. Brown meat in fat. Line baking dish with half the spaghetti and fill with meat and peas. Combine broth with parsley, thyme and salt, sauce and curry powder and pour over meat. Cover with spaghetti and top with crumbs. Bake ½ hour in moderate oven (350 degrees) and garnish top with lemon slices and parsley.

Squash Puff.
(Serves 4)

2 cups mashed squash
½ cup light cream or rich milk
1 egg, beaten
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 teaspoon salt
Few grains black pepper

Drain and mash cooked squash well. Mix in order given. Place in well-greased baking dish and brown in oven. Serve at once.

Note: Use well-drained, thoroughly mashed pumpkin, turnip or sweet potato in place of squash.

A bit of braised chicken garnished with buttered carrots, potato balls and celery leaves won't be a drain on points but will boost your menus.

Recent research reveals that mushrooms have a mineral content somewhat higher than many other vegetables and fruits. Potassium and phosphorus are available along with appreciable amounts of copper and iron. Mushrooms are also one of the best plant sources of the B complex vitamins. Used to extend meats, mushrooms are not only nutritionally satisfying, but they can add zest and flavor even to the simplest of foods:

Casserole of Beef and Mushrooms.
(Serves 6)

1½ to 2 pounds short ribs of beef
Flour, seasoned with salt and pepper
¼ teaspoon thyme
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 cup water
2 stalks celery, chopped
6 scallions
1 8-ounce can mushrooms
1 small onion sliced
2 to 3 carrots, sliced
3 medium-sized potatoes, quartered

Cut short ribs in individual squares and flour them. Brown in a small amount of fat in heavy skillet. Remove to casserole. Add sliced onion, vinegar, thyme, water and drippings in skillet, stirring until well blended; pour over meat. Cover and roast in slow oven (300 degrees) until tender, about 2 hours. Add vegetables and mushrooms with liquid and continue cooking 30 to 40 minutes. Add more water if necessary.

Lynn Says:

Fats Are Important: Fats produce glycerine needed to make munitions. Take home all fat and bone trimmings you pay for with your meat. Fats that you don't use will be bought by some markets.

Accumulated sausage and bacon fat can be used for frying potatoes, eggs, fish, hash, chicken, or even in waffles, cornbread or gravy.

Fats from roasts, chops and steaks can be clarified by heating 4 slices of potato with 1 quart of fat over low heat until fat bubbles. Strain through several thicknesses of cheesecloth and store in light-proof, tightly covered container. Use this clarified fat for making spice and chocolate cakes and cookies.

The Japs were wrong

Let's keep them wrong!

The Japs were wrong.

Cutting off our rubber supply in the Pacific didn't take us out of the war—or even slow us up.

For Government, the Rubber Director, the rubber industry, and the petroleum, chemical, and alcohol industries pooled their patents and ideas, worked together, and accomplished the seemingly impossible.

Today, there is no shadow of a doubt that our planes will continue to fly, our ships to sail, our tanks to roll.

For America now has nearly enough rubber to meet our essential needs!

But our tire worries are still here!

The American people saw the new synthetic rubber plants spring up like mushrooms. They heard of large-scale production of synthetic rubber. And they applauded. Unfortunately, they also jumped to the conclusion that they could stop worrying about tires!

It is true that the RUBBER supply crisis is past. But the long-expected TIRE shortage is with us!

"But," you may say, "how can this be when thousands of tons of Government synthetic rubber are being made . . . when such a tremendous tonnage of rubber products is being turned out, as well as more airplane and truck tires than ever before."

One reason is that—as the Baruch Committee foresaw—few tires could be manufactured until our synthetic rubber supply was well on the way. This resulted in millions of tires going out of use at a time when there were no replacements. Meanwhile, tires left in service have less mileage in them, and prewar inventories are gone.

Another reason is that our military needs are far greater than anyone anticipated.

Also, the rubber companies are using a lot of their machinery and manpower to turn out life rafts, bullet-sealing fuel tanks, and hundreds of other urgently-needed army and navy products, in addition to tires.

And you should know that half of today's requirements are for large-size, heavy-duty bus, truck, artillery, airplane, and combat tires, requiring much more labor and materials than peacetime products.

Finally, the tire industry, like every industry today, is feeling the manpower shortage, and there just aren't enough hands for the job.

Face up on the table!

These problems will be overcome when our enemies are overcome. Meanwhile, we want to put our cards face up on the table.

We've told you frankly why there is a serious tire shortage. Now we want you, and every other American who owns a set of tires, to know that this country's transportation system can still suffer a serious blow . . . unless you make it your personal duty to take care of the tires you now own.

How to make tires last longer

Do no unnecessary driving.

Live up to the Government regulation—don't exceed 35 miles an hour.

Keep your tires inflated up to recommended pressure, and check them every week.

Avoid hitting holes in the road, or bruising your tires on curbs or stones. Don't start or stop suddenly. Slow down for sharp corners.

See that your wheels and axles are in line.

Switch your tires from wheel to wheel every five thousand miles, and have them inspected regularly for removal of foreign objects and repair of cuts.

And . . . most important of all . . . recap your tires as soon as they become smooth.

HOW GOOD ARE PASSENGER CAR TIRES OF SYNTHETIC RUBBER?

It may be a long time before all civilians can get synthetic rubber tires. Meanwhile, if you should be one of the few who do get them, you will want this information:

Synthetic rubber tires for passenger cars are good tires, and will give you satisfactory service if you take care of them.

You should not think of synthetic rubber tires as improved tires . . . but as emergency tires. And remember that they have not yet had time to prove what they can do.

It is beside the point to theorize on how they would react to the phenomenally high speeds of prewar days. Every patriotic American knows that tire treads . . . all tire treads . . . wear out faster at high speeds, and so drives at today's recommended speed of 35 miles an hour.

As time goes on, we will learn more about the effects of under-inflation of rough roads, and of other abuses. They damage all tires. Indications are that they do proportionately more harm to synthetic rubber tires.

Meanwhile, all tires are rationed to you in trust for the nation, and it is your duty to take every possible care of them, to avoid misuse and prevent abuse.

As experience teaches us more and more about synthetic rubber tires, we will pass the information along to you. Meantime, play safe. Be careful!

If you use synthetic rubber tubes, be sure they are properly installed. They should be put into the tire, then inflated, deflated, and inflated again. And they should never be mounted on rusty rims.

TRUCK AND BUS TIRES ARE A DIFFERENT STORY

Truck and bus tires, being larger and heavier, generate more heat. They are given long, hard usage on all kinds of highways. They are all too frequently overloaded.

Frankly, today's synthetic rubber bus and truck tires will not stand the abuse that prewar tires would stand, especially overloading. Progress is being made daily—but overloading which would have damaged a prewar tire can ruin today's synthetic tire.

The Tire Industry is doing its utmost to solve the serious problem of providing the nation's trucks and buses with satisfactory tires in sufficient quantities.

But until this problem is solved, a dangerous threat exists to America's most vital transportation.

Therefore, while treads of present truck and bus tires are immensely important . . . the carcasses of these tires have a value beyond all price to America, and to America's truck and bus operators!

Unless tires now in use are made to last, these two essential services will almost certainly break down!

These tires . . . every one of them . . . must be recapped the instant the tread wears smooth . . . before any damage is done to the carcass.

They must be recapped not once, but again and again!* High speeds must be done away with . . . especially on hot roads. Overloads must be avoided. Tires must be properly inflated at all times.

The responsibility to take care of these tires . . . to make them last as long as possible . . . is a vital necessity! It must be shouldered by all operators, by all drivers, by all garage men!

No American can fail to heed this warning! The situation is so serious that it is recognized in a new tire warranty. But the real job is to conserve all tires now in use!

A new warranty—

With conditions as they are, and synthetic rubber in its present stage of development, a new tire warranty has become necessary and has been adopted. It applies to all tires. Under its terms, injuries such as bruises, body breaks, cuts, snags, and heat failures as well as tread wear are not subject to adjustment consideration.

Nor are injuries or failures which result from improper tire care or misuse or abuse. This includes failure as a result of overload, excess speed, improper inflation, or other non-defective conditions. Or when tires are used on rims not conforming to Tire and Rim Association Standards.

Don't forget that everyone . . . the Tire Industry, the Rubber Director, and many others, are working together with all their energy, as they have worked from the beginning, to keep America rolling.

And remember that, while the Japs were wrong ...you must help keep them wrong! Take care of the tires you now have!

"FOLKS & THINGS"

Dear Santa:

It has been a long time since we have written you a letter but we understand that things are short this year and folks wont get the things they are accustomed to so this is written in the hope that we will be of some help. We are not thinking of ourselves but the others here who are in need of so many things.

Please bring Erby Popwell a big cigar box full of keys to fit all his music boxes so we can hear "White Christmas" and be sure and bring Rubin Lowe and Millard Lancaster a deer. R. C. Williams got his so you need not bring him any. But, do bring him an adjustable hat band so that when the one he is wearing when he tells about it comes near the bursting point, he can just let it out a little more. Don't by all means, fail to bring Messers, Callen, Page, Heflin, Parrish and Jones, several large bottles of a good linament. After the rush before your day at the banks, they will need to use plenty in getting ready for another War Bond drive early in January. You might even bring them something real nice too, for the thankless and unpublicized work they do during every Drive that comes out of fighting a world-wide war.

Don't forget our merchants and grocerymen. So many have received their 1-A rating, please bring each of them a deferment, if you have any left, that they might stay with their families and help to hold together the home-front. Bring Jimmie Bell, Dr W. C. Golden, Claud Craig and various other of our good citizens a map of the better fishing holes down on the river so that the 'song and dance' after each trip will vary a little and they might even get to say "I told you so," when doubting Thomases hesitate to take seriously their ability as Isaac Waltons.

And Santa, bring Rip Burnett and Tom Littlejohn another head mechanic like "Sleepy" Miller used to be, so Rip wont have to work so hard in the shop. "Chick" and Olive Fiquette, we are sure could use several large bags of oats for their horses, if their stables have continued to grow like it was the last time we were out there.

And about our two "Pistol Packing Papa's", Ed Propst and Luther Kendricks, bring them a Christmas Week devoid of accidents and trouble so that on one holiday they can take it easy and not be rushed all over the county trying to take care of foolish people. J. T. King and Leo Thompson need plenty of girls. Leo for his Laundry and J. T. for his Elmore's store, see if you can relieve their help situation throughout the coming year. We're afraid you better bring Dock Levine a toupee. He's losing his hair worrying over this War Chest drive. Bring B. N. Studdard another cigaret holder and don't forget Donald Blackketter, he likes big black cigars.

We heard that Cecil Ramsey had plenty of spare time at his store so please bring him a Yo-Yo, to while away the long hours spent directing the many clerks he hasn't got, and cannot hire. According to the Want Ads, Bill Minor is hunting a chest of drawers, maple preferred, but coming from you he would probably settle for oak, or hickery, or cedar, or what have you.

We're sure Mayor Stapp and the other Dairy owners would appreciate the ceiling being lifted on milk so that they might at least make a fair margin of profit on their investment. Mr W. M. Polk and Mr C. Reese Mullins, both want you to bring them the County Treasurers job for the next four years. See what you can do about that.

Well Santa, we could go on, and on, but you get the general idea. Bring them all the things they want most and then, What! me? Oh, just bring us enough money to meet those "first-of-month" bills that we will be getting, around New Years and we will consider it one of the most successful Christmases we have ever seen.

Well, see you December 24th.

—BEN.

Rev. M. Lockhart Receives Letter From Dying Soldier

This is a letter from a dying soldier who was fatally injured in battle. His name is Walter M. Reed. Mr Reed was converted on the battle field under Sgt. L. Z. Dickey together with several others.

Mr Reed was sent back to the states to a Hospital in Oregon. Pat R. Carson was Mr Reed's attending nurse. Mr Carson was writing this letter at the request of his patient, Mr Reed. You will notice that Mr Reed died before the letter was finished, and Mr. Carson, the nurse was also converted because of the faith of Mr Reed. When Mr Reed died, Mr Carson finished wording the letter himself, and forwarded it on to us.

I have been somewhat reluctant in putting this letter in print because of the many good things said about me. Even though I feel unworthy of the things said just here, I am given it all to my readers..

It reads as follows:

August 6, 1943.

My Dearest Brother Lockhart:

I only know you from what I have heard from Sgt L. Z. Dickey.. He has always talked about what a wonderful person you are, and how he wished that he was as good a person as you are; and how you led him to see the right way to live. Well, may I stop and thank you for such blessings because he showed me to Christ and Christ to me.. Now I am waiting for God to call me home, because I have a brain fracture, and life is short and death will be sweet, because you led him to Christ and he led a great number of others to Christ due to his faith and love of God. Brother, his faith has caused us to all realize that there is something higher than life down here.

So if you hear from him, please tell him I died in Christ, and will meet him up yonder on judgement morning. He taught us God's love every Sunday morning, battle or no battle, gun-fire or none. He was most assuredly not afraid to die, because he went to lost wounded souls and talked to them day and night, danger or quietness, he was not afraid to die for his God. So I have his same love, and am now dying by degrees. So pray for him, because the last time I saw him he was sitting on the battle field giving a dying soldier his last drop of water, and praying God's peace on the soldier's soul. That was some time ago and should you know where he is, please tell him I died in Christ, together with twenty others and some day we will meet on Heavens great shore, and sing, "JUST AS I AM," together — — —

Brother Lockhart, this is a note written by the nurse who was attending Walter M. Reed when he died just now. He died singing: "Just As I Am", immediately after saying, they would "sing it together on Heaven's shore." And you may thank Sgt Dickey for me also because I found Christ through Mr Reed. I will meet him and you all on Heaven's shore. I am going back East now since Walter's death, to lead my family to Christ. So pray for my success.

—Pat R. Carson

P. S. Walter was wording the letter to you when he died. Please excuse the note to you and Sgt Dickey, because when I found Christ, I just had to tell you because I am happier than I have ever been. Thanks to you for leading Sgt. Dickey to Christ, because according to Mr Reed, he has led a lot of boys to God on yonder battle field. When you pray, pray for Pat Carson.

POPLAR SPRINGS

We had a nice crowd out to church Sunday and had a good lesson. We welcomed our visitor, Woodrow Childers of the Army, who has been overseas. We wish him God speed in his work. We also had Mrs Anna McDowell back with us. She is nursing her sister, Mrs Sallie Robinson, who has been sick for some time. We hope she can soon be home to stay.

Our Pastor, Bro. Hughes is no better and we wish all who can would go see him. We hope he will soon be well again and can come back to church for we miss him so much.

Our BYPU was rained out again but everyone come back next Sunday night.

Remember to go to church somewhere every Sunday and pray for our Soldiers and write them often.

Have you visited your doctor this year.

LET'S KEEP UP THE GOOD WORK

THIS community has every right to be proud of the way it is meeting the appeal for more pulpwood. We are proving that we can get out the wood. Now let's keep it coming!

This war isn't won yet—not by a long shot. Our boys will be fighting for quite a while. They will be needing ammunition, food, medical supplies—and all these things that are shipped in paperboard containers are made from pulpwood.

Pulpwood is our wartime job. Pulpwood can still be a bottleneck, holding up America's war effort. Our responsibility is to see that it does not. No boy shall die because we have failed.

First U. S. Landings on Gilbert Islands Reveal New Strategy in Jap Campaign; Diplomacy Claims European Spotlight; Chinese Battle for Provincial Capital

Gilberts—Landing under cover of the booming guns of American warships, U. S. army and marine forces swarmed ashore on Tarawa, Makin and Apamama in the Gilbert islands and pushed back the Japs in stiff fighting, amid coconut palms and jungle brush.

Midway between Hawaii and Australia, the Gilberts lie astride U. S. communication lines to the South Pacific area. Consisting of numerous islets, Tarawa, Makin and Apamama are fronted on their western sides with sunken reefs, sandsplits and coral patches; but on the east, ships can approach within a half-mile or mile from shore.

As U. S. forces poured ashore, Japanese artillery sought to break up landing formations. On the islets themselves, Jap machine gunners operated from pill box defenses hidden in the dense foliage against advancing U. S. infantry.

DADS' DRAFT:

Slowed Again

To President Roosevelt's desk for signature went a senate-house bill which would put all fathers in the U. S. at the bottom of the draft list by requiring the induction of all eligible single men first.

Approved by voice votes of both legislative chambers, the bill also would abolish the present practice of drafting men according to their employment in essential and non-essential industry classifications set up by the War Manpower commission.

The bill provides for the review of any occupational deferments by the appeals board within the district where the person works, and would establish a special medical commission to study the possibility of lowering physical standards of the services.

WHEAT:

Loan Stocks Down

Through the second week of November, 117,677,380 bushels of 1943 wheat were under government loan, as the feed situation remained tight with many areas in the corn belt unable to produce sufficient stocks.

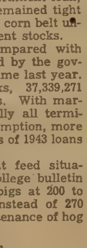
The loan figures compared with 312,884,567 bushels held by the government at the same time last year. Of the current stocks, 37,339,271 bushels were on farms. With market prices at practically all terminals favorable for redemption, more than 2½ million bushels of 1943 loans have been liquidated.

To counter the tight feed situation, an Iowa State college bulletin suggested marketing pigs at 200 to 220 pounds this fall instead of 270 pounds to assure maintenance of hog numbers next spring.

INDEPENDENCE:

For Lebanon, Syria

Under League of Nations mandate, France was entrusted with supervision over the small countries of Lebanon and Syria, to the north of the Holy Land.



Gen. Georges Catroux

When Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Free French took over these territories in 1941 with British aid, they promised their people they would grant them independence. But when the Lebanese took matters into their own hands recently and revised their constitution to accomplish their freedom, the Free French's resident supervisor disbanded the government and placed the president and premier under arrest.

Rioting ensued, and to Lebanon's ancient capital of Beirut flew Free France's No. 1 trouble-shooter, Gen. Georges Catroux. Lebanon's officials were released, and not only Lebanon, but also Syria, was told that Free France would enter into negotiations for their independence.

MEDITERRANEAN:

Turkey in Picture

As the Allied attack slowed before the Nazis' strong mountain line some 85 miles south of Rome, attention in the Mediterranean area was focused on the diplomatic front, where Turkey maintained its delicate relations with both sides.

Following conversations between representatives of the two governments in Cairo, Turkey reaffirmed her military alliance with Great Britain, calling on either nation to help the other in case of attack in the Mediterranean area. Turkey's entrance into the war would give the Allies a stepping stone into eastern Greece and eliminate complex sea operations against the country, but the question appeared to be whether the wily Turks would consider an Allied offensive as a protection of their interests, putting the alliance into effect.

In Jugoslavia, guerrillas continued vexing operations against German communication lines and industries supplying the Nazis with war materials.

On the Continent, 1,000 RAF heavy bombers struck at Berlin, firing every section of the German capital of 5,000,000, and disrupting gas, electricity and street car facilities.

CHINA:

Japs Attack

Toward Hunan province's capital of Changsha, two columns of a Japanese force of 80,000 men launched a determined attack, making progress in early fighting.

The attack marked the Japs' fourth major effort to take Changsha, the other campaigns failing when wily Chinese commanders struck at the enemy's extended lines.

This time, however, the Japs made every attempt to bull their way through, massing men and material and using bombers to smash at Chinese defensive positions.

To counter the Jap attack, the Chinese sprung a drive through the mountains to the rear of the fighting, designed to relieve pressure on their main front.

WAR PRODUCTION:

Experience Counts

Because of better management, greater effort by labor and more trained workers, U. S. arms output in October registered its biggest gain since last April, the War Production board said.

Stimulated by its experience, U. S. industry can now be expected to function at peak efficiency, WPB declared, with this efficiency mostly accounting for increases in production, since a limit has been practically reached on material and manpower.

During October, WPB said, stress was laid on output of aircraft, which showed a 10 per cent increase over September; ships, up 5 per cent; ammunition, up 11 per cent, and communications equipment, including radar, up 9 per cent.

MORAL STANDARDS:

Demand High Level

To molders of public opinion, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America appealed for leadership in maintaining the highest sex standards and impressing the dignity with which men and women are endowed as custodians of the home.

Protesting against the exploitation of material in newspapers and magazines which degrades thought and emotion, the council lashed against the portrayal of the human body in ways detractive to the reverence in which men and women should be held as creators of homes and guardians of the sacredness of family life.

Demanding strict enforcement of laws against sexual promiscuity and commercialized prostitution, the council said venereal diseases have rendered "millions of American men and women unable to serve their country as they ought."

The desert's warm, shifting sands have covered historic battlefields of World War II in North Africa, with only faint traces of tank and artillery tracks remaining, and these mostly in scarred green vegetation.

OIL:

U. S. Offers Leases

To capitalize on the 17,000,000 barrels of oil and gas underlying the Cerritos channel between Los Angeles and Long Beach, Calif., the U. S. government invited private operators to submit bids for leasing privileges to develop the properties.

Besides obtaining a bonus for use of the land, the U. S. will also receive a royalty of 16⅔ per cent on production from the area. Under terms, 10 wells must be drilled to production within 12 months, and six more within 18 months of delivery of the lease.

Highest bonus ever paid for drilling oil on federal lands was $1,407,500 for 262½ acres in the Elk basin field in Wyoming.

U. S. PAYROLL:

Lop Off 131,058

During the period from June to September of this year, 131,058 employees were lopped off the federal payroll, Senator Harry F. Byrd, Va., revealed as chairman of the joint economy committee. This left 2,964,405 still at work for Uncle Sam.

Senator Harry Byrd

The total discharged amounted to 157,997, but the figure was brought down by the navy's employment of 15,314 new workers, and an increase of 7,920 in the post office's personnel.

The war department trimmed its payroll by 139,968; the War Manpower commission by 11,931; the Panama canal by 3,548, and the agriculture department by 2,550.

RUSSIA:

Nazis Hit Back

Duplicating their tactics used at Kharkov last winter, the Nazis struck at the Reds' extended positions at the important rail junction of Zhitomir and hurled them back 20 miles to the east in heavy fighting.

As Field Marshal Fritz von Mannstein's 150,000 Nazi troops attacked near Zhitomir, the Russ sought to ease pressure on their lines in this sector by intensifying their drive to the north near Gomel, within 100 miles of the old Polish border.

As the Nazi forces held fast to the iron and manganese centers of Krivoi Rog and Nikopol in the south, the Reds probed the enemy's lines on either side of these strongholds, in an effort to find a weak spot for a break-through.

Fighting Russian units on the east coast, the Nazis clung to the Crimea, which dominates the Black sea.

WAR LOAN:

To Begin 4th Drive

With the third war loan drive well over its goal of 15 billion dollars, the U. S. treasury announced plans for a fourth drive beginning January 18.

Although the 14 billion dollar goal of the new drive is below the last mark, individual investors will be asked to contribute 5½ billion dollars, more than they were requested to do during the third campaign.

To meet investment requirements, savings deposit departments of commercial banks will be allowed to purchase limited quantities of a 2½ per cent issue maturing in 1970, and a 2¼ per cent security due in 1959.

To sell as many securities as possible with current purchasing power, the government will ask banks to refrain from loaning money for speculative purchases.

PROFITEERING

Almost two-thirds of the nation's farmers believe that manufacturing companies are making "excessive profits" on war orders, a survey taken by the Association of National Advertisers reveals. Results of interviews of 2,800 typical farmers, divided into seven classes, showed that 60 per cent think that profiteering is going on, although 75 per cent of the group are of the opinion that industry is doing a "reasonably good job." Seventy per cent stated that labor could do better.

Motorist Quick to Take Advantage of His Find

A traveler who stopped at a cross-roads garage in the backwoods, asked the attendant for gasoline.

"How'd you like the bombing of Hamburg?" the motorist asked.

"What bombing?" inquired the hillsman.

"Why, you know, the one the papers have been full of for a month . . ."

"Why bomb Hamburg?" persisted the other.

"There's a war on, you dope. Didn't you know that?"

The attendant shifted his chewing tobacco.

"Can't say I did, stranger."

"You didn't know . . . Look! Never mind the gasoline. Just roll me out four new tires!"

When the word went out that soldiers overseas wanted packages from home—the response was so overwhelming that Uncle Sam reluctantly had to call a halt. Today, due to shipping space, there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men—but you can still send packages to soldiers in the U. Sales records in Post Exchanges and Canteens show that Camel is first choice with men in all the services. So send him that carton of Camels today.—Adv.

Stockholm Is the Center Of War, Political News

As Stockholm, Sweden, is today the chief center of war news and political information, more than 100 foreign correspondents are stationed there, about 10 times the normal number, says Collier's. Some 40 are from Axis territories and the remainder from the Allied nations and neutral countries.

Excepting the Germans, who rent a private suite, all these correspondents and their assistants use one pressroom maintained by the Swedish foreign office.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Group riding is a rubber-saving procedure which is rapidly gaining acceptance. The average number of persons per car throughout the country prior to July 1, 1942, was 2. In six months it jumped to 2.44, and at the beginning of May it had increased to 2.66. The greatest gain has been in rural industrial areas, where the average is now 3.17 persons per car.

Bottled air may be a regular accessory in the postwar automobile, making the car owner independent of roadside stations when emergency tire inflation is necessary. The air bottles, now used by the Army, can be refilled at any air line.

A Message about Coffee

To the Coffee Trade and Coffee Consumers of America

Dear Friends:

THE NATIONAL COFFEE DEPARTMENT OF BRAZIL is pleased to announce that the new crop of Brazilian coffee has just been harvested. In the opinion of experts, this year's crop is one of the finest, if not the finest, in QUALITY, ever produced in Brazil.

A further reassuring statement from the National Coffee Department of Brazil is to the effect that necessary steps have already been taken to make this new, and finer, crop of coffee immediately available to American Importers in the ports of Santos, Rio de Janeiro, Angra dos Reis, Paranagua and Victoria.

In addition, the utmost is being done to permit buyers to make up their shipments, without delays, of all grades from the new crop.

As a result, Brazil is now in a position not only to supply the increasing demand for fine coffees on the part of the American Consumer, but further, to enable its customers either to increase the percentage of Brazils in their blends, or to maintain a high standard of quality in their hundreds of "Straight Brazil" or "Straight Santos" brands.

Cordially yours,

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY O'HARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin can ride any horse on his family's Wyoming ranch, but he wants a colt of his own. His father, a retired army officer, refuses because Ken has not been promoted at school and has shown no sense of responsibility. But Ken's mother convinces Captain McLaughlin that the colt may be just what Ken needs. Ken picks the yearling filly of a "loco" mare named Rocket. Loco is the horse breeder's name for a no-good, untamable horse. Captain McLaughlin, a good judge of horses, is angry at Ken's decision, but Ken's mind is made up. His father promises to help him bring the filly in from the pasture. Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER VIII

Rob had his work cut out for him next day. Banner and the mares had been driven out soon after Sargent left. Rocket, uneasy and restless in spite of a good measure of oats poured into a feed box and set on the ground, was kept alone in one of the corrals.

"The noose?" said Nell at breakfast, pouring cream in her coffee. "Are you going to bother to take that off before you load her?"

Rob looked outraged. "Do you think I would deliver her with that old string around her neck?"

Howard and Ken looked at each other. That meant getting Rocket in the chute. Rocket was to be got into the chute, then she was to be got into the truck!

"Who'll drive the truck?" asked Nell.

"I'll drive it myself. I'll take Gus along—might need him."

Breakfast was eaten quickly. McLaughlin hurried up to the corrals. Gus was told to fill the truck with gas and oil and get it ready for the trip, Tim was to help in the chute.

They moved Rocket through the corrals without much trouble, but when she was once more in the small coop which led to the chute, and the heavy gate closed behind her, she began to snort and rear.

The narrow passage into the chute was open before her, but even though they urged her, and yelled at her, and flapped blankets and quirts over the fence on her back, she was too wise to go in. She could see through, and at the far end, a heavy door blocked escape.

"It's that door," said McLaughlin. "She sees that there's no way out through the chute. We'll have to open that door, and let her see daylight through. Then perhaps if I rush her from here, I can drive her through. Ken, you get up there on top of the chute wall, close by the door. Open the door. If she rushes in, you slam the door shut. It's going to take quick thinking and quick action. You can lean down and handle the door from the top—it's not easy—mind you don't fall down into the chute. The door swings from inside out—if you get it three-quarters shut and she crashes against it, she'll shut it the rest of the way herself."

Ken climbed up on the wall of the chute, unsteady with excitement. McLaughlin, blanket on arm, climbed a few bars of the fence of the coop.

"Ready, Ken? Open the door."

Ken leaned over and hauled the door open, and at the same moment Rob gave a yell and flapped the blanket on Rocket's haunches. Rocket saw the daylight at the far end of the chute and plunged through. Ken closed the door again —just in time—the mare crashed against it.

She was right under him, and as he pulled back, she reared and her great head and wild eyes were in his face.

"Pole, Tim!" shouted McLaughlin, and Tim, standing ready, thrust through both walls of the chute a heavy pole to cut off her backward escape. It was at the height of the mare's haunches, too high for her to get her feet over, and not so high that she could back under it.

When she came down on all four feet again, and felt the pole behind her, she began to fight.

McLaughlin climbed the wall of the chute, opposite Ken, and struggled to get hold of the frantic creature's head.

Suddenly Rocket dropped to the earth and stood quiet a moment, her sides heaving with breaths that were almost groans; and McLaughlin reached his hand down, clipped the rope, and it fell free. But at that instant the mare reared sharply again, McLaughlin could not draw back quickly enough, and the top of her head struck him in the face.

Ken saw the blood spurt from his father's eye as Rocket's foam-flecked head described a complete backward arc, and she crashed to the ground, breaking the pole behind her.

For a moment McLaughlin clung to the wall, swearing, one hand to his face, while the mare fought madly below him, her feet thundering on the walls, her great body flinging itself from one side to the other.

McLaughlin got down and put his bandana to his bleeding face. One eye was swelling rapidly. "That's that," he said, going around into the corrals.

Rocket, screaming and grunting, was struggling desperately to right herself. She had fallen so far backward that her head and neck were almost in the coop. This gave her forelegs more freedom, and by vigorous writhings and twistings, pushing and kicking with her legs, she forced herself out of the chute and into the coop, and immediately scrambled to her feet.

"We're all set now, Gus," said McLaughlin. "Bring the truck in there, back it up against the far end of the chute. Tim, you get the runway and set it in the chute. We'll drive her right through the chute, up the runway and into the truck."

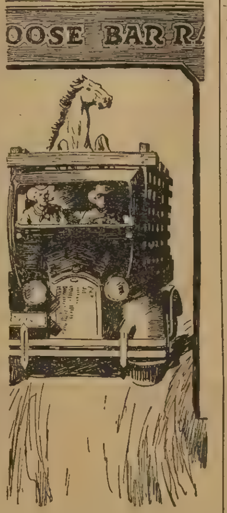
"Better fix dot eye, Boss," said Gus, looking at Rob's face, "und de cheek—dot's bad cut—split wide open. Let Missus fix up for you."

Rob held the handkerchief over his eye. He looked down at himself. He was spattered with foam and blood. He frowned.

"Yes, I'll go down and clean up. Gus, I don't want any more trouble with that mare. You never can tell what she'll do. Once she's in the truck, we're pretty safe, but to get her there is the trick. Better saddle Shorty. I'll ride him through the chute, and up the runway, and there's a chance she might follow him into the truck."

While Tim and Gus maneuvered the truck until its back was flush against the door of the chute, Rob went down for first aid.

"I think it really needs stitches, Rob," said Nell, examining it closely, having washed her hands in hot water and soap, and laid out all her first-aid kit on the kitchen table.



And she reared to meet it—

"It's on the cheek bone, below the eye, really a wide cut."

"Deep?" asked Rob.

"Not so very deep."

"Fix it with tape then."

Nell held the lips of the wound closed until the bleeding had nearly stopped, then made little bridges of narrow adhesive tape across, and finally a dressing over all.

Then she put both arms around his neck and laid her cheek against his, holding him closely. He felt a slight tremor through all her body.

"Don't worry, honey," he said. "It's nothing." He patted her on the shoulder—suddenly his arms held her hard and he kissed her, then he went upstairs to change into spotless whipcord riding breeches, polished boots, and tailored jacket.

Back up at the corral again, the loading was accomplished with comparative ease. Shorty was ridden up the incline into the truck, Rocket followed. Shorty was ridden down again, and before Rocket could follow, the back of the truck was closed and escape was shut off. She was neatly enclosed in the six-foot walls of the truck, made of sturdy two-by-fours bolted together. She reared, she clawed at the rails, she neighed wildly, she plunged and leaped until again and again her feet slid out from under her and she crashed to the floor, then scrambled up to begin all over. But there was nothing she could do. No one paid any attention to her any more. Rob picked the old piece of lariat triumphantly out of the chute, and draped it around his own neck. He and Gus got into the box of the truck, and the boys begged to ride along as far as the turn onto the highway.

They passed the house, the boys hanging on the steps of the truck, shouting good-by to Nell, who came out to wave to them.

But Rocket's story was not yet ended. Where the ranch road turned off from the Lincoln Highway, was the sign of the ranch. Every rancher is proud of his ranch sign, under which all visiting cars must pass, and exercises great ingenuity in thinking up something striking and effective.

McLaughlin's sign was a high square arch. On the broad horizontal board which was the span of it, he had painted GOOSE BAR RANCH, in red letters against a blue ground. To each side were reproductions of his brands.

As they reached the sign, Rocket's wild eyes were upon it—this strange bar, bearing down upon her from the skies—and she reared to meet it.

Standing astretch on her hind legs, her head up, the sign caught her a blow on the top of the brow. There was a great crash in the truck; McLaughlin glanced back anxiously; he pulled up, and they got out and climbed up over the sides; but Rocket lay motionless. Rob got into the truck, against Gus' anxious warnings, but there was no danger, for Rocket never moved again.

The rest of the day was spent rounding up horses of all ages, descendants of the Albino.

At first no one had believed that McLaughlin really meant what he said—that every single one of the Albino's blood, no matter how beautiful, how fast, or how promising, was to be sold. But as the hours went on, and one after the other was gathered into the corrals, and still they went out on horseback to gather more, with Nell busy with the stud book and names, it became apparent that he was in earnest.

Ken and Howard were kept at the gates, opening and shutting them as the different bands were brought through, taken down to the corrals, the one bronc picked out and held, the others sent out again. Gus and Tim and Ross were all riding.

"And that's every last one of them," said Nell at length, closing the book. Her voice was regretful.

She and Williams were in the stable, looking out into the corrals, over the top of the Dutch door. The two boys were perched safely on the corral fence, Rob and the men in the corral with the milling broncs.

"Except Flicka," murmured Ken, and he looked across the corral at his mother and caught her eye. She was looking at him too, thinking, he knew, the same thing. He had not been exactly worried about Flicka. After all, she was his own, his father had given her to him, she couldn't be sold without his consent.

McLaughlin walked over to Ken, called him down from the fence, and walked away with him.

"Ken," he said quietly, "I'm going to give you a chance to do a sensible, manly thing. I want you to choose another colt, and let me sell Flicka to Williams with the rest of this hell's brew."

A wave of heat rushed all over Ken's body. He looked down, dug with his toe in the gravel of the path, and shook his head.

McLaughlin was quiet and persuasive. "You've seen for yourself—what can you expect? It's for your own sake I'm asking, as well as to save myself the trouble and unpleasantness of trying to help you do something which is impossible. What's the use of having another Rocket on your hands? You've seen what end she came to—and no one could have tried harder with a horse than I tried with her—"

"But I'm going to tame Flicka," whispered Ken. "Sometimes bad horses get tamed."

McLaughlin's voice rose angrily. "Look up!"

Ken looked up and was more frightened than ever. His father's face looked appalling. It was swollen out of all shape, one eye was closed by purple and black lumps above and below, and the white dressing on the cheekbone was surrounded by an inflamed, angry circle.

"Are you going to be a bull-headed little simp or a sensible boy?"

Ken said stubbornly, "Dad, I have to have her—she's mine."

He really meant, 'she's me.' It felt as if his father were asking him to be torn apart.

On Sunday the family went to church in Cheyenne. There was the usual argument before going. Rob, who wanted to spend the morning sitting on the terrace reading the funny papers, said he thought they ought not to go because some officers might come out from the Post. "There's always a chance, you know, that someone might buy a pony."

"Not Sunday morning," said Nell firmly. And then she added with the one deep dimple in her right cheek showing, "But you don't have to go, dear, your face isn't healed up yet. That's a good excuse. I'll go and take the boys."

McLaughlin said, "Right-o." Fifteen minutes later, when Nell was ready to go and Howard and Ken were dressed in their long gray flannel trousers and white shirts and small round white linen hats with narrow brims, he came running upstairs and roared indignantly, "Do you think I'll let you go to town and sit in that pew without me by your side?"

As they waited for him to dress, the boys fidgeting, Nell explained to them that Army Officers are trained to be very particular how they look for the sake of their prestige, so they must all wait patiently.

At last McLaughlin came down looking clean and handsome in his light gray flannel suit, with a soft felt hat tilted at just the right angle on his black hair and nothing but a small piece of adhesive on his cheek bone.

Nell was in a dark green print, with turban and high-heeled pumps. Tim had washed the car, and the maroon paint and shining nickel was as bright as anything they passed on the Lincoln Highway.

Household Hints

A low, firm stool or a hassock placed near the washbowl, enables little children to reach the bowl to wash hands before meals and after toilet.

To test jars sealed with lacquered metal tops, tap the top of the jar with a spoon. A clear ringing sound denotes a seal. If the sound is dull a seal has not been formed.

A milk-bottle cap placed in the paraffin top of each preserve jar just before it hardens will make the removing and replacing of the wax covers very easy when the tab on the cap is used as a handle.

When washing, if a handful of salt is added to the last rinse water, it keeps the clothes from freezing fast to the line.

To keep the oven, gas or electric, clean, wash it frequently with hot soda water—a tablespoon of soda to a quart of water. After using the oven, leave the door open until it has dried out. This helps avoid rust and stale odors. Always clean up foods that run over as quickly as possible.

When washing delicate lace, wrap it around a milk bottle, fasten the end, and dip it up and down in soapy water. Rinse the same way in clear water.

Don't broil a steak immediately after taking it from the refrigerator. Wait until it reaches room temperature. High heat on thoroughly chilled meat will produce a steam in which juices are lost and it takes longer to cook.

A non-skid, non-tipping base for a nail polish bottle can be provided by using half of a rubber ball, on the rounded top of which a hole has been cut. After inserting the bottle, the brush can be dipped readily with one hand, without fear of spilling.

Old Age Grant

other additional funds were provided by the 1943 legislature for public welfare purposes, making possible some increases in grants to recipients of other types of aid through the county department of public welfare.

Groups aided other than the aged included during November were 57 families of ependent children, an increase from the 53 families in this category aided during September. These grants rose from a family average of $26.54 in September to $29.00 in November.

Blind recipients numbered 5 in Nov. as against 6 in September. One blind case was closed and transferred to Old Age assistance. The November grants average $16.00 as compared with $15.83 in September.

Recipients of aid to the handicapped totaled 26 in November, receiving an average of $14.83. The 25 in this group in September received an average of $12.44.

There are over 20 applications pending and when these are cleared and approved, it is very probable that the average grants will be decreased as there is just so much money to be expended.

Rural Electricity

of customers per mile required to be classed as a "city line". The effect of this change will be to transfer 2,377 customers from rural to city rates and provide a saving to these customers of $8,676 a year, it was announced. In the case of rural public schools, whose total yearly purchase of electricity amounts to slightly less than $16,000 per year, it was stated that the commission's order, by reduction of capacity resuirements in these schools, will provide a saving of $3,130 per year, or a 20 per cent reduction in average rates.

The order also reduces the monthly minimum charge for 15 KWH, or less, from $1.25 to $1.

"The new rural rates are now so completely simple that every rural customer of the Alabama Power Co., will shortly receive a billing chart which will instantly show the cost of electricity purchased, without any calculations" a statement from commission said. "Also, the reverse side of this billing chart will contain easily understood directions for reading any electric meter."

PEANUT GROWERS URGED SELECT PLANTING SEED

Now is the time to select peanuts suitable for planting purposes, to insure an ample supply of seed for next year's crop, states J. C. Lowery extension agronomist of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. Peanuts in most sections of the State which have been harvested under reasonable conditions should be high in germination.

Many farmers obtained poor stands last spring due to poor quality seed. This can be avoided next year by saving good planting seed from this year's crop. With peanuts needed so badly in the war effort farmers can not take chances on poor stands nert spring.

That Hang On

Chronic bronchitis may develop if your cough, chest cold, or acute bronchitis is not treated and you cannot afford to take a chance with any medicine less potent than Creomulsion which goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes.

Creomulsion blends beechwood creosote by special process with other time tested medicines for coughs. It contains no narcotics.

No matter how many medicines you have tried, tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough, permitting rest and sleep, or you are to have your money back. (Adv.)

PLANT COVER CROPS WHERE PEANUTS ARE HARVESTED

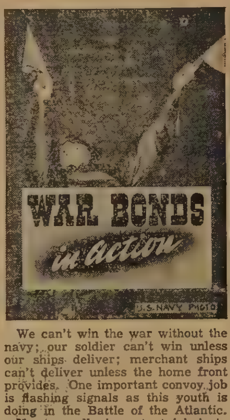
Although it is very late to plant cover crops, the need for them is so great on land where peanuts have been "dug" that they should still be planted if planted immediately. Austrian winter peas, are good legumes to follow peanuts.

Plant not less than 30 pounds of Austrian peas per acre. It is very important to apply 400 to 600 pounds of basic slag or 300 to 400 pounds of superphosphate per acre. Phosphate is needed for legumes on all sods but it is especially needed where peanust are harvested.

Never before has it been so important for farmers to put cover on peanut land. Unusually large acreages of peanuts are having to be harvested to help meet war needs. The large acreage is making it necessary for many farmers to plant peanuts after peanuts or at least with only one cotton or corn crop between peanut crops.

Experiment Station tests and experience of old peanut producers show that continuous harvesting of peanuts rapidly depletes the soil. Damage is very little, if any, where harvested peanuts are grown once in four or five years on the same land and good soil improving practices followed.

Now these good rotations cannot be followed on most farms and plant the acreage of peanuts needed for the war. But much of the soil depleting effect of digging peanuts can be off set by planting legumes well phosphated.



We can't win the war without the navy; our soldier can't win unless our ships deliver; merchant ships can't deliver unless the home front provides. One important convoy job is flashing signals as this youth is doing in the Battle of the Atlantic.

Household Hints

Marks left on wood work by striking matches can be removed with lemon juice.

Save all meat trimmings and bones for seasoning soup, making hash and for fat.

Eggs packed down in salt and kept in a cold or cool place will keep fresh for a long time in winter.

Clean silver by rubbing with the inside of an Irish potato peel, then polish with a soft dry cloth.

After juice is extracted from lemons that have been cut in half, tie several halves in a creesecloth bag and hang in the clothes closets to drivt out moths.

Butter will churn and gather quickly on cold mornings if the milk is set in a pan or bucket of hot water to take the chill off before churning begins.

If the starched clothes freeze, let them thaw before folding. They may tear if handled or folded when frozen.

TEACHERS MEET TO PLAN FOOD PRODUCTION WAR TRAINING PROGRAM

The Food Production War Training Program for Chilton County is now being started, according to Supt. D. P. Culp. Plans were made for the program at a special meeting last week of teachers of vocational agriculture and others interested in the program.

The Food Production War Training Program, now in its third year, is designed entirely to increase food production in 1944. In addition to courses dealing directly with needed wartime foods, a feature of interest to all farmers is the course in Farm Machinery Repair.

Supt. Culp says these classes will be organized and supervised by teachers of vocational agriculture in addition to their regular work, but that the instructors will be local people with successful experience in the course taught. These courses will be available without cost and further information can be secured from Supt. Culp, or your teacher of vocational agriculture.

FIDDLERS CONVENTION

The Enterprise Junior High School is planning one of the best old time Fiddlers Convention ever held in the country Friday night, December 17th, at 7:30 p.m. All fiddlers and lovers of good old-fashioned string music are cordially invited to come and bring some one with you. Cash prizes will be given. First, second and third place winners. Plenty of good eats and drinks will also be served. Charges will be 10c and 20c. This is being sponsored by the P.-T. A. So don't forget the time and place.

JACKSON REUNION

The family of Mrs Lizzie Jackson all met at the home of Mr and Mrs Joe Jackson of Collins Chapel, Sunday, November, 28. All ten of the children were together for the first time in 13 years. The youngest of the family, Pfc. Arnold Jackson, was home from the Army, which helped to make the day much happier. This was a day that will long be remembered by this aged mother, to think she was permitted to have all ten of her children together one more time and most of her grandchildren.

Those present were: The Mother, Mrs Lizzie Jackson; Mr and Mrs T. C. Jackson and two children, Juanita and Donald of Sylacauga; Roy Jackson; Mr and Mrs Reuben Jackson and two children, Dorothy Ann and Mrs. Voncille Hydier and two children; Mr and Mrs Marvin Jackson and three children, M. C., Louis and Thomas; Mr and Mrs Andrew Jackson and two children,; Mr and Mrs Winford Jackson and two children, James Edwin and Jerry Wayne; Mr and Mrs R. E. Burks and four children, Charles, R. E. Jr., Bettye Sue and Gerald; Mr and Mrs Joe Jackson; George Jackson and two children Mary Nell and Marcelle; Pfc Arnold Jackson of Orlando, Fla.; Mrs Flora Oaks of Lomax and Mrs Mary Baker and baby of Sylacauga.

The morning was spent in talking of childhood days. After all arrived with their well filled baskets, a beautiful table was spread out in the yard. It was well filled and in the center was a beautiful cake which read, Happy Reunion. It was brought by Mr and Mrs T. C. Jackson. After the table was set, Grandmother Jackson, called Dinner, and all gathered around the table and sang, Precious Memories, and prayer was offered by T. C. Jackson. Then presents were presented and those which did not have presents gave money to mother Jackson. Everyone enjoyed the meal very much.

After dinner there were pictures made of the family in different ways and the rest of the day wasspent in singing in the Sacred Harp. This family are all great lovers of these grand sacred songs. There father, the late T. J. Jackson, a head of them was a great leader in these good books.

After supper the family began to seperate and each one go to their different homes. This was the saddest part of the day. But all left hoping to live to be together again next year. We all wish to spend many more happy days together again like this one. And we all hope and pray that it won't be so long until our brother Arnold will soon return home to stay. The day would have been a complete success if we could have had all the nephews home which are in Service and most of them are overseas, too. There were five nephews absent who are in Service. and a daughter-in-law, Mrs Myrtle Jackson.

BETHSALEM NEWS

We are having an old-time cottage prayer meeting in this community. It has been going for some time. A good many people take a part for their Lord in testifying and praying at these meetings. We all should do this, especially when our nations are at each other's throat. We need to turn back to God and the Lord Jesus Christ, and build back the old altars and humble ourselves and pray for each other. We will meet at Bro. Dewey Hill's next Saturday night. Bro. Arthur Wilkins will lead. Everybody is invited.

The Junior Department of Clanton First Baptist Church will have their Christmas Tree and party on Tuesday December 21st, at 7:30 p. m. They will prepare a Special Box at this time which will be sent to the Orphanage at Troy. This box is in addition to their regular Christmas offering. All Juniors are urged to come.

Grammar School Parent-Teachers Met

The Grammar School P.-T. A. members were guests of the social committee who intertained in the lunch room at the school, Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Following the social hour, the meeting was called to order in Mrs Thomas' class room for a most enjoyable program. The Glee Club under the direction of Mrs S. C. Porch, sung Christmas Carols in the hall. They did beautifully. Pupils from Mrs Parnell's expression class gave several readings. Those taking part included, Jerry Studdard, Louise Golden, Margaret Foshee, Norvell Simpson and Martha Joe Sorrell acted as announcer. Mary Ann Oglesby and Lois Jackson, pupils of Mrs Jones gave two lovely piano selections.

The Guest speaker for the day was Maj. Horton Walker, who is home on leave. He gave a most interesting talk comparing the country of Porta Rico, with America, educationally.

After a brief business session the room count was made with honors going to Mrs Durbin's Fifth Grade. The meeting was dismissed by the President, Mrs Mark Tucker.

NOTICE !

The Executive Committee of the Unity Association will meet on Wednesday, Dec. 15, at 10:30 a. m. at the Church. This will be a very important meeting and all members of the Executive Board are urged to be present.

Old Age Pension Meeting At Court House December 11

There will be a re-organization meeting of the Chilton County Old-Age Pension People Saturday, Dec., 11, at 10:30 a. m. at the Court House in Clanton.

A conservative and well defined pension objective must necessarily be adhered to if we can expect to win pensions. The objective of the Pension Organization in Alabama has been, from the start, $30.00 per month in equity, to all pensioners of the required age, and an immediate objective, as intended by the Federal Old-Age Assistance Act, as of 1935, and effective February 1, 1936. The ultimate objective that the State Plan cooperate fully with the Federal Government in matching funds.

Therefore, it is the candid opinion of the leaders of the State and County Associations that a re-organization of the State-Federal Old-Age Pension Plan be instituted as soon as possible. For this purpose, and to this end, the County mass meeting is being called for Saturday, December 11, at Clanton in the Courthouse at 10:30 a. m.

If you really believe in pensions for our aged citizens you certainly have a place in this great meeting.

Respectfully,
Old-Age Pension Association of Alabama, Inc

Report On Chilton County National War Chest Drive

So near, yet so far, only $332.01 to reach our county quota of $7,057.89.

Ten communities have reached or over subscribed their quotas; they have done their duty. Twenty-one communities have done some work, some have made a creditable showing towards reaching their quotas, some not enough to be proud of, and should do more next week. There is left eleven communities who have not scratched the board, or turned in a little by the schools in their communities. The people of these last eleven communities have just as much pride in their community and county and are just as willing to contribute their part to our boys in the Service and the War Relief Agencies, as any in our county. They must be contacted and this cause explained to them. Spare a little of your time, get your friends to help. Everybody pitch in, Chilton County must reach its quota; let's do it by next Tuesday, December 14th.

REVENGE

An old sailor had retired from the sea. Each morning a grubby youngster knocked at his door, went in and came out again. After this had gone on for some weeks the curiosity of the villagers was aroused.

"Tell me," said one to the youngster, "why do you visit that old sailor every morning?"

"Well, sir, he gives me a dime if I say to him, 'The captain wants you immediately.' "

"And what does he say to that?"

"He says, 'Tell the captain to go to blazes!' "

Slight Slip

Joe—Did you know my uncle was a wire walker? But he had to give it up.

Bill—You don't say. How come?

Joe—One day my Uncle was tight and the wire wasn't!

Smart Girl

Student—To whom was Minerva married?

Teacher—When will you learn that Minerva was the Goddess of Wisdom? She wasn't married!

WHAT, NO PARACHUTE?

Airplane Hostess—The plane is nearing the New York airport. Shall I brush you off, sir?

Passenger—No thanks! I'd rather wait and get off myself when we get on the ground.

Just Misunderstood

Boss—I'm surprised at you, Johnny. You didn't tell the truth. You had yesterday off for your grandmother's funeral and I saw her yesterday on the bus.

Johnny—I didn't say she had died, sir. I just said I'd like to go to her funeral!

Some Stuff!

Harry—This stuffed bird is worth a thousand dollars!

Jerry—Yeah! What's it stuffed with?

TALL STORY

The Irishman was relating a story of his travels.

"I landed on the island and started to explore," he said. "When I got to the middle of the island I saw the biggest bear I've ever seen in my loife." He paused dramatically, then continued: "There was one tree on the island, and the lowest bough was 20 feet from the ground, and I jumped for it."

"Did you manage to grasp it?" asked one of his audience.

"I didn't grasp it going up," replied the Irishman, "but I caught it coming down."

Unusual Experience

Rastus—Since youall's been in de army, has yo' heard any bullets?

Sambo—Hear 'em. Why Ah heard one bullet twice!

Rastus—How come yo' could do that?

Sambo—Ah heard it once when it passed me and then when Ah passed it!

Conserve Sugar, but Satisfy Sweet Tooth
(See Recipes Below)

Saving on Sugar

Extensive summer and fall canning has left many a family low on sugar. Homemakers are writing in and asking for recipes which will give their families "just something to satisfy the sweet tooth" —but that something must be sugar-saving.

Now that jellies are rationed you may have to use what sugar you can get for putting up those juices you canned during summer for jelly —and that means there will be less sugar than before left for baking uses. Sugar substitutes can be utilized not only in cakes and cookies but desserts and icings. Many cake recipes, too, can be made with less sugar than they call for.

Fruits-in-season now include cranberries which are perfectly delicious in this steamed pudding:

Steamed Cranberry Pudding.
(Serves 4)

2 cups fresh cranberries
1⅓ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
¼ teaspoon mace
2 teaspoons soda
⅓ cup hot water
½ cup molasses

Mix flour, salt, spices and soda; cut cranberries in two and add to dry ingredients. Combine hot water and molasses; blend with first mixture. Transfer to greased pudding mold; cover and steam 2½ hours. Unmold and serve with your favorite pudding sauce.

Do chocolates satisfy the sweet tooth in your family? Here is a light, lovely dessert:

Chocolate Puff Souffle.
(Serves 6)

½ 7-ounce package semi-sweet chocolate
1 cup milk
3 tablespoons sugar
Pinch of salt
1 tablespoon vanilla
3 eggs

Melt chocolate with milk in top of double boiler. Beat with egg beater until smooth. Add sugar, salt, vanilla and unbeaten eggs; beat with egg beater 1 minute. Cover, and cook over boiling water 20 minutes without lifting cover. Remove from heat and serve immediately with cream.

It is possible to make cakes without any sugar at all, but better results can be achieved if some sugar is used in the cake. Too many all-syrup cakes have a coarse texture to which we are unaccustomed after years of light, fine-grained cakes. Here are suggestions which you can be proud to add to your wartime cookery collection:

Lynn Says:

Starve the Garbage Can! Precious vitamins lie right underneath the thin skin of carrots. Don't pare, just scrub the vegetable.

The same is true of potatoes. Scrub well and cook with skins on, then eat skins and all.

Young beets can be cooked as other greens. Season and serve. You'll be delighted.

Tops of spring onions make wonderful seasoning. Celery tops are grand for soups, salads. Coarser parts of celery can be pureed for soup.

Carrot and radish tops are attractive for garnishes. Parsley and lettuce are more than garnish —they're to be eaten.

Check refrigerator every morning—and the bread box, too. Use every bit of leftover in that day's meals.

All-Bran Prune Cake.
(Makes an 8 by 8 inch pan)

⅓ cup milk
½ cup bran cereal
¼ cup butter or margarine
⅔ cup sugar
1 egg
1 cup flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup chopped cooked prunes

Pour milk over bran cereal and allow to soak for about 10 minutes. Blend butter and sugar thoroughly, add egg and beat until mixture is light and fluffy. Stir in soaked bran cereal. Sift flour with baking powder and spices; mix with chopped prunes and add to first mixture. Spread in greased cake pan and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven about 35 minutes.

Molasses Gingerbread.

1 cup molasses
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
¼ cup sour cream
2 eggs
1 cup flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon allspice
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground cloves

Heat molasses and butter. When the latter is melted, remove from the fire; add sour cream and beaten eggs. Mix remainder of ingredients together and sift into liquid mixture. Pour into cake pans lined with greased paper and bake in a slow oven about 30 minutes. Serve hot with cold applesauce or frost with cream cheese-powdered sugar icing, flavored with lemon or orange juice.

Have you enough sugar for a favorite white cake but not enough for an icing? Then here's the answer in a lovely topping which does not require too much honey:

Honey Topping.

4 tablespoons butter or margarine
4 tablespoons sugar
4 tablespoons flour
4 tablespoons honey
½ cup chopped nuts or coconut

Cream butter, add sugar, mixing well. Add flour and honey and beat until well blended. Fold in nutmeats or coconut. Spread on cake which is still warm from baking and place under broiler until topping bubbles.

A cookie recipe that's low on all ingredients is this delicious wafer which is lovely to look at, too!

Oatmeal Honey Wafers.
(Makes 16 wafers)

1 egg
⅓ cup honey
1 cup rolled oats
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons melted butter or margarine
¼ teaspoon vanilla
⅓ cup chopped nuts

Beat egg until light; add honey, continuing to beat. Then add remaining ingredients. Drop by spoonfuls, about 2 inches apart, on greased baking sheet. Flatten slightly with a knife dipped in cold water. Bake in a moderate (350 degrees) about 10 minutes or until a light delicate brown.

Paging Santa Claus

by Jane Corby

McCLURE SYNDICATE —W.N.U. FEATURES

Jan Payson sings in the floor show at the Devon Arms. She used to sell magazines there, and support her invalid sister, Dora, but Paul Harris, the manager, discharged her when she was late for work on Thanksgiving. He gave her the floor show when he found that the rich William Anthony Deverest knew her, thinking Deverest's influence would bring patronage. Jan, however, thinks Deverest is his own chauffeur, Tony Williams; and he does not dare enlighten her because she tells him she hates Deverest because of his wealth. The show is not a success—Deverest does not bring his friends. Harris blames Jan and she tells Tony her predicament—that Harris thinks she knows Deverest.

CHAPTER IV

The sunny morning wore on. Jan returned to the room after rehearsal, glowing after a bit of unexpected praise from Zambrini. A new verse had been added to her Jingle Bells song, and the orchestra leader declared she had learned it perfectly. Dora was napping, so Jan retired to the bedroom and busied herself with the little details of mending which kept her show costumes in good condition. The muted ring of the house telephone interrupted her and wakened Dora. The clerk was announcing the arrival of Dr. Curtis.

Jan stood watching the doctor's deft movements, her amber eyes glowing with the gratitude she felt for him. How wonderful it must be to have spent a lifetime bringing happiness to others! Of course Dr. Curtis had not really spent a lifetime yet, Jan reminded herself; Tony had revealed that the doctor was only a little over thirty-five. Then suddenly Dr. Curtis looked at her above Dora's fair head and said quietly:

"I think this young lady is about ready for our experiment."

Jan could only stand and stare at him. He had always refused to admit that the operation would be anything more than experimental in nature, although Jan suspected he hoped it would give Dora a new life.

"Oh, Jan, isn't this wonderful?"

"Of course, dear," Jan swallowed the lump in her throat and tried to be casual as she answered her sister. But she could not overcome the horrible fear that Dr. Curtis' simple statement had aroused. Dora—her helpless little sister—lying on an operating table! The smell of ether—those dreadful hours of waiting without being able to help. She heard Dr. Curtis' voice as from a great distance.

"Your sister is going to be fine, Jan. She's been one of my best patients so far, and I know she isn't going to disappoint me now." He patted the pale slender hand lying on the coverlet and rose briskly. Only then did Jan remember that the question of paying for the operation had not been discussed.

"But—but Dr. Curtis! The money—"

His warm hand rested reassuringly on her shoulder a moment. "I haven't mentioned it, have I?" he asked, smiling.

The morning after Dora's operation, Jan returned to the hotel with feet that fairly danced across the lobby.

"Dr. Curtis said she would surely be home in time for New Year's," Jan said breathlessly to Paul Harris. For once his iron reserve seemed broken and he had to clear his throat before he spoke.

"I—I'm delighted to hear it, Jan. Dora has become very—very firmly established in my—in all our affections. Last night when you came back from the hospital I was afraid . . ."

Jan looked up and remembered that she had heard Paul's wife had died in a hospital following an operation. For the first time he seemed to her not a stern and worldly hotel manager, but a sympathetic friend.

Later, when she answered a ring at the door, Jan was surprised to see her former landlady, Mrs. Mallord, framed in the doorway.

"I would have taken them to the hospital to your sister, only I couldn't get there during visiting hours . . ." she began. "I'm taking a chance being away as long as this, anyhow. How is the poor darling?"

"She's just fine, Mrs. Mallord. Everybody says she couldn't be better." Jan pulled forward an easy chair and settled her visitor comfortably. "Let me help you off with your coat."

"I don't know as that's necessary," the woman replied, smoothing the plaid design over her knee.

"It's new, isn't it? And I do like your hat, Mrs. Mallord."

"I'm after having myself a complete new outfit."

"Really, Mrs. Mallord! Don't tell me someone's left you a fortune?"

"Well, now—and that's just what happened," began Mrs. Mallord.

"You mean your uncle had money?" Jan interrupted.

"He did that. And he's after leaving it all to me."

"Oh, Mrs. Mallord—I'm more glad about it than I can tell you," Jan cried. "Now you won't have to work any more."

"Listen to the child!" scoffed Mrs. Mallord. "And what should I be doing if not working, as I've done all my life? No, four hundred and eighty-seven dollars is what I had left after I bought some new clothes for myself and Jack, as the lawyer advised me to do. Imagine, if you can, me taking advice from a lawyer! But I put the rest of the money away and now I can die easy."

In the back of her mind Jan was going over what Mrs. Mallord had said about her legacy and Jack's club. It was all wonderfully good fortune for the Mallord family. Kind of Tony, too, to take such an interest in the boy. He must be spending quite a lot of money on him.

Suddenly, Jan was struck by another thought. That legacy of Mrs. Mallord's—it was rather funny that this uncle should turn out to have money only after Tony Williams had called at Jan's old home!

Jan picked up her purse and went down to the lobby. In another week it would be hung with evergreens; Paul had already told her that the huge wreaths of balsam which were especially made for the Devon Arms every year had been ordered and were even then, probably, getting dressed up in red satin bows.

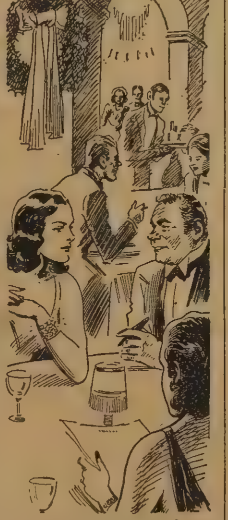
"Jan!"

"Why, Dr. Curtis!" exclaimed Jan.

"Dora couldn't be better, nor in better hands," said the doctor, "but I've been wondering if somebody shouldn't look after you. In fact, I was coming up to prescribe luncheon for you with me."

"Oh!"

Jan could not repress an exclamation that was half pleasure at the thought that such a busy doctor should find time to think of her—and yet dismay at the recollection that she was even then on her way to meet Tony. She explained as well as she could that the luncheon date was out of the question; she was meeting a friend within a few minutes.



"Imitation!" cried the now wide-awake and astonished Clem.

"A girl friend? I'll take you both to lunch."

Jan's color rose a shade higher, as she explained haltingly that it was not a girl she was meeting. As Dr. Curtis still stood looking at her, with that very intent and friendly glance, she grew more embarrassed.

"My date is with Tony Williams," she said at last, and Bradford Curtis thought he had never seen a more charming confusion. He grinned as he thought of Tony's face when he should appear, and promised himself that he would see to it that his friend acted perfectly the role of chauffeur he had picked out for himself.

"Why, that's just fine!" he beamed. "I know Tony well. I'd rather have lunch with you alone, but since we must have Tony with us, I don't mind a bit."

Tony had parked the car around the corner, the usual parking place, out of sight of the hotel. And there was Tony behind the wheel of the car. He had caught sight of them, and his face was alive with welcome.

"Oh, dear," thought Jan to herself, "wait 'til he hears!"

"Hello, Tony," she began as they stopped beside the car and Tony leaped to the ground. "Dr. Curtis met me as I was leaving the hotel . . ." she stopped awkwardly.

"How are you, Tony?" said Dr. Curtis, looking, Jan thought, unnecessarily patronizing. This was going to be worse than she had imagined.

"Very well, thank you—sir," Tony added, apparently as an afterthought.

There was a big crowd at the show that night. The young people were home from school and college for the holidays, and pre-Christmas festivity filled the air. Jan's song was applauded with gusto, and she had to give two encores after the Jingle Bells number. Later Paul Harris sent word to her that a group of prominent business men had taken a table and were anxious to have her and some of the other girls share it with them.

Jan found herself between a man who introduced himself as "Mr. Frazier, a right smart lawyer to you," and Clem Hallack, the big "brooch and bracelet man" introduced to her by Mickey.

Jan smiled a little wanly, and shook her head in response to the insistent, "What'll it be?"

"Oh, no. Please. Nothing to drink," murmured Jan hastily, and pushed away the card the waiter offered her.

With a pudgy forefinger Clem Hallack reached out and touched the bracelet gleaming on Jan's wrist. "Nice liddle junk pile there."

"It is pretty, isn't it?" agreed Jan, "I think it's wonderful the way they can imitate diamonds nowadays."

"Imitation!" cried the now wide-awake and astonished Clem. "That's no imitation, sister. Looks to me like something out of the Rajah's jewel chest!"

By this time their talk had attracted the attention of the rest of the table.

"If I were in the mood I could tell you where that shining bauble came from," observed the grinning Mickey. "If you look closely you will probably find the initials W. A. D." She broke off suddenly, and a look of pain crossed her face.

The rest of the evening was a nightmare to Jan. Sick with horror, she had no idea how she finally managed to get away from the others and escape to her apartment.

Mickey's reference to supposed initials inside her bracelet had not disturbed her. She had steeled herself to such references, feeling that it was part of the role that, for Dora's sake, she had to play. It was the knowledge that the bracelet Tony had given her was valuable that frightened her.

"Some party last night."

Molly, the telephone operator, turned eyes full of eager curiosity toward Jan, stopping her as she tried to pass her switchboard. Jan smiled, but refused to be drawn into conversation.

"Sorry, Molly, I have to rush," apologized Jan, and fled up the lobby.

Her mind was so full of Brad Curtis that she had forgotten Tony and the problem that confronted her as she entered the hospital reception room. Tony, standing by the window, whirled at the sound of the opening door and was puzzled as he saw the light go out of Jan's face.

"Hello, Tony," Jan said lifelessly, in answer to the "Hi!" that was his habitual greeting accompanied by a hand snapped upward in salute. "Let's get going. Dora's probably waiting."

The uneasiness that had gripped her earlier in the day enveloped Jan again like a cloak as she stepped into the car. Tony used this car as if it were his own. The thought stabbed her consciousness, so that she spoke sharply before Tony pressed the starter.

"I've decided not to go shopping." They had planned that this was to be a shopping day.

"You haven't time?" Tony asked.

"I have to do something else." She fished around in her bag and drew out the bracelet that the odious Clem had admired the night before. "Take it back, Tony. I can't bear to think that you—"

"That I what?" said Tony, mystified, making no move to take the bracelet. She slipped it into his overcoat pocket.

"Let's not talk about it," said Jan. "Only—only don't give me anything like that again. Please, Tony."

That wasn't what she had meant to say. She had meant to be stern, and at the same time pleading. She would coax him to tell her the truth about the bracelet, make him promise to return it however he had managed to come by it. Now, with Tony beside her, Jan found it hard to speak at all.

There was a silence. "Okay," said Tony finally. "If that's the way you want it."

"If you don't want to go shopping, maybe you have time for a ride?" Tony asked.

"I think not," said Jan. "You've run up a lot of mileage on my account. I think that had better stop, too."

"Oh, there you are, Jan!"

Paul Harris, stepping from behind a screen, set down the Christmas wreath he was carrying close to a pile of evergreens on the table.

Jan's face paled. Paul had given her suite to someone else! A wave of anger swept over her suddenly.

"Somebody else taking these rooms?" she asked, trying to keep the quiver out of her voice.

Paul, to her astonishment, moved across the room and pinched her cheek.

"Always the little worrier," he commented. "I'll have to begin giving you lessons, Jan, in looking on the bright side of things. We have to have the place looking nice for our Dora when she comes home, and of course we want you to be pleased too, Jan."

KALEIDOSCOPE QUILT BLOCK PATTERN USED HERE FOR A TOP SPREAD WITH A FLOOR LENGTH GINGHAM SPREAD UNDER THE MATTRESS AND OVER THE SPRINGS

DO YOU know the Kaleidoscope quilt pattern? A block is shown here. It is put together so that from every angle it makes a different design. One of these fascinating quilts made in two tones of blue and white started all the sewing and sawing for the attractive bed nook you see in the sketch. The bed and woodwork are painted white. The built-in closets and book shelves at each side of the bed are connected with a scalloped cornice of thin wood. Widths of blue gingham are stitched together for the full curtain at the head of the bed and for the under spread.

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has prepared a pattern for the Kaleidoscope quilt (No. 200) and for the cornice scallops (No. 207) to be cut with a key hole or jig saw. Patterns are 15 cents each and may be ordered direct from:

Mrs. Newlywed's Secret Didn't Help Matters Any

Mr. and Mrs. Newlywed were silent as the train bore them swiftly homewards at the end of their honeymoon.

Mr. Newlywed had spent every available penny on the holiday and his next pay day was a full two weeks off.

But as they neared home the young wife gave a merry laugh.

With a frown her husband asked the cause of her merriment.

"I'm going to tell you a secret that will cheer you up, Billy," she said. "Before we went away I hid a ten dollar bill in the pantry."

"Yes," moaned the dejected spouse, "I know. I found it."

"FOLKS & THINGS"

Don't forget to do your Christmas hinting, early.

Claudie Pipes, former City Clerk here, who migrated to Huntsville as Secretary to the Huntsville Chamber of Commerce, is resigning his post the first of the year to go into the private Practice of Law.

Johnnie Moon is now an executive. If you don't believe it look on the side of the big red cold drink truck that he drives for Tom Burdette. There, in large letters you will see, JNO. I. MOON, Mgr.

Got a letter today from "Big Jim" Folsom Jim is in the Army now and stationed at Camp Wheeler, Ga. Jim says that he is getting a furlough this month and coming to see us. Jim, it is true, hasn't been able to do all the missionary work about the State that some of the other politicians have but, what Jim has lacked in visiting around making speeches, he has made up in answering the call to his Colors and serving his Country—and at a time when serving one's Country comes first.

Friday morning a convoy of Army trucks and personnel came through Clanton. Jeeps, big trucks, little trucks and all. As usual about 90 percent of the population turned out to watch the procession pass thru. Cecil Ramsey was heard to remark to Jim Wade as they watched the cars fly by, "Jim, that's about what we'll be doing before long."

A fellow we like to see, is Farmer Seale, Marine Recruiter at Birmingham. Farmer was in Saturday for a short chat and is thinking seriously of writing a Sports Column for Weekly Newspapers. He was writing sports for the Birmingham Post when he went into the Marines. Farmer hails from up Thorsby way, and was down seeing his folks.

And another Christmas Season is upon us. With more money, and less things to buy than ever in the history of our Nation. The most important things at Christmas are the things that money won't buy. That is, good friends and good health. Let's forget about the expensive gifts this Christmas and give good deeds and good fellowship. Let's go a little out of our way to make somebody feel a little better, and be a little better. Start now to make this the best Christmas ever by doing something nice every day for someone. It will assure you of a very merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.—BEN.

CHATTANOOGA MEDICINE COMPANY RECEIVES ARMY - NAVY "E"

The Chattanooga Medicine Company—and it's food division, Patten Food Products—was the recipient of the Army - Navy "E" award, the nation's highest production award; in an impressive ceremony held recently at the Lookout Junior High School, Chattanooga, Tennessee. High ranking officers from both the Army and the Navy were present with the management and employees of the Company.

The "E" award is granted by the Army and the Navy for "high achievement in producing materials needed for war". These materials from The Chattanooga Medicine Company are drugs and, from the Patten Food Products, "K" rations.

IN MEMORIUM

The passing of Percy Pitts in a Montgomery hospital, on November 19th, 1943, at the age of fifty-three, came as a distinct shock to the Bench and Bar of Alabama, and to his legion of friends throughout his community and State.

Percy McGraw Pitts was born at Vincent, Shelby County, on January 18th, 1890, the son of John S. Pitts, and Ada Pitts. He entered the university of Alabama in 1907, graduating with his L. L. B. Degree in 1913, and while there, was a member of the Glee Club, and SAE Fraternity. He practiced his profession in Columbiana, until he answered the call of his country in the first World War, serving with honor as a First Lieutenant for a long time in France.

At the close of the war, he married Myrtle Renolds of Clanton, and again pursued his profession, locating at Clanton from 1919, until his death. He was a member of the Methodist Church, a Mason, a member of Post No. 6 of the American Legion. He was ever active in all civic and religious movements, for the betterment of his community, and early entered the political field, serving twelve years as Chilton County's representative in the Legislature. He was held in high esteem by his brother members , both the Bench and Bar, and gained for himself throughout the State, a reputation as an outstanding member of his profession.

At the outbreak of the second War, he volunteered his services to his country, but was rejected for a physical disability, which later claimed his life.

His funeral rites were held at the Methodist Church at Clanton, and the massive florial display, as well as an overflowing church gave eloquent proof of the numerous friends that Percy had gained by his congeniality and his service to those around him, while he walked this way.

NOW, THEREFORE, Be it resolved by the Chilton County Bar Association that in the death of Percy M. Pitts, our community and state has lost a useful and honored citizen, and an outstanding Christian gentleman; his wife and children, a kind and devoted husband and father, and the Bar of Chilton County, a useful member, besides many friends to mourn his passing.

Be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be furnished the county press, the Alabama Lawyer, and the bereaved wife. —CHILTON COUNTY BAR ASSOCIATION.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Smashing Blows Against Enemy Mapped By Highest Allied Military Strategists; Wheat Subsidy Payments Established; 4-H Club Congress Marks Record Year

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Left to right: Stalin, FDR and Churchill.

Never had the rumor mills been so busy grinding out stories as in those days preceding the official announcement of the meeting of the heads of state of United States, Russia, Great Britain and China. First semi-official clearance on the announcement came through a story released by Reuters (British news agency) which indicated that these leaders were meeting in the Near East,

Political problems of the final phase of the war in Europe and the subsequent peace were the main topics of discussion. A story out of Stockholm, Sweden, reported that President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and President Chiang Kai-shek of China conferred first in the shadows of Egypt's pyramids before proceeding to the discussions with Premier Stalin.

In the first conference the relationship of the three nations to the war in the Far East kept the leaders busy. But when Stalin and his staff entered the picture the more immediate questions concerning Germany's status occupied the spotlight.

COAL:
Raise Prices

While southern operators balked at signing the new contract calling for a nine-hour day, with pay for 45 minutes travel time, Stabilization Director Fred Vinson authorized average increases of 17 cents a ton for bituminous and 62 cents a ton for anthracite coal to cover the extra wage costs.

Formulated by Interior Secretary Harold Ickes and United Mine Worker Chieftain John L. Lewis, the new pact was attacked by the southern operators as failing to provide eight hours of production in cases where more than 45 minutes are required for travel. Replying, Ickes said announcement of the new contract was followed by a record output of 12,700,000 tons in one week, tops for 16 years.

Although the price increase on soft coal averages 17 cents a ton, actual costs vary from 10 cents in Alabama, parts of Georgia and Tennessee, and Utah and Montana, to 50 cents in Michigan and California and part of New Mexico.

WHEAT SUBSIDIES:
Payments Set

To hold down the price of bread, government agencies moved in two directions, with the Defense Supplies corporation announcing wheat subsidy payments to millers and the OPA establishing flour ceilings.

For all wheat ground in the Pacific coast area, the DFS will pay 14 cents a bushel. Outside of the Pacific region, 16 cents per bushel will be paid on hard wheat, 5½ cents a bushel on soft wheat, and 6 cents a bushel on durum wheat.

As a basis for payment, DFS announced that millers must subtract the current market prices for wheat from the price used by OPA in figuring flour ceilings. Payments will be made to millers each month, with disbursements based on the rate in effect at the time the flour is sold.

Flour Ceilings

Under new OPA regulation, maximum prices were established for all kinds of wheat flour on the millers' level, with the family product ranging from $3.70 a hundred pounds in western Colorado to $5.23 in North Carolina.

Prices on hard wheat flour are highest in the Middle West producing section, with Iowa's ceilings on low and high protein output $3.31 and $3.38 per hundred pounds; Illinois, Wisconsin and northern Michigan, $3.34 and $3.54, and Minnesota, $3.34 and $3.54, plus a proportional rail rate from Minneapolis.

Delivered prices on cake flour and other soft wheat bakery flour milled in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin or Iowa were set at $3.67 and $3.77 a hundred pounds, plus the rail rate from Spokane.

In other states, prices vary from $4 to $4.90 for cake flour, and $3.10 and $4.31 for soft wheat bakery flour.

ITALY:
Allies Gain

Rallying under Gen. Bernard Montgomery's cry of "On to Rome!" Britain's Eighth army smashed into the eastern anchor of the Germans' winter line in southern Italy, advancing under cover of heavy artillery and aerial bombardment.

Shaken by the fury of Montgomery's usual tactics of massing superior fire power on enemy positions and then moving forward after lengthy barrages, the German lines buckled, and the Eighth army took the whole of the high ridge overlooking the tiny Sangro river and its flat valley.

The Eighth army's drive focused on the Adriatic coastal port of Pescara, from whence a highway cuts across the Italian peninsula to Rome. By sweeping northward, the British also threatened to work to the rear of the Germans' mountain posts to the west, where Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark's Fifth army bucked against stiff defenses guarding the 85 mile road to Rome.

4-H:
Nation's Finest

Healthy, apple-cheeked young rural America met for the 22nd national 4-H Club congress in Chicago, there to hear that the club's 1,700,000 members had raised five million bushels of war garden produce, nine million poultry, 90,000 head of dairy cattle, 600,000 head of livestock, 12 million pounds of peanuts, soybeans and other legumes, and canned 15 million jars of products.

In addition to their production feats, the 800 delegates learned that during the last year, 4-H members sold or purchased more than $25,000,000 worth of war bonds and stamps and collected more than 300,000,000 pounds of scrap. Summerville, Georgia's, pretty 17-year-old Helen Louis Owings alone sold $699,000 in war bonds.

At the congress were 17-year-old Billy Sol Estes, Clyde, Texas, whose six years of 4-H work have netted him $28,739, and 18-year-old Geneva Duhm, who has collected $1,626, chiefly in products.

SOUTH PACIFIC:
Bloody Fighting

The Gilberts ours after the bloodiest fighting in the marines' long history, attention was focused on other Jap outposts in the Pacific, including their great naval base of Truk in the Carolines to the northwest.

In New Guinea, Australian troops continued to beat their way through the brushy hills up the east coast, while on Bougainville in the Solomons, waves of bombers supported U. S. marines picking their way through the Japs' jungle strongholds.

On bloody Tarawa after the marines' valiant victory, Admiral Chester Nimitz said: "I have learned more than I ever knew of what the Japs can do. I am highly impressed by the highly organized defense of this small island and the large number of troops they had on it."

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

JEEPS: The first used jeeps have been purchased by a Chicago second-hand truck dealer. He obtained 16 of the sturdy little cars by putting in his order early. He intends to resell them, asking that customers pledge to buy at least a thousand dollars worth of war bonds per jeep. Seven have already been sold, involving pledges to purchase some $50,000 worth of bonds.

WHISKY: Liquor commissions of Oregon and Washington—two states that sell spirituous liquors through state-operated stores—have been unable to purchase a stock of whisky lately. The two commissions decided to buy two Kentucky distilleries. The whisky will be bottled in Kentucky. Each state will obtain about 500,000 cases during the next 18 months.

RUSSIA:
Keep Ukrainian Grip

Holding their grip on the western Ukraine, German forces struck back at the Russians to retake the vital rail hub of Korosten in their slow drive on Kiev.

Capture of Korosten gave the Germans their second important communications point in the region, the rail center of Zhitomir having previously fallen. Both centers are situated on Russia's last north-south rail line, and also command lines running west into prewar Poland.

As the Germans increased their pressure on the rich rural province of Kiev which they have always fancied, they pulled their lines in to the north, approximately 300,000 Nazis reportedly retiring from Gomel. As they fell back, the Reds tried futilely to seal off their escape corridor.

In the Crimea which commands the Black Sea, the Axis were reported withdrawing Rumanian troops, thousands already having been evacuated.

CIVILIAN SUPPLIES:
Picture Brightening

In a move which it deemed as protection against shortages of materials essential to the prosecution of the war, the army put huge stocks of surplus materials on sale, while the office of civilian requirements granted repair men larger allocations of metals.

Issuance of catalogs to guide manufacturers in bidding for the goods reveals that sales will include a variety of items ranging from hammers to buckles.

From the 830th army air force specialized depot in Memphis, Tenn., catalogs listed such salable material as fuel pumps, refueling funnels, drain cans, lubricators, manual and hydraulic jacks, and precision tools for carpenters, plumbers and machinists.

Under the office of civilian requirements ruling, electricians, plumbers, blacksmiths, radio, upholstery and farm machinery repair shops are permitted to buy up to 20 tons of carbon and alloy steel, 500 pounds of copper and brass products, and 200 pounds of aluminum in certain forms. Once scarcer than a hen's tooth, copper wire will be available for limited use.

Lost on a dive-bombing attack on a Yangtze river port in China October 30, Michigan's former All-America halfback, Lieutenant Tom Harmon picked his way back to Allied lines from Jap dominated territory.

For Lieutenant Tom it was the second time that he had bobbed up after a flight crash. Last April, he bailed from a bomber disabled in a rainstorm over tropical French New Guinea. Slashing his way through the jungle, he met obliging natives who then guided him to a settlement.

CANADA:
To Resettle Vets

To give its returning soldiers the opportunity to get into productive enterprise after the war, the Canadian government will spend upwards of 400 million dollars to buy land and chattels to resell to vets at 53 per cent of total cost.

Under the Canadian Land Veterans act, maximum cost of land and buildings is $4,800 and of chattels $1,200. Of the $6,000 outlay, the vet will subscribe a minimum of $480, or 10 per cent of the cost of land and buildings, then pays off the balance of $3,200, or two-thirds of the cost of land and buildings, at 3½ per cent interest.

Designed to accommodate 100,000 vets, plans call for confining full time farm operations to experienced hands, with other kinds of tradesmen allowed to purchase small homes with acreage outside of urban areas at a cost of $2,500 to $4,000.

WORLD RELIEF:
U. S. Takes Lead

To the U. S. will go the lion's share of providing funds for the 2½ billion dollar United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration program adopted in meetings at Atlantic City, N. J.

Aim of the UNRRA under General Director Herbert Lehman of the U. S., is to feed and clothe the impoverished masses in countries wrested from the Axis; resettle people shifted to other localities by the Axis in their native lands, and to offer means for reconstructing farms and industry.

With unoccupied countries figured to contribute 1 per cent of their national income for the UNRRA work, the U. S. will advance approximately 1½ billion dollars; the United Kingdom, about 320 million dollars; and Canada 90 million dollars.

LEND-LEASE

Up to August 31, 1943, Australia has contributed goods and services valued at over a quarter billion dollars in reverse lend-lease to the United States. Much of this repayment is in form of food for U. S. soldiers stationed in and around Australia. A total of 146,298 tons of food and eight million clothing items were provided.

Other lend-lease goods included technical equipment, trucks, aircraft supplies, and communications supplies

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Military requirements take the major portion of available rubber supplies for tires (for planes, trucks, and other war vehicles), treads for tanks, boats, balloons, raincoats, pontons, shoes, surgical supplies, and hundreds of other essential military items. That's why patriotic civilians take the restrictions on their rubber use in an understanding spirit.

According to the court historian to Philip II, and recorded in 1615, Columbus was credited with having found natives bounding rubber play balls (1490-1500) and to have brought some back from Hispaniola to Queen Isabella.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY O'HARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin can ride any horse on his family's Wyoming ranch, but he wants a colt of his own. His father, a retired army officer, refuses because Ken has not been promoted at school and has shown no sense of responsibility. But Ken's mother convinces Captain McLaughlin that the colt may be just what Ken needs. Ken picks the yearling filly of a "loco" (no good) mare named Rocket. A little later Rocket is sold, but is killed before she reaches her new owner. McLaughlin sells all of Rocket's offspring but Ken's colt. In spite of his father's displeasure Ken wants that colt and no other.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER IX

They dined in town, with the Bartletts; and by the time they got back to the ranch, a number of visitors were there; and from then on the pleasant sociabilities of Sunday afternoon kept the place alive with cars coming and going, trays of bottles and glasses being carried in and out, and much talk and laughter.

Later in the afternoon, McLaughlin stuck a tin can on the tip of one of the branches of a pine tree on the Hill opposite and the officers took their revolvers and practiced target shooting, standing on the terrace.

Then Mrs. Grubb and Mrs. Gilfillan said they wanted to ride out and see the brood mares, so they all crowded into two automobiles, and McLaughlin led the way.

When they found the brood mares, they stopped some distance off and got out, and McLaughlin promised that Banner would come out to meet them and do the honors.

"How do you know he will?" asked Mrs. Gilfillan.

"He always does."

The mares stopped grazing and stood, alert, curious, and ready to run. Banner was amongst them.

His head topped them all, and even from a distance, the men and women watching could feel the penetration of his eye.

Suddenly the big stallion moved towards them, ears pricked, inquiring eyes wide and fearless, and began to trot, his legs alternating in high, free, curving steps, his mane streaming, his tail up.

"Flying all his flags!" cried Nell.

A roar and cheer burst from the officers as the stallion, without breaking his trot, increased his pace and came down the wind to them like a bugle call.

Banner halted ten yards off and stood looking the group over. His golden coat blazed in the sunshine.

"What an intelligent face!" exclaimed the Colonel. McLaughlin, still in his gray suit and rakish hat, went forward to the stud, apologizing gravely for not having brought a bucket of oats in the car.

Lying in bed that night, Ken remembered the way Banner had looked. Banner, the Sire of Flicka—Flicka was the same, the same burnished gold, the same beauty, the same flags flying— Oh, mine . . . my colt . . . my own . . . my very own . . .

He wondered when his father would bring her in again.

He had been wondering that every day when Gus put his round pink face in at the kitchen door and said, "What's today, Boss?" But his father had planned other work. Meadows to be taken care of, water to be turned out of one ditch and into the other. Endless hours of work on the three-year-olds that must be ready to ship in just a few days now. A new cattle guard being built at one of the railroad gates.

But next morning, when Gus said, "What's today, Boss?" McLaughlin gave the order for the day's work and then said, "And I think—" and paused.

Ken looked down to hide his excitement; he clenched his fists under the table.

McLaughlin went on, "Tomorrow we'll get the yearlings in again, Gus, and cut out Ken's filly. I want to do that before Ross leaves. We may need his help."

Tomorrow . . .

When Ken opened his eyes next morning and looked out he saw that the house was wrapped in fog. There had been no rain at all since the day a week ago when the wind had torn the "sprinkling system" to pieces and blown all the tattered clouds away. That was the day he had found Flicka. And it had been terribly hot since then. They had hardly been able to stand the sun out on the terrace. They had gone swimming in the pool every day. On the hills, the grass was turning to soft tan.

Now there were clouds and they had closed down. After a severe hot spell there often came a heavy fog, or hail, or even snow.

Standing at the window, Ken could hardly see the pines on the Hill opposite. He wondered if his father would go after the yearlings in such a fog as this—they wouldn't be able to see them; but at breakfast McLaughlin said there would be no change of plans. It was just a big cloud that had settled down over the ranch—it would lift and fall—perhaps up on Saddle Back it would be clear.

They mounted and rode out.

The fog lay in the folds of the hills. Here and there a bare summit was in sunshine; then a little farther on, came a smother of cottony white that soaked the four riders to the skin and hung rows of moonstones on the whiskers of the horses.

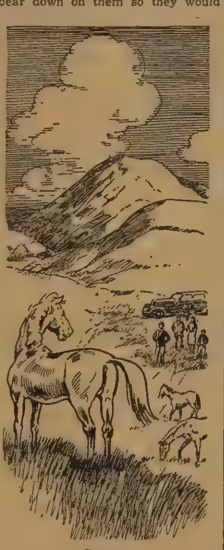
It was hard to keep track of each other. Suddenly Ken was lost—the others had vanished. He reined in Shorty and sat listening. The clouds and mist rolled around him. He felt as if he were alone in the world.

A bluebird, color of the deep blue wild delphinium that dots the plains, became interested in him, and perched on a bush near by; and as he started Shorty forward again, the bluebird followed along, hopping from bush to bush.

The boy rode slowly, not knowing in which direction to go. Then, hearing shouts, he touched heels to Shorty and cantered, and suddenly came out of the fog and saw his father and Tim and Ross.

"There they are!" said McLaughlin, pointing down over the curve of the hill. They rode forward and Ken could see the yearlings standing bunched at the bottom, looking up, wondering who was coming. Then a huge coil of fog swirled over them and they were lost to sight again.

McLaughlin told them to circle around, spread out fan-wise on the far side of the colts, and then gently bear down on them so they would start towards the ranch. If the colts once got running in this fog, he said, there'd be no chance of catching them.



Banner

The plan worked well; the yearlings were not so frisky as usual, and allowed themselves to be driven in the right direction. It was only when they were on the County Road, and near the gate where Howard was watching, that Ken, whose eyes had been scanning the bunch, as they appeared and disappeared in the fog, realized that Flicka was missing.

McLaughlin noticed it at the same moment, and as Ken rode toward his father, McLaughlin turned to him and said, "She's not in the bunch."

They sat in silence a few moments while McLaughlin planned the next step. The yearlings, dispirited by the fog, nibbled languidly at the grass by the roadside. McLaughlin looked at the Saddle Back and Ken looked too, the passionate desire in his heart reaching out to pierce the fog and the hillside and see where Flicka had hidden herself away.

"Well, we'll drive the yearlings back up," said Rob finally. "No chance of finding her alone. If they happen to pass anywhere near her, she's likely to join them."

They drove the yearlings back. Once over the first hill, the colts got running and soon were out of sight. The fog closed down again so that Ken pulled up, unable to see where he was going, unable to see his father, or Ross or Tim.

He sat listening, astonished that the sound of their hoofs had been wiped out so completely. Again he seemed alone in the world.

The fog lifted in front of him and showed him that he stood at the brink of a sharp drop, almost a precipice, though not very deep. It led down into a semi-circular pocket on the hillside which was fed by a spring; there was a clump of young cottonwoods, and a great bank of clover dotted with small yellow blossoms.

In the midst of the clover stood Flicka, quietly feasting. She had seen him before he saw her and was watching him, her head up, clover sticking out of both sides of her mouth, her jaws going busily.

At sight of her, Ken was incapable of either thought or action.

Suddenly from behind him in the fog, he heard his father's low voice, "Don't move—"

"How'd she get in there?" said Tim.

"She scrambled down this bank. And she could scramble up again, if we weren't here. I think we've got her," said McLaughlin.

"Other side of that pocket the ground drops twenty feet sheer," said Tim. "She can't go down there."

Flicka had stopped chewing. There were still stalks of clover sticking out between her jaws, but her head was up and her ears pricked, listening, and there was a tautness and tension in her whole body.

Ken found himself trembling too.

"How're you going to catch her, Dad?" he asked in a low voice.

"I kin snag her from here," said Ross, and in the same breath McLaughlin answered, "Ross can rope her. Might as well rope her here as in the corral. We'll spread out in a semi-circle above this bank. She can't get up past us, and she can't get down."

They took their positions and Ross lifted his rope off the horn of his saddle.

Ahead of them, far down below the pocket, the yearlings were running. A whinny or two drifted up, and the sound of their hoofs, muffled by the fog.

Flicka heard them too. Suddenly she was aware of danger. She leaped out of the clover to the edge of the precipice which fell away down the mountainside toward where the yearlings were running. But it was too steep and too high. She came straight up on her hind legs with a neigh of terror, and whirled back toward the bank down which she had slid to reach the pocket. But on the crest of it, looming uncannily in the fog, were four black figures—she screamed, and ran around the base of the bank.

Ken heard Ross' rope sing. It snaked out just as Flicka dove into the bank of clover. Stumbling, she went down and for a moment was lost to view.

"Goldarn—" said Ross, hauling in his rope, while Flicka floundered up and again circled her small prison, hurling herself at every point, only to realize that there was no way out.

She stood over the precipice, poised in despair and frantic longing. There drifted up the sound of the colts running below. Flicka trembled and strained over the brink—a perfect target for Ross, and he whirled his lariat again. It made a vicious whine.

Flicka went down like a diver. She hit the ground with her legs folded under her, then rolled and bounced the rest of the way. It was exactly like the bronco that had climbed over the side of the truck and rolled down the forty-foot bank; and in silence the four watchers sat in their saddles waiting to see what would happen when she hit bottom—Ken already thinking of the Winchester, and the way the crack of it had echoed back from the hills.

Flicka lit, it seemed, on four steel springs that tossed her up and sent her flying down the mountainside—perfection of speed and power and action. A hot sweat bathed Ken from head to foot, and he began to laugh, half choking—

The wind roared down and swept up the fog, and it went bounding away over the hills, leaving trailing streamers of white in the gullies, and coverlets of cotton around the bushes. Way below, they could see Flicka galloping toward the yearlings. In a moment she joined them, and then there was just a many colored blur of moving shapes, with a fierce sun blazing down, striking sparks of light off their glossy coats.

"Get going!" shouted McLaughlin. "Get around behind them. They're on the run now, and it's cleared—keep them running, and we may get them all in together, before they stop. Tim, you take the short way back to the gate and help Howard turn them and get them through."

Tim shot off toward the County Road and the other three riders galloped down and around the mountain until they were at the back of the band of yearlings. Shouting and yelling and spurring their mounts, they kept the colts running, circling them around toward the ranch until they had them on the County Road.

Way ahead, Ken could see Tim and Howard at the gate, blocking the road. The yearlings were bearing down on them. Now McLaughlin slowed up, and began to call, "Whoa, whoa—" and the pace decreased. Often enough the yearlings had swept down that road and through the gate and down to the corrals. It was the pathway to oats, and hay, and shelter from winter storms—would they take it now? Flicka was with them—right in the middle—if they went, would she go too?

It was all over almost before Ken could draw a breath. The yearlings turned at the gate, swept through, went down to the corrals on a dead run, and through the gates that Gus had opened.

Flicka was caught again.

Today's Battlefield Victims Get Speedy, Effective Care

Blood Plasma, Sulfonamides and Organization Of Medical Services Insure Prompt Treatment of Wounded Men.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

A young reserve officer friend of mine came up to say goodby to me a year and a half ago. He flattered me by asking for my advice before he went into active service.

I knew he wanted to see action. He had refused a desk job in Washington. I knew he wanted to do the job and get home to his wife and babies.

So I said: "Hope for a light wound and you'll hope for the best."

Of course, nobody would try to follow such advice but my friend got the wound (and a medal for bravery too) and now he's back in civvies again.

He doesn't like what the Jap bullet did to his leg for he'll play no more tennis or handball but his wife has a live, if lame, husband and his children have something beside a picture and a piece of ribbon to call "daddy."

When I gave that sage advice, I didn't know how smart I was.

"The wounded soldier in this global war, though he is exposed to almost every health hazard known to man, still has a better chance of surviving and returning safely home than ever before," says Maj. Gen. Norman Kirk, surgeon-general of the army.

The general gave three reasons: first, the use of blood plasma to avoid shock and hemorrhage; second, the use of sulfonamides to combat infection; and third, the mobility and organization of the medical services which insure prompt and efficient medical and surgical treatment.

The Reasons

I heard of widespread use of blood plasma first in the Spanish Civil war and imagine much valuable experience was gained from that conflict. We know it was a proving ground for Nazi and Fascist killing and undoubtedly the Allies profited by the efforts in life-saving as well.

The use of sulfa drugs is one of the great blessings which modern chemistry has given us. Recently I stood in one of the plants of the Monsanto Chemical company in St. Louis, Mo., letting the soft, healing powder drip through my fingers. Before me, in a space hardly 25 feet square, was a collection of small kegs containing this wonderful antiseptic. There was enough within my easy reach to serve the whole Sicilian campaign, they told me. Each soldier has his packet and fills his wound with it. It stymies the germs until natural processes annihilate them.

The mobility of the medical units has been described in many dispatches and you have all seen photographs of the flying hospitals, the great air transports with their equipment and nurses. The wounded are rapidly returned to bases where they get the best of care. Treatment on naval vessels is equally effective.

It must be understood that the drugs and the plasma in themselves are not cure-alls. They are not even cures in many cases. They are preventatives. They are what you "do with" until the doctor comes—more accurately, until you come to the doctor. Surgery is necessary in the cases of most wounds.

Capt. W. M. Craig, chief of surgery at the Naval Medical center, Bethesda, Md., just outside of Washington, puts it succinctly:

"In the last war, when a man's head was cut open by a shell fragment," says Captain Craig, "the surgeon had to operate at once, even though the patient was in such a weakened condition that he hadn't one chance in a hundred to survive the operation. The surgeon had no other choice; he knew if he waited, infection would set in and that would be the end. In this war it is different; the patient is given blood plasma treatment to build him up, sulfa to check infection, and if his condition permits, he is flown to a hospital in the rear where the operation is performed under ideal conditions."

Short Time Lag

In the last war, all wounded had to have a powerful injection, a most painful thing to endure, and nowhere near as effective as modern treatment.

The army estimates that 80 to 90 per cent of the wounded get first-aid treatment within an hour of being wounded. Ships are well equipped, the larger ones as well as a hospital.

The man with a not too serious wound, and that is by far the majority of cases (amputations are included), has a splendid chance for recovery and a resumption of his natural existence in civil life when he is discharged.

In two categories this war has been harsher than any preceding. There is a greater proportion of killed in action to wounded. Also the mental casualties are higher in the present war.

Careful efforts have been made to screen out those showing characteristics indicating they are unable to stand up under the mental strain of modern warfare. More might have been held out of service if the psychiatrists had been able to carry out their plans. They would have been able to do so if there had been as thorough an understanding of that branch of medical science as there will be after the war. And because of that fact, more of the mental cases will be restored to normal.

The reason for the increased number of mental cases is variously explained: our troops have endured longer periods of offensive action than in the last war; the increased fury of modern warfare; the domination of the machine, and also, to some degree, the complications of civilian life which encourage neurotic conditions.

The science of warfare has moved forward with seven-league boots. Killing has become a mass production affair. But along with the chariot of Mars, Mercury has advanced on winged feet and the healing arts have progressed to the point where for those who escape the scythe of the grim reaper there is a strong, helping hand along the road back.

Crowned Heads Prove Headaches

After the last war, some poetically minded writer penned an editorial which had wide circulation entitled: "The Twilight of the Kings." Many a throne had tumbled as a result of that last conflict, names that were written large in history, faded until they were less than memories—Hohenzollern, Hapsburg, Romanoff, not to mention a host of lesser majesties.

But some who survived are today problems of the United Nations, like plebiscites, famine, frontiers, lend-lease, airways and a thousand other annoying questions that must be settled when peace comes.

Of course, kings are not to be shrugged away lightly. Some of America's best friends are kings. But there are crowned heads who are bound to be headaches for the uncrowned brows of the statesmen who have to put the world together again.

There is the House of Savoy, for instance. The king of Italy has been a problem. So are Balkan potentates in exile or in cahoots with Hitler.

About King Carol

One most romantic monarch who is likewise exceedingly dynamic is ex-King Carol of Rumania. Recently, I received a communication from him. It looked like a telegram but it was not that intimate—it was mimeographed. It contained a statement of some kind, I have forgotten the exact nature of it.

But the other day, its source was revealed when a certain publicity organization registered with the department of justice as all organizations representing foreign elements must. It developed that Carol had arranged to try to encourage the good will of Americans by hiring this agent for $35,000 (ten grand down, the rest in easy payments) to express Carol's views, all to be democratic and pro-Ally.

But the interesting implication is that one of the jobs of the press agent is to remove the "ex" from the title "ex-king" which seems to have attached itself to Madame Lupescu's husband.

And there is a roll-back which only the temerity of an American press agent would grapple with!

"Silent Night"

The battle is over.

The bomb-shattered village is deserted, lifeless.

And the silence that greets our invading men is deathly. It's the kind of grim stillness many of them will know on Christmas Eve this year.

Not like the warm, beautiful "Silent Night" we know. Not like the peace in our homes the night before Christmas.

But the only way we can have some peace in our hearts is to know that we're helping bring our men back. Actually helping by buying all the War Bonds we possibly can. And by giving all the War Bonds we possibly can.

For no other gift could mean so much this year . . . no other gift could do so much good.

In War Bonds, lies the spirit of Christmas.

More Pork

when hogs are kept on sanitary CONCRETE

A sure way to increase your pork production is to keep pigs on concrete from farrowing to market time.

One farmer who does this reports: "My first crop is gone to market by the time the second is farrowed . . . average weights around 275 pounds at six months . . . 100 pounds of pork with 300 pounds of feed."

Hog floors are only one of many improvements that will make your farm more efficient and productive. A new barn floor, poultry house, milk house, milk cooling tank, manure pit or watering trough costs little to build with concrete and will last a lifetime.

Concrete farm jobs require a minimum of critical war materials. Many jobs need just a few bags of cement, and some sand and gravel or stone.

If you need help, get in touch with your concrete contractor or building material dealer. Let us send you free "how-to-build" booklets.

Check booklet subject, paste on penny postal and mail today.

GOOD NEWS
for Alabama Power Company Customers on RURAL LINES

On NOVEMBER 6, 1943, Alabama Public Service Commission ordered a revision in the price of electricity to rural customers of Alabama Power Company to be effective December 1, 1943. The minimum bill for residential and most commercial customers was reduced from $1.25 to $1.00 per month, and practically all rural customers will enjoy reductions in their monthly bills.

The new rate, which has been simplified, is detailed on a "Billing Chart for Rural Rate E-6" which is being mailed this month to all customers on Alabama Power Company rural lines. The chart is on a card which you can hang or tack in a convenient place. You can use it to check your bill each month. It also gives instructions on how to read your meter.

A billing chart has already been mailed to urban residential customers.

Take Care Pressure Canner Says Miss Barber

Miss Mattie Jo Barber, Home Demonstration Agent, says that nothing plays as important role in a food preservation program as a pressure canner, and she urges every housewife who has a pressure canner to give it the very best of care. Now is an excellent time to get cookers for next year as rationing restrictions have been relaxed.

We are right now approaching the end of the canning season and Miss Barber tells every owner of a pressure canner that the first step in storing the pressure canner during the winter when it is not in use to give it a thorough cleaning.

The kettle itself, the edges of the kettle and cover, the pet cock, the pressure guage, the safety valve, and the rubber gasket should be thoroughly clean. Food or salt deposits left on the surface of the canner may pit aluminum, or spoil the glaze on enamel surfaces, or rust tinned steel.

After the canner has been washed and dried, put a thin protecting coal of vaseline on the threads of the screw locks. Then fill the kettle with crumpled newspapers, wrap the cover carefully in paper, and put the cover upside down on top of the kettle. Never more store the canner with the cover right side up.

By giving the cooker good care while off the job, as well as on, you will get good service out of it for many years

Examination To Be Given Students

Montgomery, Ala. — A program which calls for giving the Army Air Forces Aviation Cadet Mental Screening Examination to all male students in the Junior and Senior classes of Alabama high schools within the next two months was announced today by Captain Robert H. Lake of the United States Army Recruiting Station here, who will direct the program throughout the state.

Designed to determine the number of young Alabamians who may be qualified within the next two years for aviation cadet training, the new program, which will begin within the next few weeks and continue through the first half of February, has received the indorsement of State Superintendent of Education E. B. Norton, who has written to all high school principals in the state urging them to cooperate with Army officers in arranging for the test to be given.

Army Air Forces officers who have completed their combat missions overseas and members of the Alabama wing of the Civil Air Patrol will administer the test, traveling to the various schools in the state, at designated times. Captain Lake said that Maj. Harold F. Wood, commanding officer of the Civil Air Patrol in Alabama, has pledged that his entire personnel will cooperate in the program.

Pointing out that students who take the examination will not be obligated in any way to join the Army Air Forces or any other branch of service, Captain Lake said that the program nevertheless will afford 17-year-old students a convenient opportunity to qualify mentally for Army Aviation Cadet Training and at the same time will acquaint those under 17 with the severity of the examination, thus enabling them to better prepare themselves in order to pass the test at some future date, provided they desire to become aviation cadets.

Seventeen-year-old students who wish to use the examination in qualifying for cadet training must first have the consent of their parents, Captain Lake said. A letter will be sent to the parents of each boy taking the test explaining to them that he has in no way obligated himself to become an aviation cadet, the Army officer said.

Students who use the test in qualifying for the training must also take a physical examination and appear before a board of officers who will determine their final qualifications, it was pointed out. Should they successfully complete all these tests and become fully qualified for cadet training they will be placed on reserve status until they reach the age of 18, or in the event they have not completed school upon reaching that age, they may be deferred for a longer period not to exceed six months after they become 18.

Complete information concerning the new testing program or any other phase of aviation cadet training may be obatined from the Army Aviation Cadet Examining Boards located at 308 Bell Building, Montgomery, and 505 Frank Nelson Building, Birmingham.

Selecting The School Lunch

Mothers can make sure their children get a good school lunch by selecting the right kind of food and by making the food attractive so they will be sure to eat it. A school lunch should be a carefully prepared meal, not a hodgepodge of leftovers from last night's dinner.

Sandwiches are usually the backbone of the lunch, says Miss Barber, Home Demonstration Agent, whose advise to mothers is, "Don't get into a rut when it comes to making sandwiches for children—use a variety of fillings, such as home-made cottage cheese and jam, ground leftover meat, peanut butter combined with chopped carrots, cold baked beans. Use whole wheat and rye bread as well as enriched bread."

In addition to sandwiches, give the children something crisp. Colorful carrot strips, celery, raw cabbage, lettuce, a cold tomato, or a little jar of stewed tomatoes, apples, baked beans, or asparagus are good additions to lunches and they give good chance to work in some extra vitamins.

For the children's dessert, choose raw or cooked fruit, pudding, a cup cake, or a few cookies.

Avoid desserts that don't pack well, such as richly frosted cakes or squshy pies. Surprise the kiddies occasionally by putting a little extra treat into the lunch box, such as a few raw or toasted nuts, a few pieces of hard candy, says Miss Barber.

If the mother will try to pack as attractive and nourishing meal for the school lunch as she would give the children at home, she can be pretty sure they are getting the kind of lunch they need to keep them happy and healthy.

Order Baby Chicks Early Says County Agent

It is not too early to place orders for baby chicks for 1944 and farmers in Chilton County are urged by P. H. Smith, County Agent, to buy their chicks from a hatcheryman or poultryman near them who is following a good breeding and disease control program.

Often farmers are misled by clever advertisers who use such terms as "blood-tested," and many other terms. These terms are officially meaningless. If baby chicks are to be purchased from other states, farmers should check with their County Agent to see if the persons from whom they desire to purchase chicks is a participant in the National Poultry Improvement Plant.

Farmers should be ready for the arrival of baby chicks well in advance of the time of purchase. Brooding equipment should be made ready and sufficient space arranged.

Suggested breeds to buy are Rhode Island Reds, Barred Plymout Rocks and New Hampshires which mature at six to seven months old and Leghorns which require five to six months to mature. Most farmers and poultrymen usually try to get heavy breed chicks from February 1 to March 15, and Leghorn chicks from March 1 to April 15.

A TIMELY NOTICE FROM MT. PLEASANT SCHOOL

Christmas is not supposed to be Xmas., because there would not have been a Christmas if it hadn't been for Christ.—Sixth Grade Mt. Pleasant School.

GREETINGS FROM LT. RICHARD M. PETERSEN

I wish to send to you, the readers, and the friends of the News the Season's Greetings. Although we are widely separated may that spirit of hope and goodwill that was manifested in the hearts of the people of that age so many years ago be found in ours on the coming day.

It has been several months now that I have received your paper without a word of appreciation to you from me. May I express my gratefulness at this time. In my spare moments your paper is wonderful. Thanks for your kindness and your thoughtfulness.

A word about what I am doing. I am with a detachment of Marines here in Virginia connected with the Construction Battalion of the Navy. We do all the instructing in Primary and Advanced Military Training. I am doing all my instructing in the advanced department. The Marines try to show and teach the Seabees the best fighting tactics. However the Seabees are better builders than fighters because they are not a combat unit such as the Marines are. In fewer words the Navy teaches them to build and the Marines teaches them how to fight. Where there is instruction and fighting to be done you will always find the Marines present, because who knows better than a Leatherneck how to fight. At the present I have two battalions and a demolitions company totaling a little over 2,600 men. They do keep me busy. The above is a bird's eye view of what I am doing at the present.

I thank you,

RICHARD M. PETERSEN.

MT. NEBO NEWS

Everyone is invited to come to church next Sunday night, when the young people will present an interesting Christmas pagent, entitled: "The Christmas Story." The scene for the drama is the Manger after the birth of Jesus.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Williams and daughter, Imogene, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. O. Y. Sims.

A social gathering was held for the community at the church last Saturday night. Mr. Smith and Mrs. Glasscock planned an enjoyable program, consisting of several movie films and some magic by Mr. Glasscock.

Little Sandra Jean Ratliff of Birmingham is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. John M. Culp, until the holidays.

White Christmas At Methodist Church

The Clanton Methodist Church will present a White Christmas Pageant on December 19, next Sunday, at 5:30 o'clock. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Come and bring your Christmas offering if you haven't already contributed to the Children's Home. There are about 150 children who are looking to us for help and it is our duty to help them. Our Lord has said, It is more blessed to give than to receive. Let us remember that and contribute our share so that those children may have a Merry Christmas.

STATE'S TOP 4-H DAIRY FOODS DEMONSTRATORS WIN BONDS

Six of Alabama's rural girls have been awarded state honors in the 1943 national 4-H dairy foods demonstrations—two as individuals, and four comprising two teams. Each receives a $50 War Bond from the Kraft Cheese Company.

The individual (Class A) winners are: Beth Jimmerson, 15, of Opelika and Evelyn Bolton, 18, of Sylacauga.

The team (Class B) winners are: Betty Zeigler, 15, of Elmore; Faye Burnette, 15, of Elmore; Virginia Austin of Ider and Mary Jo Patton of Henegar.

The purpose of the demonstrations is to show rural residents how to make the best possible use of dairy products in preparing nutritious dishes for the family diet to "Keep America Strong."

JEMISON CHAPTER F.F.A. BOYS MAKE GOOD ON PROJECTS

Three of the Jemison F.F.A. boys have made outstanding records on their projects in the past year. Some, in fact, have broken the records of Vocational students. Among those who have made the highest profits are: Robert Burnett, Austin Robinson and Malcolm Davis.

Robert Burnett had as a project three acres of corn. One hundred and twenty bushels of corn were gathered from this three acres which brought him an income of $172.70. He also had one acre of strawberries from which he made 70 crates of berrier bringing him $215.50 income. Robert's two acres of cotton yielded him 1,631 pounds o flint cotton and 2079 pounds of sedd with an income of $343.51.

Austin Robinson had as his project one-fourth acre of snap beans which brought him a net profit of $91.45, along with the three-fourth acre of tomatoes which brought him an income of $252.01.

Malcolm Davis raised a meat hog which weighed 500 pounds. The hog is only 10 months old. Malcolm will make a good profit from his hog. He als had one acre of strawberries which yielded 118 crates of berries and brought him an income of $53.199.

Thirty of the thirty-three boys completing their projects had home gardening as improvement projects.

JANUARY 1ST IS LAST DAY TO FILE FOR YOUR HOMESTEAD EXEMPTION

Buck Roberts, Chilton County Tax Assessor, stated Tuesday that January 1st, would be the last chance for filing application for your Homestead exemptions. This exemption cannot be allowed, said Roberts unless the owner files request for same. Therefore, he is urging those who qualify to tend to this important matter at once.

Dark Spectre of Inflation Rises to Haunt Congress

Strenuous Nail-Biting Marks Senators, Representatives Worried Over Much Debated Subsidy Question.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

Unless I miss my guess badly, as these lines appear in print, a number of senators and representatives will be going through one of the most nervous nail-biting periods they have ever experienced.

When the antisubsidy bill passed the house with such an overwhelming majority—enough, if the vote held, to pass it over the President's veto—a lot of congressmen were beginning to worry. They were wondering: If the measure really does become law, will the ghost which the President has conjured up really walk?

Inflation is that ghost.
Nobody wants inflation.

Memories are long enough to remember how short the long green shrank after the last war. Suppose there came to pass what all the high-brows and the low-brows were predicting would, that if you lifted the lid just a l-e-e-t-l-e, it might blow off, members of congress had begun to ask themselves.

The memory of the boys selling apples, the memory of mortgages foreclosing, the memory of "Mister, have-you-got-a-dime?" began to stir in many a dormant corner.

Strange Phenomenon

It was a strange but not an unaccustomed phenomenon. The phenomenon of the congressman torn between what the particular group which dominated his constituency wanted and what he felt honestly and sincerely was the best thing for them in the long run. That doubt began to stir. It was an interesting thing to pass through the halls of the Capitol and of the House and Senate Office buildings and talk to these men. You could almost see the spectre rising behind them. The spectre of inflation pointing its finger at them.

Whenever you run into someone whose business it is to feel the pulse of congress, you get the same reaction I have just pictured. Members of congress are worried. They don't want to be blamed for inflation.

And that is why now, at this moment, when the fate of the Commodity Credit corporation (which nearly everybody wants) would seem to be sealed by the triumph of the antisubsidy provision, such fate may not be so certain.

When this subsidy fight started, I wrote in this column that the administration realized it had one of the hardest fights it ever had ahead. That there seemed to be absolutely no compromise in sight.

The other day, a man, wise in the ways of congress and beholden to no party and, so far as I know in the years I have known him, never a proponent of any measure (his business is to be neutral), said to me: "Wait and see, somebody like Senator Taft will come out with a compromise."

Well, I have waited and perhaps by the time you read this you will also have read that somebody "like Senator Taft" has produced the compromise.

If not, the administration's so-called "hold the line" policy will bite the dust.

See how the congress has struck at almost every brick in that wall.

Treasury Department

The treasury said: you must tax the spending money out of the pockets or you'll have inflation. The congress passed a tax bill that would raise about a fifth of what the administration said was necessary. This disregard of treasury's advice was due only in part to a lack of respect for Secretary Morgenthau's tax theories. And everybody blames the President for that. He doesn't have to keep Morgenthau in his cabinet, even if he was a good neighbor up there on the Hudson. But congress wouldn't have taken anyone's advice on that subject.

The congress threatened to stop the appropriation and authorization for the Office of Price Administration. It managed to consider bills to take away OPA's powers, bit by bit, to maintain the ceiling on coal and on oil.

These are just a few of the many efforts to shake loose the war restraints. Congress has reflected, honestly enough, the feeling of the people. As the Allies march nearer to victory, the restraints of regulation and regimentation chafe more and more.

But down deep in the hearts of many a lawmaker today is the realization that whether the administration has been right or wrong in the way it has done things, it was right when it said that inflation had to be avoided.

And that is why today, unless I miss my guess, or unless some Daniel comes to judgment who can discover a better salve than subsidies, the administration will win, at least a partial victory, in the battle which will be staged in the days just ahead.

Railroads Plan For Future Traffic

There is one thing we are all interested in. Getting from where we are to somewhere else and getting back again.

Naturally, we want to do it as cheaply as possible. Today in Washington there is going on the preparation for one of the greatest transportation battles in history. The airlines believe that the war has virtually made the skies their garden. All they have to do is to spade it. When peace comes, and the various restrictions are lifted, the people will spread their wings and fly.

The other day, the executives of the leading railways got together. They thought and thought. And this is what came out of the hopper:

(1) Reductions in passenger fares, both coach and Pullman, immediately following the war.

"We shall have to reduce rates after the war and do it quickly and thoroughly," one executive said. "Any dawdling and hemming and hawing will only result in our emptying our trains again and in the loss of the highly desirable public relations and advertising value that an immediate and voluntary slash would bring."

(2) Widespread introduction of lightweight, streamlined coaches and Pullmans, with old cars being scrapped forever.

(3) Greater use of modern merchandising techniques, including larger appropriations for institutional and product advertising.

(4) Greater consideration to the comfort and convenience of the passengers, described frankly as a radical departure by one executive.

Passenger's Interest

"The railways have been too prone to subject the passenger's interest to the whims of mechanical and operating offices and to the requirements of mail and express schedules," he commented.

(5) Simplification of rate structures by establishing a common base rate for the whole country, and simplification of accounting methods.

(6) Restrictive union rules which will nullify, as airlines grow larger, much of their prewar personalized service sales appeal.

"So long as there were only about 350 passenger-carrying planes in the country, carrying about 20 passengers each, the personalized service created a tremendous sales appeal. When the airways go after mass passenger traffic, they will find this type of selling impossible," said another executive.

(7) Restoration of passenger service at many points.

"We have denuded our railway of passenger service at many points and we are thoroughly ashamed of having done so," one official said.

(8) Greater comfort and better service on all carriers from local all-coach trains to the extra fare trains.

(9) Speeding up of passenger schedules by such means as continuing to take out curves, reducing stops, and improving "head-end operations" (mail and express loading and unloading).

After that pronouncement, the railway executives stepped forth and announced in stentorian tones that they were not afraid of competition from the skyways.

"Fine," says the humble traveler, "we don't care whether it's airways or railways, so long as we get where we want to go and get back, economically and comfortably."

We will.

ON THE HOME FRONT
with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

IT'S nice to dream about a nursery where children have all their clutter and playthings but this winter we will be thinking about ways and means for everyone to have their special interests, hobbies and pleasure right in whichever cozy room that may be heated easily. That is the way it was done in the "good old days"; and there is certainly no reason that we can't do it now with a few special ideas of our own in the way of efficiency and comfort. Why not make a gay toy chest that may be wheeled into the room? And why can't the lid be used for a play table?

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

McCLURE SYNDICATE—W.N.U. FEATURES

Jan Payson is given the lead in the Devon Arms floor show when Paul Harris, the hotel manager, finds out that the rich William Anthony Deverest knows her; he thinks Deverest's interest will bring patronage. But the show is not a success and Paul blames Jan because Deverest did not bring his friends. Jan does not want to tell Paul what she thinks is the truth—that she does not know Deverest—for she thinks Deverest is his own chauffeur, Tony Williams. He does not dare tell her the truth, for she has told him she hates Deverest because of his wealth. Unknown to Jan, Deverest makes arrangements to pay for an operation that may restore her invalid sister, Dora, to health.

CHAPTER V

Jan stood mute as he went on: "The Devon Arms must take good care of its most important guests!" He clapped his hands as a gesture to his housekeeper and her aides to follow him, and left the room.

"I am going to find out what this all means!" thought Jan, a little later. She found Paul in his office still looking pleased with himself.

"I came to thank you again for the beautiful way you fixed up our rooms," Jan began.

"Think nothing of it," said the manager. "We have been very happy to have you girls here, Jan, and we hope you have enjoyed your stay as much as we have."

"Goodness!" thought Jan, "that sounds as if he expected us to be going soon."

More bewildered than ever, she tried again. "I really don't know how to thank you, Mr. Harris, and I know Dora will be more than delighted. She thinks that apartment, you know, is absolutely the most beautiful place in the whole world."

"Well"—Paul cleared his throat—"I am very glad to hear that—very glad. I hope both of you, Jan, will always keep a warm spot in your heart for the Devon Arms."

That farewell note again! Jan decided on a sudden attack.

"Where does Mr. Deverest come in on this?" she inquired as casually as if they had been discussing that gentleman just the moment before.

"What a bright little lady we are," said Paul, smiling. "Mr. Deverest bound me to secrecy."

Instantly Jan knew that in order to find out anything at all she must pretend to have information she did not possess.

"Of course there's no secret, really, except in his own imagination."

Paul looked relieved. He had wondered if he had not made a mistake in rousing Jan's suspicions, but of course the girl knew what was actually at the bottom of it all. No girl smart enough to get herself engaged to a man like Tony Deverest could be really in the dark about his Christmas eve "surprise" for her.

"Well, since you do know the facts," Paul told her, "I see no harm in giving you a hint that ought to make the surprise even more enjoyable for you. Mr. Deverest is planning to announce his engagement with a magnificent party here, at the Devon Arms, on Christmas eve. He is having the whole supper room made into a Christmas scene, with the biggest tree in town and all the trimmings.

"You'd like a new dress for the party, wouldn't you, Jan? I know you haven't been getting enough money—due to unfortunate circumstances—to splurge on a new party dress, so as a Christmas present I have arranged with Mary Elizabeth Howard for an engagement dress for you, and she's expecting you to call tomorrow morning for a fitting appointment."

"That's sweet of you, Paul," said Jan unsteadily.

"I ventured to hope that you would have dinner at my home," Brad Curtis said. "My mother is particularly anxious to meet you; I've talked about you two girls a lot."

"Do you live with your mother?" said Jan, simply because she felt she had to say something. Dr. Curtis was helping her into her wrap.

"That's right. She's very old, hardly stirs out of the big top-heavy house in which she went housekeeping when she was first married. I live there because it pleases her, and because I like it myself." He spoke to the chauffeur.

"Stop at the corner, Charles. I want to get some flowers."

When he came back he handed Jan a transparent box containing a spray of bittersweet berries, red and gold against evergreens.

"How lovely with this dress!" Jan took out the unusual corsage and fastened it at her waist.

"Lovely with your eyes and hair," Brad said gravely. "More red than your hair, less golden than your eyes."

When the meal was over the old lady suggested coffee in the library for Jan and Brad. She never drank coffee herself, she explained, and would go to her own room at once.

Jan waited until Brad had escorted his mother to her room and called her maid to make her comfortable for the night. He returned to the dining room and drew Jan's arm through his, and they went into the library. Here only one lamp had been switched on, and the light of a coal fire behind the bars of an old-fashioned grate seemed very bright.

Brad rose and crossed the space that lay between them. "Come over here," he said, drawing her to her feet.

"You belong here," Brad began again after a while. "You should have the things that I can give you.

"I'm thirty-five years old and you're—twenty? That's fifteen years between us. Could you learn to love a man fifteen years older than yourself? Will you give me a chance to teach you to love me?"

"Perhaps," said Brad gently, "I ought first to ask you, is there any-one else, Jan?"

"No," whispered Jan.

"For a little while I thought you and Tony—er—Williams—"

"No," said Jan, firmly this time. "That didn't mean anything."

"Then—you'll try to love me?"

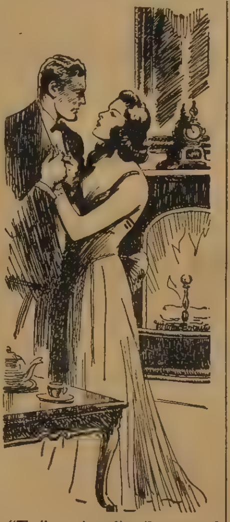
"Oh, Doctor Curtis, I do love you!" Impulsively Jan rose and threw her arms around his neck. He disengaged them after a moment and held both her hands in his.

"That's not quite the way I meant," he told her softly. Then, "We'll leave it at that, shall we? And now I'll take you home. I'm flying up to Vermont in the morning; I've got a camp at a place called Moose River."

"Brad, I do wish you a happy Christmas!" said Jan.

It was December 23rd. Jan was expecting Tony to ring up any moment now. With such an excuse as this Christmas eve party he would surely make an attempt to see her again!

She was due at Mary Elizabeth Howard's at eleven this morning. She presented herself dutifully. Mary Elizabeth herself came in to supervise this last fitting as Jan did as they directed her before the big mirrors. She watched her image advance and retreat in their depths.



"That's not quite the way I meant," he told her softly.

"Turn again." Obedient to Mary Elizabeth's commands Jan moved this way and that, stood still at the turns, pacing slowly in a wide circle around the beautiful modern salon.

"I will never, never wear this dress!"

Jan had made her decision. Right here, with the fitting in progress. Up to now she had had no idea what she would do. As the time for the Deverest Christmas party drew near she had seemed to be under a spell.

When the fitting was finally over to Miss Howard's complimentary satisfaction, Jan went to see Dora.

Jan lingered at the hospital with Dora as long as she could. Dora was looking forward to Christmas as a child might. She wondered if that "nice Tony Williams" really meant to give her a present. "Oh, I'm sure he does!" Jan exclaimed. And she hoped that in spite of what had happened Tony would not forget her little sister.

"I'll bet that he's paging Santa Claus this minute," she told her with conviction.

They had agreed that it would be best for Jan to bring over to the hospital all the wrapped-up presents from the hotel. Jan would be very busy on Christmas eve with Mr. Deverest's party and would not have time to come to the hospital. Dora promised solemnly that she would not open a single present until Christmas day, and Jan listened, her heart a little heavy at the thought that Dora would have to spend this Christmas day alone. But that's the way it would have to be. Dora would be happy enough when she knew!

"Going away?" There was Mrs. Talbot coming out of her room just as Jan was passing her door. She would run into Mrs. Talbot, thought Jan, annoyed. Not that it mattered at all, but there was no use in broadcasting things before you were ready.

"No. I was just taking the kitten to see Dora." She couldn't think of anything better on the spur of the moment.

"Humph!" said Mrs. Talbot.

It was only after they had left the city far behind that Jan noticed how much snow was on the ground. Here, in the open country that lay in increasingly long stretches between the small towns, snow had drifted on the fields and mountains. For a moment Jan's heart quailed at the thought of her destination, a wintry mountain region that she had never seen. But Brad would be there, she told herself resolutely. And Brad would be glad to see her.

She would marry Brad as soon as he wished. Of that much she was certain. Beyond that she did not think at all. Brad would be able to tell her what to do about Dora; perhaps he would want her to live with them—the Curtis house was big enough.

"Why, it's snowing!" Jan almost spoke aloud as she noticed that the landscape, which she had scarcely seen for many miles, was blurred by a drifting veil of snowflakes.

It had been dark outside the warm, lighted world within the bus, for a long while, it seemed to Jan, when they finally stopped in a fair-sized town.

Paul Harris was often perturbed, but he was rarely upset. And of all the occasions when he was upset, there had been few when he was as worried as he was at ten o'clock of the morning of December twenty-fourth. The chambermaid assigned to the rooms on Jan's floor had come straight to him—very properly, too—with a note she had found pinned to Jan's pillow.

"To whom it may concern," he read, "don't worry about me. When I get back I'll explain everything. Jan Payson."

Paul thanked the chambermaid and sent her on her way. Then he rang the Deverest residence, found out from the butler where Tony was likely to be at the moment and finally located him.

"I'll be over," said Tony, hanging up while Paul was still speaking.

The next half hour was a nightmare to Paul.

"No, I haven't any idea where she could have gone. No, I didn't say anything to hurt her feelings. That note there, Mr. Deverest, was the first inkling I had that she wasn't here."

"Maybe Dora knows where she went."

"That's an idea," said Paul, brightening. "I'll go around to the hospital and ask her."

"Don't frighten her," said Tony from the doorway. He was on his way upstairs to hunt for clues.

"Frighten Dora!" exclaimed Paul. "Really, Mr. Deverest!"

Tony meanwhile had reached the Payson apartment and had been admitted by the chambermaid. No, the girl told him in answer to his questions, she hadn't seen Miss Payson yesterday at all. She had done the rooms as usual and left. Then when she came in again this morning, there was that note. Had he seen it? Tony had. He got rid of the maid and after staring helplessly around, wondering where he could begin looking for some hint, he began pacing aimlessly up and down the sitting room. Then he became aware that someone was standing in the open door of the sitting room. He looked up. What a sour-faced old woman!

"Good morning," he said shortly.

"Good morning," said the visitor, even more shortly. "Is Miss Payson in?"

"No, Miss—Mrs.—I didn't catch the name—"

"I didn't give the name, but it's Mrs. Talbot, if you're interested. I thought that girl was up to something, the way she went sneaking down the hall with that cat! Maggie, the chambermaid, said she hadn't been home all night."

Tony ignored the last. But what did she say about the cat? Here was what he was looking for!

"That's right. The kitten is gone," he said. "Where could she have been going with it?"

"She said," Mrs. Talbot stressed the word to indicate her disbelief, "that she was taking the kitten to see Dora. Fine hospital that permits cats in a sick room!"

"Excuse me," said Tony, leaving the room so quickly that Mrs. Talbot had all she could do to get out of his way.

Tony reached the hospital just in time to meet Paul Harris coming down the corridor from Dora's room.

"What did she say?" Tony asked breathlessly.

"Nothing," said Paul, "except that Jan brought all her presents over yesterday and put them away in a drawer to be opened on Christmas morning. She doesn't expect Jan today. She thinks she's getting ready for the party tonight and is too busy to come over here."

"Mrs. Talbot says Jan had the kitten with her, and that she was taking it to Dora. Did you see it around the room anywhere?"

There Must Have Been Politicos at the Beginning

Over a cup of coffee at the club a doctor claimed that his was the oldest profession. "For," he said, "Adam's rib couldn't have been removed without a surgeon to perform the operation."

"Yes," said the architect, "but before that the world had to be created out of chaos. And, you will admit, creation implies an architect."

There was a politician in their midst.

"Hold on, gentlemen," he said. "You must carry it back still further—to chaos. And where there is chaos there must be a politician."

Quick Rolls—For Busy Days

¼ cup milk
2 tablespoons sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
1 cake Fleischmann's Yeast
½ cup lukewarm water
3 cups sifted flour
3 tablespoons melted shortening

Scald milk; add sugar and salt; cool to lukewarm. Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water and add to lukewarm milk. Add 1½ cups flour and beat until perfectly smooth. Add melted shortening and remaining flour, or enough to make an easily handled dough. Knead well. Shape into rolls and place in well-greased pan. Cover and set in warm place free from draft. Let rise until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour. Bake in moderate oven at 400° F. about 20 minutes. Makes 12.

"FOLKS & THINGS"

Blessed be this Christmas Day,
For us at home, and those away.
Our hearts are filled with humble prayer
For sons and daughters everywhere.

Our thoughts are with them all, this year,
We're sending each a word of cheer
And greetings on this Christmas Day,
To those in service, far away.

Lest you forget: Christmas is Jesus' Birthday.—Lee County Bulletin.

We understand the slogan for the Fourth War Loan Drive in January will be "Let Them Have It."

Looks like Judge Victor Heard did it. "Vic" and his crew of War Chest workers have reached their goal in the drive and are to be heartily congratulated. They have shown a fine patriotic spirit in keeping at it even though at times, according to Judge Heard, it all looked rather hopeless. But one thing we'll tell you. If you don't think its a job to raise seven thousand dollars, just ask any one of the committee who worked in that drive.

By-the-way. Here's some good news for you. Your taxes are due. Your Poll Tax is due, too. All of your City Licenses are practically due. Now, that should make you feel better. Well, doesn't it?

You can see more car lights burning during the day in town these mornings. Owners turn their lights on to drive in the heavy fog, then not being used to turning their lights off in the daytime when they park, go off and leave the lights burning. More batteries get run down that way.

Guy Higgins came home last week. He arrived about 5 o'clock in the morning and reached home after 8—and lives five and a half blocks from the Bus Station. Seems he had no clothes but those he was wearing and had to wait for someone to come down and unlock something before he could get others.

We saw a good one Friday. We saw City Police Officer, Anderson get County License Inspector Caldwell. Anderson was cruising along the highway when he saw an automobile parked across an alley-way. Stoping, he promptly went over to find out the reason and to tell them to move on. It was our county License Inspector. But—the city officer had his way. Mr Caldwell pulled out and parked correctly.

Would you believe there could be so great a difference in grocery prices as there has in the past three years. Just picked up an old issue of the News the other day and here are a few of the prevailing prices at Hills Grocery at that time: Cocoanuts 5c each; Stick candy two pounds for 20c; oranges for 10c per doz.; apples for 12c per doz.; raisins were 9c per pound. Pecans, brazil nuts for 15c. Now don't that make your mouth water. Just suppose you were getting the salary you are now with prices like they were then—boy, shut up, you're dreaming.

Ed Reid, high mucky-te-muck of the League of Municipalities. was in to see us the past week-end. Seems Ed is interested in the campaign of Lister Hill. We have known Ed for many years and like him a lot, but, Ed don't have to recommend Lister Hill to us. We also know Lister Hill. Anyway, we enjoyed Ed's visit and hope he comes again no matter what his business.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

With the owner of the rent boats we came down to the edge of the stream, and our boat for the day was selected. The owner stood on the shore and shoved us off, handing us two oars to be used in the handling of the boat. He gave us a boat and the oars, but he did not go with us. God does not deal with his children that way. He not only furnishes us with the boat of salvation, and the plan for our days work, but He gets into the boat and goes along with us. How wonderful it is to make the way of life in God's plan of salvation, and to have Him along with us to guide us all the way.

The large transport plane was far behind the enemy line and the time had come for the parishute troops to leap into the air. Their leader stood at the door of the plane, and looking back over the line of those who were to follow him, he thought them to appear as a herd of young lions. He shouted, "Are All Ready"? The answer came back, "Ready Sir". Then he shouted again, "As you leap, look up, and now follow me". He went into space and the others followed. Why did he request that they look up as they leaped into space? It was that they might lose sight of the world, and put their trust in God. Doubtless each boy prayed to God for protection as he leaped. Those boys were instructed as all of us should be, Always look up before you leap. Put your trust in God first and then advance along the paths of duty.

Milton tells us that two angels heard that the devil was in the Garden of Eden for the purpose of tempting Adam and Eve, and that they entered the garden with drawn swords in search of the devil. They sought everywhere but could not find his Satanic Majesty. Finally they discovered a toad sitting on the ear of Eve, whispering into her ear. They touched the toad with their sword and up sprang the devil. That story may not be true, but it shows to us that the devil can get into some very ordinary things and become our tempter. He lurks in the dollar and tempts us.

In one of the Museuma of Venice there is an instrument that is unique in its make and purpose. In the long ago one of the old tyrants of Italy used this instrument for the purpose of shooting poisoned needles into the flesh of those who had enraged him. When those needles entered the flesh there was only a slight sting, but the poison on the point produced death in a few minutes. The gossiper of today is shooting poisoned needels into the heart and reputation of those about whom the whisper is made, or the shrug of the sholder is revealed. The gossiper is a tyrant with a poisoned tongue.

A book keeper told me this story. Said he, When a young man, I worked in an office of a large saw mill company. I could have taken from the Company $25.00 a day. but I refused to touch a penny other than my salary. Another man in the office yielded to temptation and took all that he could cover up. Four years and both of us went out of the office. Two years more and this man had a mercantile business with a $25,000.00 stock and I still had my salary. Ten years has passed since that date and now he is working on a WPA job, dead broke, and I have a better job than ever. The man lost everything that he had. Then this honost man added—It is my honest belief that when a man steals a dime, he will lose a dollar. The stealer loses character and that is worth more than money.

While Working on a ship a carpenter laid his hammer down on the bot tom floor between the heavy timber and shortly afterwards other me covered it over with another floo The carpenter lost a hammer, but s years later that hammer came ne sinking the ship. While out on u stormy seas that hammer wore i way through the planks from the ro ling ship and the vessel was discove ed to be sinking. WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

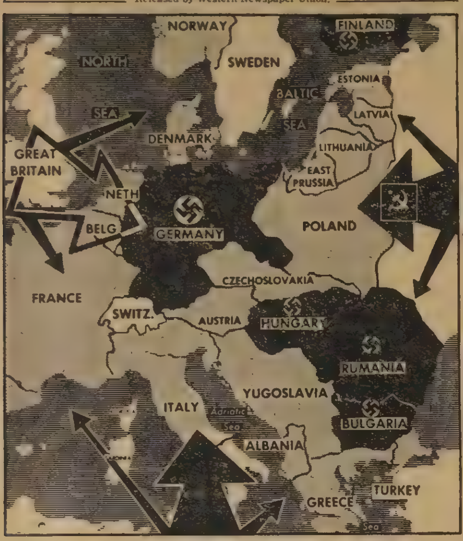
Combined Strength of All Allied Power Concentrated for Three-Pronged Thrust On Hitler's Jittery German Stronghold; New Plan Devised for Pacific Strategy

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.



"Big Three" map sledge hammer blows vs. Axis from north, south and east, as illustrated on map. (See: Statesmen Confer.)

STATESMEN CONFER:
Map War Strategy

With the Big Four pledged to the destruction of Germany and Japan, all eyes turned to Cairo's historic Mena house where Turkey's Ismet Inonu met with President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill to discuss his country's role in the war.

Even as the statesmen met in the shadow of Egypt's massive pyramids, Germany played her hand, massing mechanized forces against Turkey's Balkan border in an obvious effort to influence the Turks' position.

F.D.R. and Churchill met with Inonu following their three-day conference with Premier Stalin of Russia in Teheran, Persia, where the Big Three pledged a finish fight against Germany from the east, west and south, and established the basis for a democratic community of nations.

Meeting previously with China's Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, F.D.R. and Churchill had vowed to force unconditional surrender on the Japs, and restore all territory the Nipponese have overrun since 1894.

Hurry Invasion Barges

Twenty thousand manufacturing firms have been given a special priority for the production of invasion craft and ordered to speed up deliveries during the fore part of 1944.

As was the case prior to the U. S. invasion of North Africa, shipbuilders have been given precedence over planes, high-octane gasoline and other urgency production programs, and the navy has curtailed orders for destroyer-escorts to provide additional facilities for constructing the self-propelled landing barges, amphibious trucks, tank landing vessels, etc.

After being given the go-ahead before the North African operations, shipbuilders turned out 750 million dollars worth of invasion craft in five months.

ITALY:
Nazis' Line Sags

Fighting over muddy slopes, U. S. troops gained foggy mountain heights overlooking the road to Rome, and along the Adriatic to the east, Gen. Bernard Montgomery's Eighth army punched its way up a coastal strip toward the highway hub of Pescara.

Although the Nazis' winter line sagged in some sectors under the steady pressure of Allied infantry and artillery, it recoiled in others, and on the U. S. front, the Germans clung to the pass at Mignano affording access to the road to Rome, while on the British front, the enemy massed to check the Tommies farther inland.

Fighting bravely in the rain, U. S. Doughboys with packs clambered up rocky slopes even too steep for mule supply teams.

WAR MANPOWER:
Cut Needs

Against the 2,000,000 new workers which the War Manpower commission estimated would be needed in the munitions industries by July, 1944, only 1,100,000 actually will be required, but military demands remain unchanged.

Because of changes in munitions requirements and the high rate of production achieved, WMC said 10,700,000 workers will be sufficient to meet schedules. Of the 1,100,000 new workers, most will be recruited from 3,500,000 women under 45.

To achieve their goal of 11,300,000 men by next July, the army and navy will actually call more than 2,000,000 during the year, as first planned, WMC said. Discharges and casualties will create a bigger drain to keep the ranks at full strength. Draft calls during January and February will continue at the current rate of 300,000 to 350,000 per month.

SOLDIERS' VOTE:
States' Control

Senator James Eastland

Killing the Lucas (Ill.) - Green (R. I.) bill allowing soldiers overseas to vote under federal supervision, the senate adopted and sent to the house a measure inspired by Senator James Eastland (Miss.) leaving election rules up to the states.

Under Eastland's proposal, states were asked to pass legislation allowing vets abroad to vote in local, state and federal elections by establishing a system of postcard applications for absentee ballots to be distributed by air mail free.

Included in the measure was an amendment by Senator Robert Taft (Ohio), assuring all parties of equal shares of campaign publicity.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:
MacArthur's New Plan

While U. S. and Australian troops slowly hacked their way through Southwest Pacific jungles, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's representative at the Cairo conference revealed the general's new master plan for defeating the Japanese.

MacArthur's plan calls for capture of the rich East Indies, cutting off the Japs' principal source of oil for their mechanized forces, and otherwise slashing their long supply lines to the home islands.

To achieve this objective, MacArthur has sought to lure the big Jap fleet out into the open for a finish fight, but the wily Nipponese have evaded battle, preferring to remain close to bases under air cover or behind reefy coral barriers.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

STEEL: The nation's steelworkers have better filled pay envelopes than ever before, the American Iron and Steel Institute reports. October's payroll totaled nearly 145 million dollars, compared with 143 million in September, and 126 million in October of last year. Average hourly wage is now just under $1.16. It was $1.08 a year ago. There are 615,000 on the payrolls now.

BLOCK-BUSTING: The English village of Deenthorpe has been completely wrecked by the crash of a Flying Fortress loaded with 6,000 pounds of bombs. Neither fliers nor villagers were injured, however, as the crew parachuted to safety, and then ran about arousing the townspeople, who fled to the fields. Ten minutes later, the plane exploded to bits.

CORN:
Boost Ceilings

To stimulate the flow of corn into terminal markets, OPA raised ceilings by nine cents, and then froze prices of oats, barley and sorghum grains preparatory to establishing permanent revaluations.

In boosting corn ceilings, OPA said it was complying with the emergency price control act, which stipulates that maximum prices for a commodity shall reflect parity. Under the new tops, No. 2 corn will sell at $1.16 at Chicago and Milwaukee; $1.12⅝ at Minneapolis and St. Paul; $1.16¾ at St. Louis; $1.12¾ at Kansas City and St. Joseph; $1.15 at Peoria; $1.10 at Omaha; $1.15¼ at Duluth and Superior; $1.09 at Sioux City, and $1.28⅞ at Nashville.

Action on oats, barley and sorghums resulted from steadily advancing feed prices because of the sag in corn marketing, OPA said. Rising prices increased costs for poultry and livestock and dairy farmers, OPA declared.

Feed Imports

To meet demands for feed grains in the U. S., a minimum of 75,000,000 bushels will have to be imported if poultry and livestock goals are to be achieved in 1944, War Food administration estimated.

At the same time, the Association of American railroads revealed that 50 additional freight cars were being made available daily to Canadian lines for hauling grain, mainly into Utah and the Southeast. Capable of moving 2,000,000 bushels a month, these cars are in addition to the 1,000 in use in the Northwest.

As of December 4, Commodity Credit corporation announced the U. S. had purchased 53,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat, of which 45,000,000 already have been imported by rail and water.

Banned in 1942, suspender buttons have been ordered restored to work pants by the War Production board.

FLU:
'Seasonal Increase'

With the number of influenza cases in the U. S. five times under that of 1941, and deaths from the sickness in Great Britain far below the proportions of 1937, the world presently faces no flu epidemic comparable to that of 1918, when 20,000,000 died.

So said a spokesman for the U. S. Public Health Service. However, he cautioned that persons suffering from colds, grippe and flu remain at home to prevent spreading the illness, especially in view of the shortage of doctors and nurses and the difficulty imposed in handling many patients.

In the U. S., the spokesman termed the rising rate of influenza cases as a "normal seasonal increase," while he pointed out that the deaths in Great Britain's large cities for a single week recently fell far short of the 2,000 recorded weekly during the epidemic of 1937.

RUSSIA:
New Army

While German military commentators reported that the Russians were moving up a whole newly equipped army to continue their winter offensive, the Reds followed their traditional tactics of conducting large scale attacks all along 600 miles of front in an effort to break through a weak spot.

Their drive beyond Gomel slowed with the reorganization of 300,000 German troops withdrawn from advance positions, the Reds opened up a heavy offensive in the Dnieper bend, above the industrial centers of Krivoi Rog and Nikopol, where the Nazis have held their ground for several months.

In this sector, the Reds poured troops onto the western banks of the Dnieper at two points, and in the fighting that ensued, they sought to crush German forces wedged between them.

Sales in filling stations in 1943 will approximate 2⅓ billion dollars, compared with 3 billion in 1942 and the peak 3½ billion in 1941.

NATIONAL BANKS:
Assets in Billions

Rich in natural resources, the U. S. is equally rich in finance, with total assets of 5,058 national banks approximating 66 billion dollars.

Figures show:

Private deposits of 40 billion dollars; U. S. deposits of almost 11 billion; municipal and state deposits of 2½ billion.

Loans and discounts of 10¾ billion dollars; investments in U. S. securities of 35¾ billion dollars; holdings of other stocks, bonds and securities of 3 billion 400 million, of which 2 billion represents state and other political obligations.

Capital stock of the banks totals 1½ billion dollars, with surplus, undivided profits and reserves of 2½ billions.

PRO FOOTBALL

Wartime cash boosted attendance at professional football games to a new high average of 26,811 per game, the National Football league reports. This is an increase of 36.7 per cent over last year, and 24 per cent over 1941, the previous high mark. Total attendance for the 40 regularly scheduled games this season amounted to 1,072,469. Last year 1,079,148 fans watched 55 regular games.

Highest drawing card in the league was the New York Giants club.

CHRIST THE FULFILLMENT OF THE LAW

LESSON TEXT—Hebrews 1:1-9; Romans 10:4-10.

GOLDEN TEXT—God . . . hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son.—Hebrews 1:1,2.

The center of all Christian thinking is the fact that God has revealed Himself to man. This revelation is found in the Bible, for it is the Word of God. That is why the commandments which we have studied in recent weeks speak to us with such authority. They are not the expression of human opinion of how we should live. They are God's command which we are to obey.

The great and final revelation of God and His love was not the written Word—the Bible—but the Living Word—His Son. The coming of Christ is our lesson for next week, on Christmas Sunday. But this week we want to learn a little more of what His coming into the world meant. He was—

I. God's Last Word (Heb. 1:1-3).

Through the ages God had been speaking through the prophets, constantly revealing Himself as a God of power, justice, holiness, truth and mercy.

In different ways and at various times (v. 1) He spoke through them, but always there was a pointing forward to the One who should come. Abraham was called out to found the nation (Gen. 12), and Jacob the family or tribe (Gen. 49), in which He should come. He was to be a prophet like Moses (Deut. 18) and of the kingly house of David (II Sam. 7). All the offerings of Leviticus spoke of His priestly service. Isaiah saw Him as both the reigning and the suffering Messiah (Isa. 53).

All this was incomplete until He came; and when He did, He revealed all the glory of God. He made the perfect and final sacrifice for sin, and sat down (His work was finished) at God's right hand (the place of power).

Let us be clear about this: in Christ God's revelation is perfect and complete. We need look for nothing more. The claims of those who appear with a "new light" or some mysterious hidden power are so obviously untrue that we ought not to be at all interested.

But not only is Christ God's final Word, He is—

II. God's Best Word (Heb. 1:4-9).

The prophets and their messages thrill our souls and move us to more earnest living. But the Christ is our very life as well as our Redeemer.

The angels are God's messengers—mighty and magnificent beings, superior in their way to man (Ps. 8:5). The early church made too much of angels (as do some groups today), but Protestantism of our day has made too little of them. They are great and powerful beings who minister on our behalf and who are honored in the loyal service they do for God.

But when they stand beside the Son of God, it becomes evident that He holds a place of incomparable glory and majesty. He is the highest revelation of God, the best Word that God could have spoken to needy and sinful humanity.

We do well to think of who Christ is and what He has done. Just in this passage from Hebrews we find that He is the express image of all of God's glory; He is the upholder of all creation; He has the place of honor and power at God's right hand; He is the only begotten of the Father; His throne has been established forever, and so on.

How well nigh unbelievable that this glorious One is also our Saviour. This is stated in verse 3, but is developed in our next point.

III. God's Saving Word (Rom. 10:4-10).

If sinful man were only permitted to look on His glory it would be a great privilege, but it would not help him in his desire for holiness and eternal joy. There was a "great gulf fixed" between sinful man and a holy God until the Son of glory became the God-man, when the eternal Word became "flesh and dwelt among us" (Luke 2:14).

Christ as our Saviour is the "end of the law" to the believer (v. 4), not in the sense that He terminates the law by setting it aside, but by completing or fulfilling all of its requirements.

Just so the Christian is set free from the law, not in order that he may disobey it, but that he may keep it in the power and grace which Christ gives him. The Ten Commandments are the law of life for the Christian because he loves the Lord Jesus Christ and wants to obey Him. We do the things which the Decalogue require not to be saved thereby, but because we thereby honor the name of our Saviour.

The unbeliever, struggling under the burden of sin, says, "How can I come to know Him?" and we find the answer in verses 8-10. It is "by faith.'

RESOLUTIONS BROKEN

By Marie Marsh

BOB JUDSON went down to breakfast New Year's morning with his shirt cuffs dangling. He had watched the old year out and the new year in at his young sister's party and had promised to go skating with the "crowd" by nine in the morning.

Bob read in small, rather childish writing, these resolutions thought by his little sister to cover his besetting sins:

Not to flirt.

Not to be scrappy.

Not to be late for dinner—"It annoys cook so."

"Bobby, dear," resumed Peggy. "I've asked some of the girls to come in this evening to practice a new dance step. We're a man short. That is, we are a girl extra. Sally's bringing her cousin."

Bob's social engagements of his own and his sister's set kept him until darkness had begun to settle.

He was aware of the fact that there was a young woman walking hurriedly beside a man on the opposite side of the street. Then he saw the young woman quickly cross the street. She waved her hand and fairly pounced upon him with a "Why, Harry, dear, how glad I am to see you!"

"I thought it was you, Harry," said the girl, walking beside him and laughing gayly. "Of course, you were on your way to our house. We half expected you, but I didn't know you would come this way." It seemed to Bob that the girl was talking very loudly. And then in a low whisper she said, "Harry Seller's your name."

The next minute he had struck out against the annoying stranger.

Then Bob realized that the man who had been talking to the girl had caught up with them.

"Say, who are you?" said the young man, well dressed, but with his hat drawn over his eyes.

Bob did not wait to know what was coming next. He shook off the girl's hold, his fists clenched and his muscles tightened without volition. The next minute he had struck out toward the annoying stranger, and with the third blow the stranger was prone on the path.

"Take me home," whispered the girl, hoarsely. "It's 26 Bedford Street. Can you find it?" They hurried on. The man was soon following them again.

Bob stood with her on the porch of the house marked 26 until a servant came to the door. "May I see you again?"

"Oh, no," said the girl. "It would seem as if I had been very impertinent if we ever met again. But I shall always be so grateful." Then the door closed and Bob in much confusion traced his steps homeward. It was a quarter to seven when he reached home.

Then the telephone bell rang and Peggy was absorbed for many minutes. She burst in upon Bob in the dining room, where he was finishing dinner alone. "Bob, hurry, I am afraid you'll have to get Sally and her cousin. Burton James was going to meet them here and they were coming alone, but the cousin—Madge is her name—had the most awful experience, perfectly awful. A man followed her. They walked along and then he took her arm and wanted to make a date with her and everything. Madge didn't know what to do, it was so dark and lonely. But she says the nicest man came along and saw her difficulty and knocked the man down and took her home, then left without letting her know who he was."

Of course, Bob hastened to 26 Bedford Street, and of course the affair ripened into a romance, and long before the year was out announcements were made of the engagement of Madge and Bob.

> Resolved, to live with all my might while I do live. Resolved, never to lose one moment of time, to improve it in the most profitable way I possibly can. Resolved, never to do anything which I should despise or think meanly of in another. Resolved, never to do anything out of revenge. Resolved, never to do anything which I should be afraid to do if it were the last hour of my life.—Jonathan Edwards.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The war and the crude rubber shortage have given emphasis to synthetic rubber, but for more than 70 years prominent chemists in Europe, Russia and the United States have been working on the development of this substitute for natural rubber.

One tapper can collect about six gallons of latex from a morning's tapping on a rubber plantation. This yields about 20 pounds of rubber.

The first scientific or commercial interest taken in rubber was evidenced in 1745, when Charles Marie de la Condamine made a report on this substance to the Paris Academy of Sciences.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY O'HARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin, given an opportunity to choose any yearling colt on his family's Wyoming ranch, picks the filly of a "loco" mare named Rocket. His choice merely adds to his father's anger, which is already aroused by the fact that Ken has failed his school work and has shown no sense of responsibility. It was Ken's mother who finally persuaded Captain McLaughlin that having the colt might be good for Ken, and the change in him has proved she was right. But Flicka, the filly, refuses to be captured. Caught once, she escapes and is caught again. To Ken she's wonderful. To McLaughlin she's just plain loco.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER X

Mindful that she had clawed her way out when she was corraled before, McLaughlin determined to keep her in the main corral into which the stable door opened. It had eight-foot walls of aspen poles. The rest of the yearlings must be maneuvered away from her.

Now that the fog had gone, the sun was scorching, and horses and men alike were soaked with sweat before the chasing was over and, one after the other, the yearlings had been driven into the other corral, and Flicka was alone.

She knew that her solitude meant danger, and that she was singled out for some special disaster. She ran frantically to the high fence through which she could see the other ponies standing, and reared and clawed at the poles; she screamed, whirled, circled the corral first in one direction, and then the other. And while McLaughlin and Ross were discussing the advisability of roping her, she suddenly espied the dark hole which was the open upper half of the stable door, and dove through it. McLaughlin rushed to close it, and she was caught—safely imprisoned in the stable.

But when they went up after dinner, there was no Flicka in the barn. One of the windows above the manger was broken, and the manger was full of pieces of glass.

Staring at it, McLaughlin gave a short laugh. He looked at Ken. "She climbed into the manger—see? Stood on the feed box, beat the glass out with her front hoofs and climbed through."

The window opened into the Six Foot Pasture. Near it was a wagonload of hay. When they went around the back of the stable to see where she had gone they found her between the stable and the hay wagon, eating.

At their approach, she leaped away, then headed east across the pasture.

"If she's like her mother," said Rob, "she'll go right through the wire."

"Ay bet she'll go over," said Gus. "She yumps like a deer."

"No horse can jump that," said McLaughlin.

Ken said nothing because he could not speak. It was the most terrible moment of his life. He watched Flicka racing toward the eastern wire.

A few yards from it, she swerved, turned and raced diagonally south.

"It turned her! it turned her!" cried Ken, almost sobbing. It was the first sign of hope for Flicka. "Oh, Dad, she has got sense, she has! She has!"

Flicka turned again as she met the southern boundary of the pasture, again at the northern; she avoided the barn. Without abating anything of her whirlwind speed, following a precise, accurate calculation, and turning each time on a dime, she investigated every possibility. Then, seeing that there was no hope, she raced south towards the range where she had spent her life, gathered herself, and rose to the impossible leap.

Each of the men watching had the impulse to cover his eyes, and Ken gave a howl of despair.

Twenty yards of fence came down with her as she hurled herself through. Caught on the upper strands, she turned a complete somersault, landing on her back, her four legs dragging the wires down on top of her, and tangling herself in them beyond hope of escape.

"The wire!" cursed McLaughlin. "If I could afford decent fences—"

Ken followed the men miserably as they walked to the filly. They stood in a circle watching while she kicked and fought and thrashed until the wire was tightly wound and tangled about her, piercing and tearing her flesh and hide. At last she was unconscious, streams of blood running on her golden coat, and pools of crimson widening on the grass beneath her.

With the wire cutters which Gus always carried in the hip pocket of his overalls, he cut the wire away; and they drew her into the pasture, repaired the fence, placed hay, a box of oats, and a tub of water near her, and called it a day.

"I doubt if she pulls out of it," said McLaughlin briefly. "But it's just as well. If it hadn't been this way it would have been another. A loco horse isn't worth a darn."

Ken lay on the grass behind Flicka. One little brown hand was on her back, smoothing it, pressing softly, caressing. The other hand supported his head. His face hung over her.

His throat felt dry; his lips were like paper.

After a long while he whispered, "I didn't mean to kill you, Flicka—"

He counted her wounds. The two worst were a deep cut above the right rear hock, and a long gash in her chest that ran down into the muscle of the foreleg. Besides those, she was snagged with three-cornered tears through which the flesh pushed out, and laced with cuts and scratches with blood drying on them in rows of little black beads.

Ken wondered if the two bad cuts ought to be sewn up. He thought of Doc Hicks, and then remembered what his Dad had said: "You cost me money every time you turn around." No—Gus might do it—Gus was pretty good at sewing up animals. But Dad said best thing of all is usually to let them alone. They heal up.

The cut in Flicka's hind leg was awfully deep—

He put his head down against her and whispered again, "Oh, Flicka—I didn't mean to kill you."

Gus came out to him carrying a can of black grease.

"De Boss tole me to put some of dis grease on de filly's cuts, Ken—it helps heal 'em up."

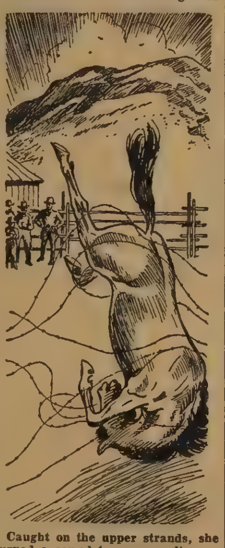
Together they went over her carefully, putting a smear of the grease wherever they could reach a wound.

Gus stood looking down at the boy.

"D'you think she'll get well, Gus?"

"She might, Ken. I seen plenty horses hurt as bad as dot, and dey yust as good as ever."

"Dad said—" But Ken's voice failed him when he remembered that his father had said she might as well die, because she was loco anyway.



Caught on the upper strands, she turned a complete somersault.

The Swede stood a moment, his pale blue eyes, transparent and spiritual, looking kindly down at the boy; then he went on down to the barn.

Every trace of fog and mist had vanished, and the sun was blazing hot. Sweltering, Ken got up to take a drink of water from the bucket left for Flicka. Then, carrying handfuls of water in his small cupped hands, he poured it on her mouth. Flicka did not move, and once again Ken took his place behind her, his hand on her neck, his lips whispering to her.

After a while his head sank in exhaustion to the ground . . .

When evening came, and Nell had called Ken and had taken him by the hand and led him away, Flicka still lay without moving. Gently the darkness folded down over her.

Everybody went out to see Flicka right after breakfast and she stood against the fence as far away from them as she could get, while they discussed her injuries and her points, and whether she was more like Banner or Rocket—

Every remark made about her went through Ken as if it had been made about himself, but he too wanted to get a verdict and said, "She's got wonderful points, hasn't she, Dad?"

McLaughlin glared at Ken. "You've bought her, Ken. She's signed, sealed and delivered. Always choose them first, set your heart on them, buy them, and study their points afterwards—that way you'll be a first-rate horseman."

Ken's face got red and he looked away. Flicka, as if she felt the shame of her position, urged herself weakly along the fence in one direction, then turned and went in the other, trying to escape.

"I think she's a perfect little beauty," said Nell, who was there in her riding clothes, ready to give Rumba her workout.

"I want her moved down to the Calf Pasture," said McLaughlin. "There's shade there, and grass, and the running stream of water. I'll be needing this pasture for the other horses."

"But the Calf Pasture's got only three strands of barbed wire," said Ken uneasily. "She might jump it and get away."

His father cast him one of his withering glances. "She won't jump it, Ken. She won't jump anything. Not for a long time yet."

"Besides," said Howard, "down there she'll have company. The calves and our colts with their mothers. She won't be alone."

"She'll be alone, all right," said McLaughlin with a short laugh; and Ken remembered the remark about a loco horse always being a Lone Wolf. "She'll keep to herself."

Nell and Ross went down to the stable to begin the work on the polo ponies, and the rest of them spread out in a fan behind Flicka and gently urged her toward the gate which Gus had opened into the Calf Pasture. She went a few steps at a time, then stopped to rest with her head hanging weakly.

Ken was glad she was in the Calf Pasture. It was here the boys trained their colts, here that the milch cows grazed at night and the calves in the daytime. And it was nearer the house. From the Green, from the terrace, from Ken's window, a great deal of the Calf Pasture could be seen, and it comforted Ken to think that Flicka was close by even when he couldn't be with her.

After dinner the men were loading the four Rodeo horses, Lady, Calico, Baldy and Buck, into the truck for McLaughlin to drive into Cheyenne.

Ken hurried to catch his father before the truck started, and found him in the cab.

"Dad!"

McLaughlin looked down. "Well?" he barked.

"Could I have a few forkfuls of hay for Flicka? She doesn't graze, I think she can't move around much."

Being asked for hay was like being asked for his right eye. McLaughlin's rule was, never feed hay when there's green grass growing.

He roared, "I told you you cost me money every time you turn around."

"Could I, Dad?" repeated Ken unflinchingly.

"All right," said McLaughlin. "Just for a few days." He leaned out the window of the truck, shouting for Gus, and Ken dashed away.

Ken carried the hay out to Flicka on a pitchfork. Every step he took for her was a joy. When Flicka saw him coming she tried to run away, and Ken said, "Oh, no, Flicka, don't run away, don't be afraid of me. I am Ken. And this is hay. You like it, Flicka—come and get some hay."

He stood some distance off, having placed the hay near the tub of water, and presently Flicka came limping back, smelled at it, and began to eat.

Ken lay with his elbow on the ground and his head propped on his hand, looking at Flicka. Now and then she would raise her head.

He knew she was better; her wounds were not bleeding today. They were swollen, and where the flesh had been pink and wet yesterday, today it was darker and dry. The scabs were forming.

Howard was doing his colts for him today too. Ken hated to leave Flicka even for an hour.

At milking time Tim went down to the cowbarn, carrying the milk pails. The bronco-buster, as usual, was with him, walking stiffly on his high heels, his thin legs in their pale blue jeans so bowed that a dog could have run through them.

They made a detour into the Calf Pasture to take a look at the filly.

"I'll be doggoned," said Ross calmly, with no expression at all on his small face, "she's beginning to look right pert."

He sat down on a rock, took out his cigarette papers and a bag of Bull Durham, and expertly rolled himself a cigarette.

Tim stood there with two milk pails on each arm and the usual surprised grin on his comical Irish face. "Well, Kennie," he said, "how do you like trained-nursin?"

"All right," said Ken, shamefacedly.

"When I seen her go for that fence," continued Tim, "I didn't really believe she'd try it—then I sez to meself, crazy people you c'n lock up in asylums—crazy horses you gotta let kill themselves."

Ken slowly lifted his head and stared at Tim's dark red grinning face.

Suddenly all the odds and ends of thought which had confused him came clear in his mind. Loco—it wasn't just loco, the way you said, Oh, you're nuts. It meant wrong in the head—lunatic asylums—crazy people—Flicka wasn't right—

Horror went through him like zigzags of lightning.

"She sure is a wild woman," said Ross seriously.

Ken looked from Tim to Ross. "Do you think she's really—" The word that had always been so easy to say now stuck in his throat. He brought it out with difficulty—"loco?"

"She sure is."

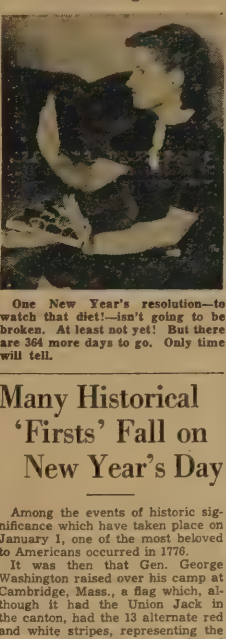
Never Again!



One New Year's resolution—to watch that diet!—isn't going to be broken. At least not yet! But there are 364 more days to go. Only time will tell.

Many Historical 'Firsts' Fall on New Year's Day

Among the events of historic significance which have taken place on January 1, one of the most beloved to Americans occurred in 1776.

It was then that Gen. George Washington raised over his camp at Cambridge, Mass., a flag which, although it had the Union Jack in the canton, had the 13 alternate red and white stripes, representing the 13 colonies. This flag was referred to in the correspondence of the day as the "American colors," and may safely be regarded as the first American flag. Since the 13 colonies represented in the 13 stripes, although fighting for their rights, had not yet broken entirely away from the mother country, the British Union Jack was retained to show their connection with England. Six months later, however, the ties which bound them were severed by the Declaration of Independence, and then the need for a new banner resulted in the doing away with the Union Jack. Then came the historic resolution of June 14, 1777, the stars were placed in the canton and the flag of the United States became the Stars and Stripes.

The War of 1812 saw another important event taking place on New Year's day. For it was on January 1, 1815, that the British made their first attack on New Orleans, and a week later occurred the decisive engagement in which "Old Hickory" Jackson so decisively defeated Pakenham's veterans.

On January 1, 1822, the first American settlers arrived in Texas, an event which forecast the struggle for a second war of independence in North America and the addition of the Great Southwest to the United States. On January 1, 1831, William Lloyd Garrison, the Abolitionist, published the first issue of the Liberator.

Egyptians First To Measure Time

Gregorian Calendar of 1582 Universally Adopted.

Astronomers, geologists, and scientists estimate the age of the earth at approximately three or four billion years.

However, the Egyptians were apparently the first to figure out any exact measurement of time. They were astronomers, besides having the Nile which overflowed pretty regularly every 365 days. As a result, they divided the 365 days into 12 periods of 30 days each and added the remaining 5 days to the last period or months. Historians have accredited the Egyptian calendar as having been established some 4,000 years before the birth of Christ.

Now, the Babylonians, having no Nile to assist them in their calculations, fitted up a lunar calendar according to the observation that a new moon appeared about every 29 days and that the passage of 12 moons brought the star clusters into the same position again accompanied by a corresponding season of warmth. The resultant lunar calendar soon proved to be about 11 days short of the solar year, necessitating the addition of extra days.

Julius Caesar detested inefficiency. So, he tackled the calendar and called the Alexandrian scientist, Sosigenes, to his assistance. Sosigenes explained the differences between the solar and the lunar years. As a result, the Julian calendar divided the year into 12 solar months—the sum of which totaled 365 days with an extra day added every three or four years.

Grant's Reception

Ulysses S. Grant was severely criticized by the public in regard to a New Year's reception at the White House. Because of the death of Mrs. Belknap, wife of his secretary of war, he cancelled the function. Thereupon Washington gossips declared it was a bad breach of international good manners for the President to slight the foreign diplomats, who desired to pay their respects to the head of the American nation.

Scotch Customs Brought to U. S.

"Should auld acquaintance be forgot,
And never brought to mind?"

There may be no way of proving whether or not Robert Burns was thinking of New Year's Eve when he wrote "Auld Lang Syne"; however, two things are certain: the Scotch have always made a big fuss over New Year's and no American celebration thereof would be complete without this traditional bit of Scottish verse.

In Scotland, the wassail bowl went 'round at New Year's time. Traditionally, the custom originated when Rowena, daughter of Hengist, presented Prince Vortigren with a bowl of wine and the salutation, "Lord King, wass-hael," or literally, "To your health." The prince drained the bowl with one draught, returned the maiden's salutation by immediately falling in love with her, and the two lived happily ever after.

The wassail bowl itself was an ornament of graceful design—decorated with branches of greenery that formed a canopy over it. The mixture within was warm and included ale, sugar, and nutmeg or ginger; highly spiced, sweetened wine was added by hosts who could afford it.

On New Year's Eve at the stroke of 12 the head of the household, toasting his family and friends, sipped the mixture and then passed it to the others present. Sometimes, the party would pile into a wagon or sleigh and, carrying kettlefuls of the beverage, buns, cheese, etc., would stop at various houses throughout the community. The refreshments went around at each "stop" and nobody got home till morning.

Why New Year Starts In Middle of Winter

Why does the year start in the middle of winter?

Perhaps the most valid reason is that the first day of January is conveniently near an annually recurring celestial landmark—the earth's perihelion, or point of closest approach to the sun. It's a fact that in the dead of the northern winter, due to our planet's elliptical orbit, we are a few hundred miles closer to the solar disk than on the hottest day in summer.

New Year day doesn't exactly hit the mark. On or about January 4 the center of gravity of the earth-moon system is nearest the center of gravity of the sun. That is, two imaginary points are closest together. One is at approximately the center of the sun and remains constant through the ages. One is about 2,000 miles below the surface of the earth.

Happy New Year!

Gladys Benson, the "Girl of a New Day," emerges from a huge globe in a New York ballroom to wish everyone the happiest kind of a New Year.

New Year's of 1863 Important Historically

One of the most important New Year's day receptions ever held in the White House was that of January 1, 1863, and it was significant because of a momentous event which took place immediately afterwards. Abraham Lincoln had drawn up his Emancipation Proclamation, had read it to his cabinet and had won their approval of this document which would commit the government irrevocably to the destruction of slavery. At noon William H. Seward, secretary of state, brought the proclamation to Lincoln for his signature.

"I have been shaking hands since nine o'clock this morning and my right hand is almost paralyzed," Lincoln told him. "If my name ever goes into history it will be for this act, and my whole soul is in it. If my hand trembles when I sign, all who examine the document hereafter will say: 'He hesitated.'" Saying that he signed—but those who look upon the signature on that historic document now say that it was written as boldly, as firmly and as unfalteringly as any ever signed "A. Lincoln."

New Year and Old

Oh, New Year—Leave the olden joys to me!
The sturdy faiths, the shining loyalty
Of friends the long and searching years have proved—
The glowing hearth fires and the books I loved!
All wonted kindnesses and welcoming—
All sure, hard trodden paths to which I cling!
With all the strange new blessedness
you bring.

Citizens Urged To Fight Squander Bug

Citizens of Chilton County are being urged by law enforcement officers to cooperate in ridding the county of what is described as a despicable tool of our enemies which has now become a distinct and dangerous menace to our war effort on the home front.

Chief Van Buren Gilbert, under whose direction the Highway Patrol is waging an unrelenting fight against this arch criminal, issued the following stern warning:

Seldom have I heard of such evil works as this low traitor is perpetrating. The entire Highway Patrol is on the aleart, and we are now making every effort to capture this character and put him in some safe place where he can no longer prey on innocent people. However, we must have the close cooperation of the citizens of this cunty if we are to accmplish our purpose.

The Chief declared further that the activities of this arch criminal were first called to his attention by J. C. Pattillo, chairman of the War Finance Committee in the County, and Mrs Hugh Jones, chairman of the Woman's Division, who also were able to furnish the following description of the enemy trained agent.

Accrding to Mr Pattillo and Mrs Jones his head is too small, and his stomach is too big. But the most amazing characteristic is his weird diet. He dines exclusively on dollar bills, garnished with silver coins. Therefore his victims are always people with money in their pockets and purses. On these people he works a mysterious spell, causing them to spend their cash for things they do not really need so that he can feast on their squandering. Because of this character trait, we call him the Squander Bug.

The chairman added that the Bug had been prevalent in England for some time, but that he had only recently managed to slither into the United States.

The English people have been most successful in their fight against the Squander Bug, Mrs Hugh Jones said, and we must follow their example if we are to save our home front from his assaults. If he has his way, every dime, quarter, half-dollar and dollar earned in this county will be spent unwisely to satisfy his craving for his favorite food, and this foolish spending will leave our county poverty-stricken.

Therefore the agencies of the law have decided that the most effective way to rid ourselves of this menace, this black sheep of the Gremlin family, is to starve him to death. If we stop needless spending, the Squander Bug will be deprived of his one item of food and will thus be doomed to a slow and torturous death.

PLEASANT GROVE

Our Sunday school was well attended Sunday. We will meet and call a pastor next Sunday. So come on folks and let's cooperate and carry on the Lord's work as He would have us carry on.

We were very glad indeed to have Bro. W. E. Robinson, our former pastor, to preach for us at both day and night services. They are always welcome at old Pleasant Grove. His text for the morning was taken from the first 13 verses of the 18th chapter of John. Both sermons were enjoyed by all who were present.

Mrs. Bessie Garner has returned from Montgomery where she was called to the bedside of her son, John Harold Garner. He is reported doing fine.

Mr. and Mrs. Croft Shoults have moved back to their old home. They have been living in Mobile.

Charlie Lawley, one of our boys in the Service in Louisiana, visited friends in this community recently.

Our Christmas program will be rendered on Friday night, December 24. Every one is cordially invited.

Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Latham and son from Birmingham and Mr. Billie Shoults from Mobile visited Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Latham recently.

Mrs. Rebba Hopper from Lawley spent Saturday night with her sister, Mrs. Charlie Smith.

Mrs Minnie Branch was carried to the Jefferson Hospital in Birmingham Monday. Mrs Branch has been in bad health for quiet a while and made the trip for an examination, returning the same day.

Miss Doris Bennett was the guest of her Aunt Miss Ada Bennett for the week-end.

Mrs J. W. McGinnis, Mrs C. O. Lawrence and Mrs K. A. Hardy spent one day last week in Montgomery.

Mr and Mrs Chester Mims and Mrs Steve Berry spent Sunday in Birmingham.

Sailor Writes Interesting Letter Home

Radioman, 2nd Class, Charlie Frank Smith, son of Mr and Mrs James W. Smith, Verbena, Route 1, writes an interesting letter this week to his parents. Mr and Mrs Smith have another son, James M. Smith, in the service of his country. He is in Sisily. Each of the boys have been in the Service for three years.

Dear Mother and Dad:

Received a V-Mail letter from you today and was glad to hear from home and know that all was well. Was sorry to hear in your last letter about Ruby Jim, she was a sweet wife, but things like that are happening all the time, everywhere, I guess in a different way. Tell diedge and the kids they have my sympathy and hope they will make the best of it.

This leaves me fine, so far, and I hope the war will soon end. The Japs seem to be slipping and the Allies are on the march to victory. I had a letter from Marshall a few weeks ago and he said he was having a swell time in Sicily now, had been to town to see three shows and then was going to the Red Cross to eat Ice cream. Gee! I wish I could get a break like that for once. He deserves it though, because in my opinion he has been through plenty, but, so have I.

I was glad to hear that you had the Radio going again, maybe you can keep up with the news, most of it is good, but in every case there is always some bad, which can be expected. About the moving situation, if you and Dad feel like the place is too large for you, don't hesitate to move because when I get back, anywhere that Mother and Dad are, and I can lay my tired head, will be home to me.

I am hoping that you, Dad and the boys and sis, all spend a happy Christmas together. Spend it as if Marsh and I were there too. I sure like to see you and Dad and all the folks, but my Country comes first in a time like this.

I can't think of a thing to write so will close. Hope to hear from you soon I made my Rate the first of November.

Love Always,
Charlie.

P.S. Was glad to hear that Nellie spent a day with you. Did she say she loved me?—C.

DEASON - LATHAM

Charles S. Deason and Maselle Latham were married November 2, 1943 in Baltimore, Md. Mrs Deason is the daughter of Mrs H. V. DuBois, Niota, Tenn., and the late Judge W. A. Latham of Athens, Tenn.

Mr Deason is the son of the late Judge and Mrs E. B. Deason of Clanton, Alabama.

Mrs Deason attended Goucher College, Baltimore, Md., received her B. S. degree from the U of A in 1939 where she belonged to Alphi Phi Sorority. Mr Deason attended U of Colorado and received his L. L. B. degree from the U of A in 1939. He belonged to Alpha Sigma Phi and Phi Alpha Delta Fraternities. He practiced law in Birmingham with Mullins and Deramus prior to his entry into armed services in July 1942.

Mrs Deason will be at home in Lathmore Farm, Niota, Tenn, while Mr Deason is away in the service.

ISABELLA

Miss Sara Matthews of Siluria spent the week end with Miss Mary Ann Oden.

Willie James Russell of the U. S. Army, who is stationed somewhere in Arkansas, is home on furlough.

Mr and Mrs Roy Smitherman and children of Bibb County visited Mr. and Mrs. Spann Jones Sunday.

Mrs. Fannie Morris of near Clanton is visiting relatives in this community.

Miss Eva Conway and Mrs. Jessie Wayne Sexton of Clanton visited parents Sunday.

Mrs. J. W. Evans is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Melton Wallace of Biringham.

There is quite a bit of sickness in the community. Mr. Tom Foxx's family have all been sick. Several other people of the community are sick. Mr. Bill Veazy got hurt in the log woods and is having to go on crutches.

Mrs. Annie DeShazo of Clanton received word the other week from her brother, Mr. Ben Mooney of Florida, saying that their mother had fallen and hurt herself, but the doctor didn't think there were any bones broken. Mrs. Mooney is well known in this community. She is the mother of David Mooney of this community.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to our many friends and neighbors for their kindness and help during the illness and death and burial of our mother and grandmother, Mrs Mattie Weldon. We also thank Mr White at Spigener Funeral Home. Also Rev Bice for the comforting words Not the least favor has been overlooked. May God Bless each one of you. Mrs Lela Short and children.

Have you visited your doctor this year.

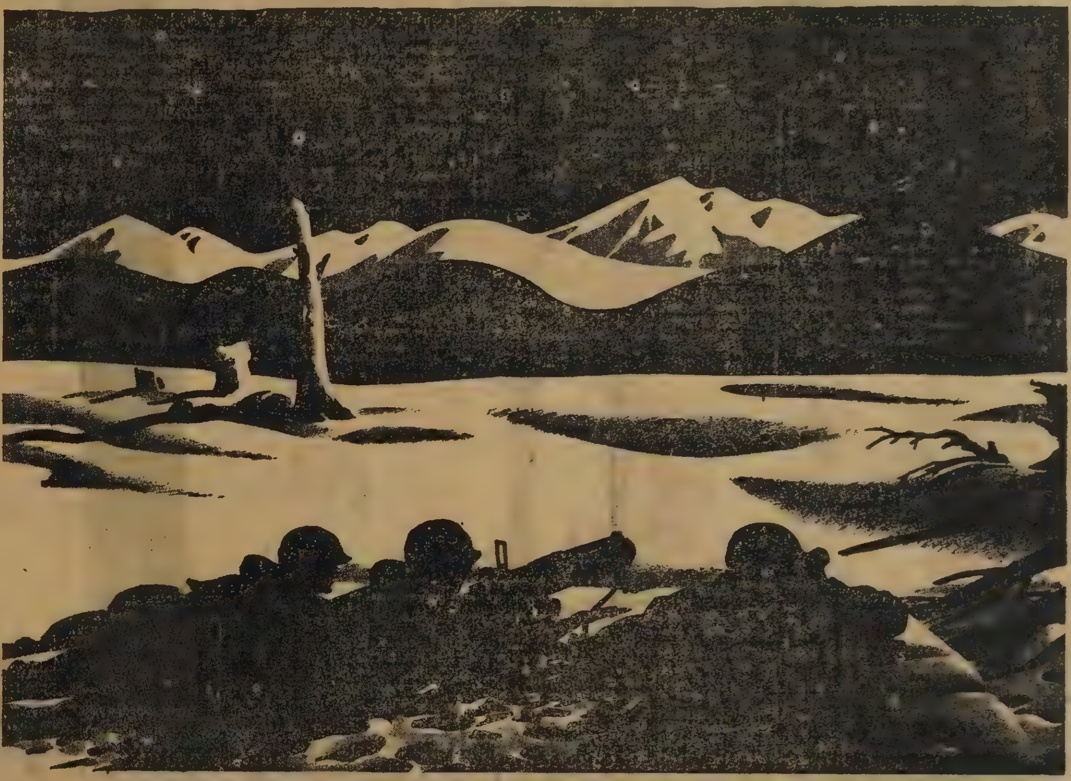
LUME XXI BUY DEFENSE BONDS CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1943. BUY DEFENSE STAMPS NUMBER 51



Because this Christmas will be so different

IN MILLIONS OF AMERICAN HEARTS, there will be little joy this Christmas, and little spirit of holiday celebration.

But there will be, we believe, a deep realization of the spiritual meaning of the Christmas day. There will be a realization of how blessed it would be—once again—to have "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men."

And there will be, in many hearts, a solemn resolve to punish those who have made a mockery of all the things that Christmas stands for . . . and so to bring back those things to a war-weary world.

As an expression of this kind of Christmas feeling, there are no finer or more meaningful gifts than War Bonds.

When you give War Bonds you are truly giving the "present with a future" . . . not only for the future of the one who receives your gift, but for the future of the world as well.

For by buying and giving War Bonds you will bring Victory so much closer and help save the lives of clean, decent Americans . . . that more of them may come back to enjoy Christmas as Christmas should be.

Think about this when you're deciding what to give to those you hold most dear.

Think about it . . . and give War Bonds.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Artillery Duels Soften Nazi Defenses, Smash at Enemy Armored Formations; Senate Studies Subsidy Compromise; New Law Tightens Draft Deferments

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Hallowed Ground—Pvt. Donald McQuarrie, Thompsonville, Conn., pays homage to U. S. and British war heroes buried in cemetery near Algiers, North Africa. Sentence on sign reads: "Their supreme sacrifice demands your respect . . ."

ITALY:
Artillery Booms

Artillery duels boomed in Italy, as U. S. and British commands softened up the Nazis' strong mountain defenses below Rome, and sought to smash the enemy's armored formations concentrated for counter-attacks.

Immediately south of Rome, Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark's U. S. Fifth army worked down the mountain slopes toward the Via Casilina, or highway, winding 80 miles through a valley to the Eternal City. Doughboys gained the heights in this sector after tedious action, braving mortar and machine gun fire to crawl up the jagged slopes and seep into the enemy's lines.

On the Adriatic coast to the east, the Germans used strong armor formations against Gen. Bernard Montgomery's Eighth army inching forward along a narrow bottleneck of land between the mountains and sea.

Italy's southern mountains were covered with snow as the battle raged.

DRAFT DEFERMENTS:
Tightened

In compliance with the new draft law passed by congress, appeal boards within the district where deferred men work took their cases under advisement.

In an effort to postpone the induction of fathers as long as possible by granting only the most necessary deferments, congress ruled that appeal boards within the district where employers requested deferment for men were in the best position to determine the labor conditions in the area.

As a result, appeal boards of local boards are only to review cases in which the applicant actually works within their district, or if no appeal board exists in the district where he is employed, such as outside the U. S.

CHEAP GOODS:
More Asked

Concerned over the decreasing stocks of low cost goods, Stabilization Director Fred Vinson ordered the Office of Price Administration to boost prices of such merchandise wherever necessary to stimulate production.

Vinson also directed the War Production board to furnish manufacturers with materials and facilities for raising output, and, if WPB thinks prices are too low, OPA must make adjustments.

Manufacturers whose current profits are not more than twice those in the 1935-'39 period will be permitted to increase prices, on the basis of a 2 per cent profit margin over the production cost.

SHIPYARDS:
Off Sundays

With U. S. shipyards now producing five cargo vessels a day, the maritime commission ordered them to take Sundays off, beginning January 1.

The commission's directive indicated a drop of 2½ million tons in estimated ship construction in 1944, but this would be in line with predictions of some officials of a reduction in needs.

Shipyards will produce 18,890,000 tons of cargo ships this year on a seven-day, 24-hour-day basis. Elimination of work on Sunday would decrease production costs, since overtime rates are paid.

CONGRESS:
Oil

With its advocates declaring it will stimulate production, the house passed and sent to the senate a bill ordering OPA to boost crude oil prices 35 cents to 74 cents a barrel above the average of $1.18 per barrel.

Under the bill, prices would be increased not less than 80 per cent or more than 100 per cent of parity for oil, as determined by the U. S. department of labor in its general wholesale commodity index. It is estimated the boost would add 1 cent a gallon to gasoline prices.

Subsidies

Senator Taft

With the bill barring subsidies passed by the house but tied up in the senate, the latter's banking committee appointed three men to study a possible compromise on the legislation, chiefly snarled because of objections to cutting down retail food prices through government payments to processors.

In the middle of the road on subsidies, Senator Robert Taft (Ohio) stood between pro-subsidy Senator Alben Barkley and anti-subsidy Senator John Bankhead on the three man subcommittee. Possibility of compromise loomed, since Taft favors limited rather than unlimited subsidies for controlling food costs.

Profits

Renegotiation of war contracts—that is, opening up old contracts so as to see whether original terms were too liberal—could be appealed to the U. S. court of claims under the senate finance committee's revision of a house provision. Further, the company could deduct federal taxes from earnings before the government could consider whether profits were too great.

Working on the house's new $2,140,000,000 tax bill, the same senate committee shaved the figure below $2,000,000,000 and indicated it would go through congress before the Christmas holidays. The committee voted to hold social security taxes to present rate of 1 per cent, and to require labor unions and farm co-operatives to file financial statements.

POUND JAPS:
In Pacific, China

As Allied forces punched at the Japs on Bougainville and New Guinea, fleets of Liberator bombers plastered the enemy's supply depots on New Britain island. Reception centers for Jap cargo shipping, these depots then have been used to load barges for distribution on the enemy's jungle fronts.

While U. S. and Aussie troops pounded forward in the South Pacific, U. S. army and navy airmen continued bombing the Japs' Marshall Islands in mid-Pacific. Like the recently conquered Gilberts, these islands flank the Allied supply line to Australasia, and are a threat to any movement westward.

In China, Jap troops began another of their many withdrawals after smashing at Chinese concentrations, this time in the rice-rich Changteh area below the great Yangtze river traffic artery.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

STEEL: While the war program will not take as much steel next year as it did in 1943, there will not be much more fabricated steel for civilian uses unless plants are released to make such products, industry executives stated in a recent conference. The demand for bars and structural steel has become easier, but sheets and plates are still "tight."

ARMY COLLEGES: The army does not intend to close down the Specialized Training program, the war department said, replying to newspaper reports that the program was about to be liquidated. Secretary Stimson said that while the program is now being reduced, it might later be expanded. At present 222 colleges and universities are training army men.

RUSSIA:
Major Battles

Two hard battles raged in southern Russia, with both sides slugging toe to toe west of the Ukrainian capital of Kiev, and the Reds fighting for positions inside the big Dnieper bend.

Throwing fresh reinforcements into the Kiev battle, Russia's Gen. Nickolas Vatutin counterattacked Germany's advancing forces, which picked up 40 miles after weeks of slow, bitter fighting.

Although Nazi Gen. Fritz von Mannstein's Kiev offensive appeared to relieve Russian pressure on Germany to the north, the Reds continued to launch large-scale attacks to the south, where they were fighting to secure bridgeheads across the Dnieper river to set up a springboard toward Rumania.

Success of Russian forces here would threaten the Nazi-held iron ore center of Krivoi Rog.

COTTONSEED:
Less Crushed

Cottonseed crushed in the period from August 1 to November 30 dipped to 1,884,351 tons, compared with 2,074,615 for the same period last year.

There was a similar drop in manufacture of cottonseed products, with 575,722,000 pounds of crude oil put out against 640,125,000 in 1942; 437,244,000 pounds of refined oil against 465,361,000; 865,355 tons of cake and meal against 912,999; 439,483 tons of hulls against 500,583; and 560,000 running bales of linters, against 618,143.

As of November 30, stocks of the various cottonseed products on hand were substantially below those of a year ago.

SILVER:
Off to War

More than 775 million ounces of the U. S.'s huge hoard of 2 billion, 700 million ounces of silver have gone to war, for use in war plants and weapons. In addition, 3 million ounces have been lend-leased to Britain and Australia for making coin.

Most of the silver was lent by the treasury to the government's defense plant corporation for war work, and much of this is expected to be recovered. However, another 23 million ounces was sold outright to industry.

Based on 1940 figures, the U. S. holds about half of the world's supply of silver, compared with its ownership of approximately two-thirds of the world's gold stocks. Gold holdings amount to 22 billion dollars.

However, holdings have been dwindling at a steady rate, with over 200 million dollars shipped out to China as part of a huge loan, and many South American countries building up large balances because of sales to the U. S.

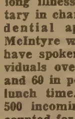
SOLDIERS' DEBTS:
Can't Sue Co-Signers

Basing his decision on an act passed in 1940, Federal Judge Philip Sullivan sitting in Chicago, Ill., ruled that creditors could not sue co-signers of notes of debtors now in the service.

Judge Sullivan's decision countered an amendment to the act, which permitted creditors to get co-signers to waive immunity if the debtor entered the services.

Said Judge Sullivan: The creditor loses none of his rights, since arrangements have been made for payment of the debt three months after a serviceman is discharged, and, further, action against co-signers might distress soldiers and sailors as much as a suit against themselves.

White House—



Mrs. FDR

Vetoing a suggestion of the District of Columbia officials, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt asked that the annual Christmas tree ceremony on the White House grounds be held this year. But heeding the commissioners' proposal that the District's already overloaded transportation facilities be spared and electricity saved, Mrs. FDR requested capital residents walk to the scene, and also that no lights be used for decoration.

One day, 500 incoming telephone calls were counted for him.

SECRET WEAPON

Further details on Germany's new "secret weapon," the rocket gun, have leaked out through Switzerland. According to this information from "diplomatic sources," the rocket is a shell 45 feet long, weighing 12 tons. It is launched by a steam catapult. As soon as it gets into the air, the rocket begins to propel itself. Thirty feet of the shell is filled by the apparatus and fuel needed for motion. The other 15 feet contains the explosive charge, said to be compressed nitric acid.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

GINGER ROGERS' new picture, "Tender Comrade," may not bring her an Academy award, as "Kitty Foyle" did, but RKO is doing its best to swing that coveted honor her way. "Tender Comrade" will be shown at two theaters in Los Angeles on December 29, though its national release is not scheduled till March. This bit of maneuvering makes it eligible for an Oscar this year. Ginger plays a war bride who takes a job in a plane factory while her soldier husband is at the battle-front.

The management of Washington, D. C.'s Constitution Hall is regarding Alec Templeton with something akin to awe. Dinah Shore's picture career, coming hard on the heels of her sensational success in radio, is moving so fast that her films can't keep up with her. Her first, "Thank Your Lucky Stars," is now showing throughout the country, her second will be released in February, just as she's starting her fourth—meanwhile her popularity on the air increases daily.

It looks as if "No Time for Love" is going to be remembered along with the other delightful comedies that people laugh over years after they've seen them. And the heroine of those films is likely to be either Jean Arthur or Claudette Colbert. This time it's Claudette, playing a photographer for a smart fashion magazine, falling in love with a husky lad (Fred MacMurray) who's a sand hog.

Jane Withers, who's 17, has her first important straight dramatic role in 10 years in Samuel Goldwyn's "The North Star." Though she's made 30 pictures since her screen debut, and starred in most of them, she had to pass a strict test, then another one, before she was given her role; she's played in so many comedies that Goldwyn wasn't sure she could do it.

IF A chair is all legs, angles and curves in the wrong places, a slip cover in the right colors and cut to bring out graceful lines and cover defects, will give any dining room chair set a new personality.

That was the treatment given a set of old chairs like the one shown here. A two-piece frock was planned to repeat tones in the wall paper of the room in which the chairs were to be used. The bold stripes of the putty tan, green and wine red material gave just the right contrast with the flowered pattern on the wall. Narrow green fringe was used for edging and the sketch shows how the two pieces of the slip cover were made.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY O'HARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin, given an opportunity to choose any yearling colt on his family's Wyoming ranch, picks the filly of a "loco" mare named Rocket. His choice merely adds to his father's anger, which is already aroused by the fact that Ken has failed his school work and has shown no sense of responsibility. It was Ken's mother who finally persuaded Captain McLaughlin that having the colt might be good for Ken, and the change in him has proved she was right. But Flicka is badly hurt trying to jump the corral fence. Even Gus, the foreman, says she is loco like her mother. But Ken refuses to be convinced.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XI

Nell found her gardening gloves and her trowel and shears and went about clearing the broken flowers and leaves out of the boxes.

When she had done what she could to put the boxes and flower borders in order, she went to the kitchen, built up the fire and began to mix the cookies.

Now the oven was ready, and when she had nearly finished mixing the dough, Ken came into the kitchen. He leaned against the table, his elbows propped, his chin in his hand. A little red bandana was tied around his neck. His soft brown hair was in wild disorder.

"If Flicka's really loco, Mother—"

His appearance shocked Nell. The look in his eyes was direct, almost staring—nothing like Ken. He was looking at her now, to drag facts from her.

"Well, Kennie?"

"If she's loco?"

"It's a bad lookout for her, then, isn't it?"

There was a long silence. He struggled.

Nell looked at him, rolling the dough thinner and thinner.

In his eyes she saw a question. He was asking if it wouldn't come true, if he wanted it hard enough; and his face was strained in anguish.

Right now, she thought, narrowing her eyes against the tears that came so quickly, stinging them, right now—to let him know, once for all, that wanting and wishing can't buck a fact.

"Perhaps she isn't loco, dear, we don't know yet for sure. But if she is, Ken," her words came slowly, "wanting won't change it."

She went on rolling out the dough, cutting the cookies, putting them on tin sheets in the hot oven. But she had really gone away with Ken, up the Hill, into the woods, face down on the pine needles, hands clawing at the ground, salt tears burning—

The insistent clanging of the supper bell roused him, and he sat up, startled. How could it ever be supper time already?

He turned in the opposite direction and looked to Flicka's place near the three pine trees in the Calf Pasture. She was lying down, not very far from where he had put the tub of water and the feed box.

He ran down the Hill, across the green and into the kitchen and washed his face and hands and slicked his hair.

All his agony was back. Flicka—why, she might be dead out there—lying dead instead of just asleep.

After supper he hurried out to see her. She was standing up again, and this time barely moved away at all at his approach. He sat down before her on the grass, clasped his arms around his knees, and made his vows to her.

"I didn't mean it, Flicka . . . you're the one I want . . . I won't leave you again . . . never, Flicka. I don't want those other colts. They're nothing, just simply nothing at all. And you're my responsibility. That's what Dad said. I pulled you in from the range where you were free and wild and could take care of yourself, and I've made you so you can't; so you're my responsibility to take care of."

Flicka stood looking at him. Her large eyes were dull and not fully opened. All her hair was very untidy. Her legs were not quite straight under her, but a little splayed out. But her ears were forward, she seemed to be listening, to be paying attention, and she was not frightened.

Nell, with a dark blue silk kimono belted around her slender waist, was brushing her hair for the night. It lay loose upon her shoulders in a soft, wavy, tan mass; and as she brushed, she walked around the room, putting clothes away in the closet, opening the bed, bringing out Rob's pajamas, and talked to him about Ken.

"I wish you'd be nicer to him, Rob."

"Why? He's gone against everything I told him to do."

"I think he's suffering deeply."

"Suffering! So am I. And what's it all for?"

Rob, seated in the low arm chair, reached out a booted foot and dragged the boot-jack close. He planted one foot upon it, and set the other heel in the notch, continuing, "If he was going to have a horse to break and train as Howard did Highboy, it would have taught him something, made a man of him. But what can he do with this poor little filly? Not a damned thing. He'll sit in that pasture and watch her all summer, and neglect his work. Howard has been walking his colts for him for two days." He pulled hard against the jack, and drew one foot out of the long worn, brown boot.

"But Rob, you don't see! It's already done—much of it. Ken is changed already. He's learning, even though he can't train her."

"Learning what? Learning to sit on his fanny under a pine tree?"

Rob leaned back in his chair, and out of his dark face, his vivid, burning blue eyes looked at her without softening. "Learning that it pays to be bull-headed?"

"No! He's learning to face facts. And that's the whole thing, isn't it?"

"Face facts! I don't see any sign of it," he said harshly. "And the kid looks like heck. If this goes on all summer he'll be in fine shape to go back to school in September."

Nell felt rebuffed and got up and went about in silence.

Rob stood up, picked up his boots, kicked the boot-jack back into the corner, went over to Nell, and with the boots hanging in one hand, put the other arm around her.

"Do you think she's — — loco?"

"Love me?" he asked.

"I knew you were going to say that!" she exclaimed angrily. "When you've just made me mad, that isn't any time to say things like that."

His one arm squeezed and shook her a little. "Love me?" he repeated.

"I don't feel the least it loving."

"Love me?"

The one deep dimple in Nell's right cheek appeared in spite of herself, and she turned her face away. "Oh, yes, then, have it your own way!"

She made her voice insulting, but it was an irritating habit of Rob's to be satisfied with outward obedience, as if, once that was granted, by his own persistence and violence, he could drive people the rest of the way.

"That's all right then," he said; and with his hard bullet head, pressed her face around until he could kiss her mouth.

"But Rob—Ken—"

"Don't talk about him," he roared, dropping his arm. "I've had all I can stand of him." He went out the room, slammed the door, and stamped down the hall to the bathroom.

Nell climbed into bed, turned up the kerosene lamp that stood on the bedside table, took her book from beside it, and began to read. Her dimple had disappeared and her lips were very set and prim.

Next day Rob planned to drive to Sargent's ranch to make final arrangements about shipping the four polo ponies. Nell was to go with him, and they would be away all day.

When, at breakfast, Howard and Ken heard about it, Ken said, "Would you have time, Dad, to come out before you go and look at Flicka and see how you think she is? She looks better, and she's eating some oats."

"No, I wouldn't," roared McLaughlin. "I don't want to see her or to think about her."

There was a heavy silence. Everyone ate rapidly, eyes down. Presently McLaughlin's gaze swung over again toward his younger son and noted the circles under the child's eyes.

"Did you go swimming with Howard yesterday?" he asked.

"No, sir."

"Why not?"

"I didn't want to leave Flicka."

"Now I've had enough of this! Howard does your work, and you're all set to spend the summer under the pine trees watching Flicka. Do you suppose that's good for you? What sort of shape will you be in when it's time to go back to school? This is the hottest weather we'll have all summer. Your swim is good for you. You take a dip with Howard today, and do your own work too."

"Yes, sir."

Presently Howard said, "Remember what you said, Dad? That Flicka would stay alone and not go near the other horses? You were right. She stays alone in the corner by the fence, or under the pines. Why does she? I thought horses liked company."

McLaughlin made no reply, and Kennie came bravely out with the answer, "Because she's a Lone Wolf."

McLaughlin turned to Ken, surprised, and the boy looked back at his father. Rarely had he been able to face those hard eyes for so long a minute. He did it now for Flicka. If she was a Lone Wolf, then he was a Lone Wolf too. He had to fight her battles. He was with her, the same as her—and it gave him courage.

Matching his stare with Ken's, Rob said to himself, "Well, I'll be darned. The little son-of-a-gun. Nell was right—facing facts—he's taking it on the chin."

McLaughlin turned his head away and asked for another piece of toast. Nell jumped up and turned the piece of homemade bread which was lying on the edge of the coal stove. It was toasted a delicate brown. She brought it, hot and crusty, on the tin turner, and slid it on to the edge of Rob's plate.

Rob was thoughtful as he took a slab of the fresh unsalted butter and spread it on his toast.

"Ken," he said presently, "that isn't what I meant when I said Flicka would keep to herself. It's because she's sick. A wounded or sick animal always stays alone."

Ken's dark blue eyes, confiding and full of hope, clung to his father's face, and McLaughlin felt an emotion within his breast.

"Oh," said the boy. He would have liked to ask if Flicka was not a Lone Wolf after all, but it seemed wiser not to press his father's sudden kindness.

After a moment McLaughlin said, "Has she salt, Ken?"

Ken's face showed such consternation that it was comical. Both Rob and Nell turned away their heads. "No," said Ken, guiltily, staring at his father.

"I've got a piece of iodized salt up in the stable," said McLaughlin frowning.

"I won't be ready to leave right away, Rob," put in Nell. "If you want to go out to Flicka—I've a few things to do—"

"All right, Ken," said his father. "I'll bring the salt out to her, and give her the once-over."

Joy colored Ken's face and Nell emitted a faint breath of relief.

Ken rushed out to Flicka. He had already seen her that morning. Soon after sunrise he had presented himself, and standing before her, said, "I am Ken. Do you know me? Are you getting to like me?"

Now he ran out to her again and said, "Dad's coming to look at you, Flicka. Now you be a good girl and don't run away."

As if she had understood him, Flicka stood quietly at a little distance when McLaughlin came out and set the chunk of iodized salt down near the pine tree. Then he took out his pipe and lit it, and examined the filly, while Ken watched his father to read the verdict on his face.

Finally McLaughlin said, "She's so sick and hang-dog—it's hard to tell about her now."

"Do you think she's—loco?"

Rob growled, "I would have sworn it, by the way she's behaved ever since she was born, but as a matter of fact, we've never seen her except when she was scared out of her wits."

"Dad—"

"Well?"

"When you said she'd been so frightened, always, when we'd seen her—did you mean that maybe she isn't loco?"

Before answering, Rob eyed the filly thoughtfully and drew several long puffs of smoke through his pipe. "She's got a very intelligent face," he said at last. "Much better than Rocket's. Fine, delicate mouth, lovely eyes set far apart, that light tracing of veins all over. But we can't really know until we see how she responds to training."

"How can I train her? What shall I begin on?"

"You can't do a thing with her now. All you can do is win her confidence. That's the most important thing anyway. There's one thing that will help you, Ken."

"What?"

"Her sickness and misery. When you take away everything, freedom, friends, home, habits, happiness, from a living creature, almost life itself, it will turn, in sheer need and desperation, to the one thing that is left. And that's you."

"Me." Ken had never felt so important.

"Yes. You are her whole world. Make her like it."

Crib Traditional Christmas Mark in Southern Europe

The Christmas Crib is as traditionally a part of Christmas in southern Europe as is the Christmas tree in the northern countries. In France, it is the Creche—or Cradle; in Italy, the Praesepe—or Manger; in Germany, Krippe or Crib; in Czechoslovakia, Jeslicky, and in Spain, the Nacimiento—or Nativity Scene.

From the earliest years of Christianity priests and religious leaders interpreted the Bible by literal representation of plays, tableaux, etc., because of the lack of books and widespread inability to read. However, the first Crib was set up in 1223 by St. Francis Assisi.

St. Francis received special permission from the Pope to erect his "Praesepe" in the village of Greccio, near Assisi. This first Crib was an immediate sensation. Set up in a stable, it was complete with live animals, etc. Greccio became famous for its Crib and miraculous cures were attributed to the provender of the animals.

One of the most famous Cribs in the world was built by the Capuchin monks, the shrine of the Madonna delle Grazie, situated in a grotto and surrounded by galleries of Sardinian cork giving a mountainous effect. Wooden figures, carved by the noted artists Gaggini and Maragliani, were arranged to move in procession to the Manger. Other celebrated Cribs include the one at Caserta, Italy, where the most famous Bambino in the world is annually laid in the Manger amid traditional pomp and solemnity, and the Krippe at Oberammergau, where the figure of the Christ-Child has been a possession of the Lange family for many generations.

During the Renaissance the presentation of the Crib became increasingly elaborate. The figures were more realistic and richly dressed, the devotional shrines and processions becoming highly ornate pageants.

Later, Naples was famed as the city of Cribs. Every church had its "Praesepe" and families erected evergreen shrines on the flat rooftops of their dwellings, the background being dominated by Vesuvius and the beautiful starlit Neopolitan sky.

Charming Yule Legend Tells Story Of Village's First Christmas Candle

At Christmas, millions of little candles suddenly spring into being all over it seems—on Christmas trees, on so many of our Christmas cards, in the shop windows and in our homes. In these days of fluorescent and neon lighting the candles often take on the form of a 25-watt bulb—nevertheless, they definitely contribute just the right touch of reverence and gaiety to the holiday season.

True, the custom of lighting candles in remembrance of the Star of Bethlehem claims deep religious significance. But Christmas has also come to be a children's festival, and wherever there are children there is legend weaving.

And there is a charming legend that long, long ago in Austria, there lived an old shoemaker in a little cottage on the edge of a village. Although this humble man had very little, whether for himself or to share with others, his goodness of heart was such that each evening he placed in his window a lighted candle as a sign of welcome to weary travelers who might be asking shelter.

War came to the village and famine, yet the little light never wavered. Each night it took its place to send forth its beam as a message of cheer to forlorn wayfarers.

It was wintertime and the suffering was acute. Great hardships came. Sons died in battle. Animals starved for want of grain. Yet always, somehow the old shoemaker suffered less than others. It was almost as though there were a splendid charm upon him. At last the peasants gathered together and said: "Surely there is something different about him that he is spared. What does he do that we do not do? Perhaps it is his little candle. Let us, too, place lights in our windows."

And the day the peasants took counsel was the day before Christmas, and the first night the candles were set to burn in all the windows was Christmas Eve.

When morning came it was as though a miracle had happened. A soft mantle of snow covered the village like a gentle blessing, but there was something more—a new air of peace and hope. And before the sun had cast its first bright gleam on the spire of the village church there came a messenger riding to bring the great, glad news of peace. The church bells chimed and the people knelt in prayer and there was a feeling of Christmas glory such as there had not been in many years.

The peasants were awed. "It was the candles," they whispered. "They have guided the Christ Child to our doorsteps. We must never again fail to light candles on His Birthday."

From such a long ago beginning this beautiful custom has become very dear to our hearts. So dear in fact that year after year we light our candles on Christmas Eve, and year after year, the holiday greeting cards we exchange with our friends and loved ones carry the proud motif of the Christmas candle. And this year the candles will still burn bright, their light sending forth hope and cheer for the peaceful world that soon must come.

There are scores of other legends surrounding the widespread use of candles at Christmas time—and all of them have a simple beauty which appeals to children and adults alike. The stories are told in every language.

'Yule' Is Ancient Word

Yule, as another name for the Christmas season, is of great antiquity and its actual derivation is still a matter of dispute. Some philologists hold to the theory that the term is derived from the Anglo-Saxon "hweol" (wheel). They believe the wheel is related to the erroneous primitive conception of the circular path described by the sun during its annual journey around the earth

Irish Light Candle to Guide Christ Child

An old Irish legend tells that sometimes on Christmas eve Mary and the Christ Child wander abroad seeking shelter. Fearful lest they might seek in vain, as they did in Bethlehem long ago, a lighted candle is placed in every window to guide them to a place of refuge. These are left burning through the night, gleaming into the darkness, guiding any wanderer.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Water used in a rubber water bottle should never have a temperature higher than 140 degrees Fahrenheit. Boiling water ages rubber prematurely. There should be no air in the bottle when in use if long service is to be expected.

The Amazon Valley, once the world's chief source of rubber, is expected to produce about 35,000 tons of crude in 1943, during which year 50,000 laborers will have been established in the rubber forests. Their contribution will be but a small but important part of our nation's rubber requirements.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

Let the first thing we do be to wish all of our friends a Merry, Merry Christmas. May your every wish come true, and may you have enough money left from your Christmas shopping to buy another War Bond. For Peace on Earth—you know.

We received a dandy booklet this week from Jack Lawrence. He is stationed at Miami, Fla. The booklet, or paper, is titled the "Chaser". It is most interesting, and after we finished reading it from kiver-to-kiver, we took it home and the family thoroughly enjoyed it. It contains 26 pages and is full of interesting matter about the "boys" at Miami.

It was one of mother's busiest days. Her small son, who had been playing outside, came in with his pants torn.

"You go right in, the other room, remove your pants, and mend them yourself," she ordered. Several minutes later she went into the room to find how he was getting along. The torn pants were lying on a chair. The door to the cellar, usually closed, was open, so she called down loudly and stearnly, "are you running around down there without your pants on?" A deep voice answered, "No mam, lady. I'm just reading the light meter."

Looks like our merchants wont have much left to wind up the old year with. One merchant was afraid there wouldn't even be an old used sock. You just go into a store now and ask for the tenth item on your list and you will save time. They haven't got the first nine anyhow.

Those are the ones you need most and the ones that everyone else is hunting too.

Our good friend J. T. King, manager at the V. J. Elmore Store, has gained national recognition for his War Bond and War Chest work, in a Magazine published by the chain stores. When the January issue is released we will get a copy of it and pass it on to you. Now, just in case J. T. wants to know where we learn all these things—a little bird told us.

Oh deer, oh deer. We just learned that R. C. Williams ,R. W. Lowe, Millard Lancaster and perhaps others are planning another deer hunt next week. It ain't fair to the deer. On the last hunt R. C. was the lucky guy and bagged the only deer killed. This time, maybe the Goddess of Fortune, will smile on Reubin or Millard—who knows—who can tell? However we'll know by New Years, and if theres a deer tail to be told, we'll tell it.

Patsy Huddleston came near being badly burned last Sunday evening when the Methodist Church gave it's Christmas Pageant. While standing out front, awaiting their turn to go in, somehow she got the lighted candle in her flimsy clothing, and it spread quickly to her angel wings. But for some boys who were present and on their toes, no telling what might have happened. Besides being thankful that Patsy wasn't hurt seriously, this is to tell you, those little boys who thought fast enough to rip the paper wings off the little girl smothering the flames with their robes deserve all the credit for preventing what could have been a major catastrophe in Clanton this Christmas. Your appreciation and thanks should go out to them.

One hundred and twenty years ago Clement Clarke Moore's jolly poem, "A Visit from St. Nicholas," first appeared. Each year since then it has contributed to the joy of Christmas. We want to say that if we were able to gather up all this joy and wrap it up in one big package it would hardly represent our wishes for your Christmas happiness this season of 1943.

Marvin Durbin, County FSA Supervisor, announced today that they had been allotted funds with which to make 5-year rehabilitation loans to eligible farmers in Chilton County to finance their 1944 crops. These loans include the things needed by farmers in doing their part in the war effort such as the purchase of livestock, equipment, feed, seed, fertilizer, household necessities, and the payments of old debts. These loans are repayable over a period of 5 years at 5 per cent interest. Applications are now available and can be obtained from the FSA office located up-stairs over the Chilton County News.

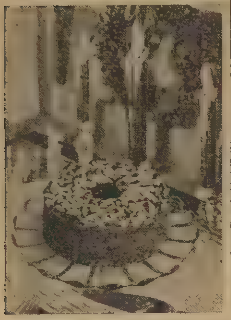
Puddings and Spice And All Things Nice Make Xmas Merry



Traditional holiday cookies and puddings can still appear in this year's celebrations. Make them simpler by using recipes in today's column.

Eyes bright and shining, hearts full of the Christmas spirit and wondrous expectation—you're not going to disappoint these even this holiday season!

There are many foods to please during holiday time and in former years our only worry was to have the time to make all the puddings and cakes we wanted. Now, we have not only the time element to consider, but also the problem of rationed goods, prices, and time, too. For these reasons, today's recipes have been designed to fit all these requirements. Look them over, homemakers, and you'll find they quite fill the bill:

Christmas Pudding.
(Serves 12)

½ cup sugar
½ cup butter or margarine
1 egg
1 cup molasses
1 cup sour milk
1 teaspoon soda, dissolved in sour milk
3 cups flour
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup chopped raisins
½ cup currants or seedless raisins
¼ cup ground citron
½ cup candied cherries
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream sugar and butter or margarine. Add egg, slightly beaten. Add spices to flour. Add molasses, milk and flour alternately, a little at a time, blending well. Add fruit and vanilla. Pour into two greased 1-quart pudding molds. Cover and steam for 3 hours. Serve with hard or foamy sauce.

If you want to splurge a bit and can afford it, here is an old-fashioned, real English plum pudding:

English Plum Pudding.
(Serves 12)

¾ cup sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon mace
½ pound raisins, chopped
½ pound dried currants, chopped
¼ pound citron, chopped
⅛ pound lemon peel, chopped
⅛ pound orange peel, chopped
⅛ pound blanched almonds, chopped
½ cup fine bread crumbs
¾ cup hot milk
½ pound brown sugar
5 eggs, separated
½ pound suet, chopped
¼ cup fruit juice (any kind)
½ glass currant jelly

Sift flour, salt, soda and spices together; stir in fruit and almonds. Soften crumbs in milk 10 minutes. Beat sugar into beaten egg yolks; add suet and crumbs; stir into fruit-flour mixture. Add fruit juice and jelly and mix well. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into greased mold; cover tightly and steam for 3½ hours.

Steamed Cranberry Pudding.
(Serves 6)

1 cup sifted flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup brown sugar
½ cup bread crumbs
⅔ cup finely chopped suet
1 cup chopped cranberries
1 egg
⅓ cup milk or water

Mix ingredients in order given. Turn into a greased mold, cover with waxed paper and steam for 2 hours.

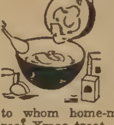
Foamy Cranberry Sauce.
(Makes 1½ cups)

4 tablespoons butter
1 cup confectioners' sugar
1 egg, separated
¼ cup sweetened cranberry juice
Grated rind of 1 orange

Cream butter and sugar together. Add beaten egg yolk, cranberry juice and orange rind. Fold in stiffly beaten egg white just before serving.

Hard Sauce.
(Makes ¾ cup)

⅓ cup butter
1 cup confectioners' sugar
¾ teaspoon vanilla
1 tablespoon cream



Cream butter, add sugar, gradually, beating until light and fluffy. When thoroughly combined, add flavoring and cream. Chill until cold but not hard.

Coffee, ginger, nutmeg, fresh fruit or jam may be substituted for vanilla and cream.

To those of you to whom home-made candy is a real Xmas treat, you will find this recipe has the real holiday touch.

It will be a gay Christmas if you give out candies full of fruits and nuts. Home-wrapped packages bring cheery greetings to friends and neighbors.

Christmas Butter Fudge.
(Makes 1½ pounds)

2 cups sugar
1 cup milk
¼ cup butter
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup candied cherries, cut small
⅛ cup blanched pistachios

Put milk, butter and salt into a large saucepan and bring to boiling point, stirring constantly until sugar is dissolved. Cook at moderate rate (236 to 237 degrees F.), stirring only occasionally, until candy will form a soft ball when dropped in cold water. Remove from heat immediately and set pan in cold water; do not stir or beat until cooled to lukewarm. Add vanilla and beat until candy becomes thick and creamy and loses its shine. When on point of "setting" add cherries and nuts and fold in quickly. Pour candy in buttered square pan and let stand at room temperature until firm. Cut in squares.

Baked Orange Garnish.
8 oranges or tangerines
1 cup fruit juice

Cut peeling of fruit into 6 sections, cutting down about 1½ inches. Turn petal-like sections of peeling under, removing part of white membrane. Place on a baking dish. Pour juice over fruit and bake in a hot (400-degree) oven for about 10 minutes. Use with watercress or parsley as a garnish for ham or turkey.

The Score Card: Crop estimates jumped on white potatoes making more available for civilian use. You are urged to buy them by bushel instead of by the pound.

Watch for changes in point and price values. They are an indication of how you can guide your food budget. Figs have gone up in price, grapes down. Prunes and raisins are back on the ration list because there are no longer large stocks of these available. Crabmeat is up in price as are some of the cheeses.

Guide your use of milk carefully as your dealer is now rationed. This is being tried because it would be difficult to ration milk to the consumer by points.

Save every bit of fat that you can and turn it in to your butcher. A tablespoon a day will help to bring your boy back sooner.

GOD'S GREAT LOVE AND HIS GIFT

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 2:1-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—John 3:16.

Christmas brings us all back to the Christ-child in Bethlehem, and we are reminded anew of our Lord's coming into the world to be the Redeemer. For the babe of Bethlehem is the Christ of the cross, of the resurrection, and the coming King.

"God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son" in what was the world's greatest love gift. But the Word does not stop there. We must do something about God's gift. We read, "That whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16).

The story of the coming of the Wise Men to seek the One who had been "born King of the Jews" reveals several attitudes toward Christ which find their counterpart in our day.

I. Expectancy (vv. 1, 2).

These men of another race were familiar with the Jewish Scriptures and knew that the Messiah was to come. Many others, including the religious leaders of the Jews, had the same information. But these men of the East differed in that they looked for His coming with keen desire and expectancy.

One wonders if we have not become so familiar with the story of Christmas that we, like the Jews, have a dead knowledge without expectant faith. We need to awaken and look to God for new grace and strength for these days.

II. Fear (vv. 3, 7, 8, 12).

Herod was a capable, ruthless, ungodly ruler who feared only that someone would take his power from him. He was so determined that this should not happen, that he killed many members of his own family for whom he otherwise had apparent affection.

When he heard that Jesus, who was the real King of the Jews, had been born, he feared, and laid crafty plans to destroy Him. God saw to it that his purpose was not carried out.

There are those of our time who fear the coming of Jesus, because they will not have Him to rule over their lives. They love their selfish ways, and their sinful pleasures; and when they face the question of what they will do with Jesus (and face it they must!), they have only fear and hatred in their hearts.

III. Indifference (vv. 4-6).

When the Wise Men came to Jerusalem to inquire where the Christ was to be born, they received an immediate answer—in Bethlehem. That was clearly foretold in Micah 5:2. The priests and scribes knew all about it, but their knowledge did not move them to action. They told the Magi where to go, but they did not go themselves.

How sad it is to see the indifference of our day to the claims of Christ. There are many who think that simply because they do not hate the church, or the Bible, or do not fight against it, they are guiltless. How wrong they are will appear to them if they will read Matthew 11:23, 24 and recall that the sin of Capernaum was only indifference.

Wake up, careless one, and change your indifference to love and faith, lest you too be eternally lost.

IV. Joy (vv. 9, 10).

These earnest seekers for the Christ-child were full of joy even before they saw Him. "When they saw the star," and knew that God was indeed leading them, their hearts leaped within them as "they rejoiced with exceeding great joy."

Christmas is the time when there should be real joy in our hearts. It is not enough to be "merry" or "happy." In fact, many thousands could not possibly find anything to be happy about this year.

Happiness depends on what happens, but joy is the gift of God to His children, which is so deep down in their beings that circumstances cannot change it. We may have real, satisfying Christmas joy.

V. Worship (v. 11).

When they saw Christ, they worshiped. Have we been as wise as they were? Then they made gifts, showing that their worship had that reality which made them ready to sacrifice for Him. Have we done anything this Christmas to show our joy and gratitude for the redemption we have in Christ?

The writer of these lines (which will reach you just before Christmas) wants to wish you and yours a very blessed Christmas, and to assure you that he is praying for you that regardless of circumstances the joy of the Lord may fill your soul. Christ has come. He is with us now by faith. He will come again to reign. The Child of Bethlehem's manger is our Great Saviour and Glorious King. Rejoice in Him!

'Victory Volunteers' Proved Satisfactory Farm-Hands

Most of 700,000 Young People Made Good, Quickly Learning Agricultural Skills, And Working Hard and Long.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

World War II has taught the world that it is one thing to raise an army and another thing to feed it—feed its mouths and feed its guns.

It didn't take the United States long after Pearl Harbor to realize that it was easy enough to find enough sailors and soldiers if you didn't have to worry about finding the civilians to take care of them.

At present, 10 men out of every 100 are deferred from military service because industry needs them; 18 out of every 100 because the farmers have to have them. Thirty-six out of every 100 men now in the armed forces were working in shops or factories in 1940. Twenty-three out of every 100 were on farms three years ago.

Industry has charged that congress has been kindlier to the farmers when it came to deferring their help than it has been to them. However that may be, you won't hear any farmers complaining about having too much help. One thing, however, according to the reports that have come into the department of agriculture, the farmers are not complaining on one score that a lot of them thought they were going to have to complain about—that is, the help they get from the Victory Farm Volunteers of the U. S. Crop corps.

Many farmers who came to scoff remained to pray for more of the same.

Not all of the young folks who worked on farms this summer were perfect. It is estimated that there may have been some 700,000 of these young people, half were provided through the Federal Extension service of the War Food administration, as many more probably found jobs for themselves. Under the leadership of the State Extension service and with the active support of the schools, the youth-serving agencies, civic organizations and farm leaders, these Victory Farm Volunteers were assembled. Most of them made good.

Their story makes an interesting chapter in the history of American youth.

A Huge Task

It was no little job to launch the project. Forty-three state farm labor supervisors and some 5,000 county farm labor assistants, under the guidance of the county extension agents, worked out the plans and procedure based on the local needs. They worked with state, county and often local labor committees.

Of course, training was necessary. The boys and girls were carefully selected and many specially trained and supervised, and the farmers themselves learned that they could train better if they had a little training in the art of teaching themselves. This was provided.

Most of the young workers lived at home and were transported to the farms. This was done in school buses, trucks or cars. Teachers, ministers, youth leaders, acting as supervisors, often accompanied the workers right into the fields.

In some places, boys lived in camps, but 50,000 boys and girls lived right with the families where they worked and many soon became a part of the family, joining its activities, church, grange meetings, dances, picnics. Some liked the life so well, especially those from the big cities, that they stayed right through the winter, attending the local schools.

Of course it was natural that the farmers were skeptical at first at the idea of letting these strange kids overrun their places. But the majority changed their minds when they found how well the experiment worked. The young folks couldn't rival a trained farm worker, but some were able to do much of the work as well, and in some cases, even better. Many farmers arranged to keep the same workers the next year.

I talked to one farmer who took on an utterly green city boy. It was late summer when I saw them both. They were going to part and I can tell you both were pretty blue. School time had come and the boy's parents thought he better come home. He told me that he was going to be a farmer when he grew up and I believe nothing will stop him.

I saw a letter from a Crop corps city girl, very able at expressing herself. I want to quote one paragraph: "I have felt," she wrote, "unutterable satisfaction pervade this new 'me' as I squeezed, pulled and cajoled the last squirt of rich white milk from a reluctant mountain of a Guernsey cow . . . I am learning to love this new life and am surer than ever that I have chosen well in deciding to make it my own."

The Misfits

One of the great troubles of the world are the misfits, the folks who are in the wrong job. There are a lot of newspaper men who ought to be barbers and a lot of barbers who might have been better sailors, a lot of farmers who ought to be in business. There are many people who have an inborn love of the country that never gets a chance to come out—they don't even recognize they have it. This summer, many of these young folks discovered themselves—realized that the country was where they belonged!

I can well understand the remark of one of these volunteers, who probably in his normal lifetime would never have had a chance to acquire the self-confidence behind a desk or at a bench, that he felt when he learned to drive a team of horses.

"I felt that I was the most capable person in the world," he said, "when I could finally drive a tedder through the hay."

It will be hard to keep him and a lot of his ilk down at the shop after he's seen the farm.

Winter Traffic Hazards

The war department is concerned over the annual December peak in auto accidents, and Robert P. Patterson, undersecretary of war, and Lieut. Robert E. Raleigh, director of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, have teamed up to try to stop them.

Seven valuable tips, based on National Safety council research, on how to escape traffic tieups, skidwrecks, lost time and road blockades have been offered:

(1) Reduce speeds on snow and ice. It takes 3 to 11 times normal distance to stop on snow or ice. Repair old tire chains.

(2) Protect visibility. Check defroster, windshield wipers, headlights and keep windshield clean. You must see a hazard to avoid it.

(3) Use anti-skid chains. Tire chains reduce braking distances 40 to 50 per cent and provide traction on snow or ice.

(4) Don't crowd traffic. When roads are slippery, allow three to six car lengths for every 10 m.p.h. because snow and ice increase braking distances 3 to 11 times over those required on dry pavement. Slipperiness varies, glare ice at thawing temperatures being twice as slippery as dry ice near zero.

(5) Anticipate mistakes. Drive so that you are prepared for any emergency under prevailing conditions. Anticipate mistakes of pedestrians and other drivers.

(6) Signal your intentions. In turning or stopping on hard-packed snow or ice, remember other drivers need more time and distance to adjust themselves to your moves. Give them a chance. Some may have neglected chains and have insufficient traction.

(7) Mechanics are scarce and your vehicle may have to last for the duration. Essential transportation is vital to victory. An ounce of prevention is now worth ten pounds of cure.

Better Rural Roads

The National Highway Users conference calls my attention to a bill to create within the Federal Works agency a Rural Local Roads administration, independent of the Public Roads administration, to co-operate with the states and their local subdivisions in the construction of rural local roads. It is proposed in S. 1498 by Senator Stewart of Tennessee.

The bill would authorize appropriations of $1,125,000,000 by the federal government to be made available at the rate of $375,000,000 a year for each of the three years immediately following the end of the war for construction of all-weather rural local roads.

First Choice in the Service

If you've ever noticed the top of a Marine Officer's visor cap, you've seen on it something you won't find on any other cap worn in Uncle Sam's service—a neat "X" of looped braid.

There's a story back of that braided "X", and it goes back more than 150 years, to a time shortly after the U. S. Marines were first organized.

In those days of sailing ships, naval battles often ended in close hand-to-hand fighting, as the crew of one ship tried to board the other—and Marines, of course, were in the thick of the fight. Some were in the boarding party, and some were posted in the rigging to fire down on the enemy. It was because of those men firing from high on the masts that Marine officers—whose uniforms from above resembled the enemy's — fixed "X'S" on their hats.

In other words, that braid meant to the Marines in the rigging, "X marks the spot—not to shoot at!"

Since those days, the "X" on the cap has become a standard part of the Marines' uniform. Another piece of "standard equipment" you'll notice among Marines these days—whether they're wearing dress uniform or combat dungarees—is the American cigarettes they carry with them wherever they go. In all those news pictures you've seen of Uncle Sam's fighting men, snapped as they are relaxing while "off duty," you'll find that in most cases they will be smoking a cigarette. And what brand do they prefer? Well, actual sales records show that the favorite with men in the Marines—as in the Navy—is Camel. Likewise, according to the sales records, Camels are first choice with men in the Army.

Fighting men who have come back from jungles, deserts, and mountains—wherever Uncle Sam's forces are stationed — give one pretty good reason for this choice. They say that Camels stay fresh —that out in the jungles of Guadalcanal, for instance, the Camels they get are actually just as fresh-tasting and full-flavored as the ones they used to get back home.

Of course, the millions of men in training camps here at home want their cigarettes just as much as soldiers. Your dealer now has Camels in special Christmas cartons, gay and colorful—and he will be glad to wrap them for you for mailing.—Adv.

The world's largest mobile gun is the U. S. army's 240-mm. howitzer, which is towed by a truck, carrying some of its parts, at speeds up to 40 miles an hour, according to Collier's. Primarily designed to destroy fortifications, it has a 27-foot barrel and shoots a 360-pound projectile more than 14 miles.

England's largest mobile gun fires a 100-pound shell only eight miles, and Germany's counterpart, also using a 100-pound shell, has a range of only seven miles.

IMPORTANT THAT CONSUMERS CONSERVE FOOD CONTAINERS

It will be a mistake for farmers to use crates, boxes, baskets, hampers, and cases for kindling wood.

There is a shortage of wood and labor for the manufacture of new containers and special arrangements have been made with dealers, railroads, supply firms, and producers, to make special efforts for recovery and concentration of these supplies. With this shortage for making containers, they should not go to the kindling pile until they are no longer usable.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and gratitude to our many friends and neighbors for their kindness and help in our recent bereavement the sudden death of our husband and father. Especially do we thank Martin & Sons for their kind work. We appreciate the many beautiful floral offerings. May God bless you all.—Mrs Clarence M. Jones and family.

FIVE CASES MEASLES

Only five cases of measles were reported in Chilton County last year. Six of the 67 counties reported no cases at all. They were Butler, Colbert, Jackson, Lawrence, Perry and Washington.

NOW IS THE TIME TO PLANT TREES AND SHRUBS

Early winter months is a good time to plant trees, shrubs, evergreens and spring blooming perennials.

By setting these plants now a good root system will be established by the spring growing season.

In setting, holes 12 inches wider and 6 incehs deeper than the root system of the plants should be dug. Leave all roots posible on the plants. Adjust plants in holes, add top soil around rots, settle with water, fill with lose soil, mulch and prune.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Putty smears are easily removed from window panes with household ammonia.

The night before wash-day, soak clothe pins in soapy water and rinse to prevent dusty or grimy streaks on clothes.

To make sheets last longer, change the hemmed ends each morning when making the bed. In this way each end gets equal wear.

Hang starched clothes to dry immediately to prevent mould. Iron dark-colored starched garments on the wrong side.

Stains come out more easily if dish towels are washed daily. Clean dishes are no longer clean after a soiled dish towel is used to dry them.

Air pillows at least once a week to keep feathers or other filling soft and fluffy. Remove pillowcases and place pillows on chairs before open windows

In cool or cold weather sprinkled clothes may be left overnight, but in hot weather mildew may develop if the clothes are left more than two or three hours.

When washing dishes change the suds often. Dirty water won't make clean dishes. Rinse dishes immediately with hot water to remove the soapy film.

FIRE PREVENTION URGED DURING HOLIDAY SEASON

Fatal fires are almost a daily occurrence in Alabama and the Christmas holidays offer no exception.

For that reason, families are being advised by Mamie Whistnant, extension specialist in home management, to take every precaution against accidents which might turn a happy season into one of sorrow. She offers these safety rules:

Never decorate your Christmas tree with lighted candles. Use strings of electric lights, but select only those sets approved by fire underwriters.

Do not allow cotton, paper, or other inflammable objects on your Christmas tree.

If you put candles in your window be sure the curtains are tied well away from the flames.

If you give the children electric toys for Christmas, inspect them to see that the cords and connections are kept in good condition.

Finally, mix common sense precautions with your Christmas cheer, and keep the holidays safe.

PREPARE CHRISTMAS DINNER OF HOME GROWN PRODUCTS

The Christmas dinner this year for the family or guest should be planned from the home grown food supply in the old traditional manner or dressed up as surprises.

This is the advice of Marie Amos, extension nutritionist, who suggests that Alabama housewives select one food from each of the following for Christmas dinner:

Cocktail: Tomato juice or fruit juice. Meat: Baked ham, roast turkey goose, duck or chicken with dressing. Potatoes: Either Irish or sweet potatoes baked, scalloped or creamed. One yellow or green vegetable and one other vegetable such as scalloped turnip greens or spinich, baked squash, candied carrots, creamed onions, English peas, green peas, green beans or beets.

Salad: Slaw, tomato aspic, carrot salad, beet salad, pear salad, with homemade cheese and nuts, frozen fruit salad from home canned fruits or home canned pickles. Bread: Home baked rolls with butter. Beverage: Coffee, tea, cocoa, milk drinks. Dessert: A slice of your favorite cake with sauce, pudding, or boiled custard.

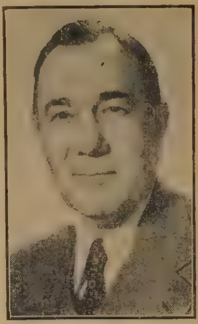
Simpson To Run For U. S. Senate

"Bring Government Back Home" Will Be Legislative Leader's Campaign Call To Alabama Citizens



JAMES A. SIMPSON

James A. Simpson, president protem of the Alabama State Senate and leader in the legislature for the past sixteen years, will be a candidate in the next May Democratic primary for the U. S. Senate seat now held by Senator Lister Hill.

In a statement making known his intention to announce his candidacy for the U. S. Senate in the near future, Mr. Simpson assailed encroachment of federal bureaucracy on local affairs and declared that "the time has come to bring government back home." Mr. Simpson's statement follows:

"The first aim of every American is to win the war.

"Our President and Commander-in-Chief does have and must continue to have the utmost support of every citizen to this end.

"The second aim of every American who cherishes Democracy must be the preservation of free government.

"To this end we must unite and call a halt to the wave of socialism and bureaucracy which is engulfing the home front.

"A new kind of government—foreign to democratic principles—is making us subservient to a swarm of bureaucrats, none of whom is elected by or responsible to the people. It is subjecting our local and intimate affairs to the dictates of directives promulgated by no legislature. It is hindering our war effort. It is fomenting class bitterness and hatred. By constant nagging, it is recklessly upsetting time-proved race relationships in the South, with injury to both white and colored people.

"The time has come to bring government back home. That cannot be done by rubber stamping measures which increase the scope and powers of bureaucracy. Those who helped create these alien conditions cannot be trusted to remedy them. Through many years I have worked in our state government for the right of our citizens to regulate their own affairs in their own way. Believing as I do that these rights are worth fighting to preserve, I shall at the proper time announce my candidacy in next May's primary for the United States Senate seat now held by Senator Hill."

James Simpson was born on January 28, 1890 on the farm of his parents, Alexander D. and Altie Head Simpson, at McEwen, Tenn. He attended public schools in Tennessee and Arkansas and graduated in law at Vanderbilt University in 1912, when he came to Birmingham and began the practice of law. Mr. Simpson entered public life in the legislature of 1927 and served one term in the House and three terms as Senator from Jefferson County. During one term in the House and two terms in the Senate he was chairman of the Judiciary Committee and during his third Senate term was chairman of the Finance and Taxation Committee. He introduced the first bill in the legislature for a constitutional amendment to abolish pardon and parole abuses. He is the author of the Alabama Social Security laws of 1935, of the present state law establishing the Merit System in public employment, the Teacher Tenure Employment Act and many other progressive governmental measures. He has been a long time advocate of the principles of local self government.

Mr. Simpson's wife was formerly Florence Evans of Montgomery. He has three children, Joseph Simpson, an Ensign in the U. S. Navy and now on a destroyer in the southwest Pacific; and James and Henry Simpson, ages 14 and 9.

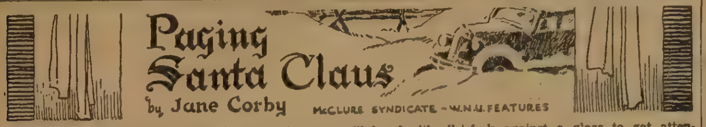
Paging Santa Claus

by Jane Corby

McCLURE SYNDICATE—W.N.U. FEATURES



Paul Harris, manager of the Devon Arms, gives Jan Payson the lead in the hotel floor show when he finds that William Anthony Deverest, rich and popular, knows her. But Jan thinks he is Tony Williams, the chauffeur, and he is afraid to tell her the truth because he knows she hates Deverest. She breaks with Tony believing him dishonest. Dr. Curtis, who has cured her invalid sister, asks Jan to marry him, just before he goes to his northern camp. When she learns that Deverest is to announce his engagement at a Christmas party at the hotel she decides to go to Dr. Curtis' camp. The bus takes Jan north and runs into a bad snowstorm. Tony picks up her trail.

CHAPTER VI

"I'm sure it wasn't there," said Paul. "Dora certainly would have mentioned it to me."

"Go back and ask her," Tony urged. "We've got to know!"

When he rejoined Tony, Paul found that young man almost beside himself with impatience.

"Dora hasn't seen the cat—"

"Then what are we waiting for?" cried Tony, hustling Paul down the stairs and out into his car.

"Let you off at the hotel," said Tony between clenched teeth. "I am going to make a round of the railroad stations."

He had about given up when he discovered a man who remembered seeing a girl, in a green coat and carrying a basket with some sort of animal inside, buying a bus ticket. Tony's informant decided that it must have been a northbound bus.

At every bus station he stopped and questioned the attendant. Generally somebody remembered the girl in the green coat. But the answer to the one question that mattered was always the same. No—the girl hadn't got off at this station.

The telephone rang.

Everybody straightened as the bus driver took down the receiver.

"Yeah? . . . Good! . . . Okay . . . I get it."

He hung up the receiver and started for the door. "The bridge is safe. Come on, folks. Step on it. Got to make up for lost time."

The bus with a sudden lurch slid sideways; the bride screamed. Instinctively Jan felt for the arm of the seat with one hand and braced herself as she reached for Pussypuff's slipping basket with the other.

The bus seemed to hang suspended for a second as if undecided whether or not to turn over. Then, slowly, so that Jan felt she could almost see the wheels sink gently into the snow covered ditch, the bus tilted to one side and lay there, panting.

Surprisingly enough the lights of the village did not seem to come any closer. Tony tried desperately to see if a road led off from the main highway, which, evidently, ran some distance from the town, but the soft unbroken snow effectively concealed any such road, even if there were one.

The little wayside stand before which he finally drew up did not seem firm enough to withstand the fury of the wind that rushed at him as he opened the door.

"You'd better shut that door, mister," the young man tending the counter said brusquely, "it's one freezing night!"

"Do you suppose that the buses try to get through on a night like this?"

"Oh, sure. Nothing stops them."

"Make it short," Tony interrupted. "Just tell me if the last bus went through."

"Sure, about two hours ago. But, as I was sayin'—"

"Two hours ago?"

"Yeah. They was late on account of the bridge bein' unsafe—"

"They had to go over a bridge that wasn't safe?"

"I'm tryin' to tell you. The bridge got fixed."

Tony gave a sigh of relief.

"But they never did get to the next station. Had a call from Moose River an hour or so ago. Must have been some sort of accident."

"You fool!" Tony shouted. "Why didn't you tell me there'd been an accident when I first came in? How badly were they hurt?"

"Say, mister," the young man said aggrievedly, "I'm no receiving set! Just an accident, that's all they told me. Somewheres along the road . . ."

But the last words were lost on Tony as he slammed out of the station and flung himself into the car. The next minute, careless of drifting snow, he was driving headlong around hairpin turns and down the steep grades of the mountain road.

A moan? Singing!

The gratitude that enveloped Tony made him realize how miserably sure he had been that he would come upon a silent and frightening scene. Of course Jan, brave as she was, would sing in the face of disaster. But as the chorus swelled louder and he heard many voices joined with hers, he was definitely reassured.

"O come, all ye faithful, Joyful and triumphant—"

As the beautiful old hymn rolled forth toward him Tony felt that he wanted to sing, too.

Were all runaways as glad to be back home as she was? Jan wondered. Even runaways who had accomplished nothing by their escapades, who were still faced with all the problems they had tried to escape? Dora was still thin almost to transparency, but she sat up really straight in her wheel chair and her blue eyes were radiant when she announced that Paul was going to take her to the party.

Now that she knew Dora was going, however, there was no help for it; Jan had to go too. But she lingered so over brushing Dora's curls and fastening a sprig of holly at one side, that Dora protested.

There was a soft knock on the sitting room door.

"From Mr. Deverest," said the boy who handed her a square white box.

Jan undid the ribbon after glancing at the name, "Miss Jan Payson," on the outside of the box. Inside was a mass of orchids.

Jan looked at the enclosed card. There was a mistake—the box was from Tony. She read:

"Chin up! Christmas is coming. Tony."

The roof garden had been transformed into a regular dream of a Christmas party. In the center of the dance floor stood a Christmas tree, so tall that the electric star at the top seemed very far away. It was decorated as a Christmas tree should be decorated, Paul pointed out firmly.

"I had no idea Paul could be so funny!" gasped Jan, choking with laughter after a particularly hilarious introduction of a 'snowflake dance." Dora leaned forward, her cheeks suddenly pink.

"You look as if it is a happy something," said Jan.

"It is. Paul and I—" Dora hesitated, and began again. "I—Paul—oh, Jan, he loves me! He wants to marry me and take care of me always!"

"Dora, darling," Jan jumped up and threw her arms around her sister, "I'm so glad!"

Jan jumped when someone behind her said suddenly, "Here I am!" Before she could turn, Tony had slipped into the vacant place by her side.

"Oh, Tony!" she cried. Then, lowering her voice, "Is Mr. Deverest here?"

"Yes. But don't you worry about him. I fixed that up all right."

"Shall I tell him?" Dora broke in, and without waiting for Jan's nod she made the announcement of her engagement.

"Dora," Tony began, "I'm in a spot. I want to propose to a girl and I've never done it before. Now, as an engaged girl who has experienced a proposal, I want your advice. Maybe you'll listen to what I've prepared, and see how it sounds to you. I know it won't be so good as Paul's, but let me rehearse it anyway."

Jan, turning swiftly, opened her mouth to speak, but Dora forestalled her.

"Go ahead, Tony," she invited. "I'll be glad to tell you what I can to improve your technique."

"All right—here goes." Tony drew a deep breath. "Now we'll pretend I'm talking to the girl. I begin something like this—

" 'D-darling, I l-love you . . .' "

"Good!" Dora interrupted, clapping her hands.

"You think that'll do? Then," Tony went on, "I thought I might say 'Will you marry me?' "

"Jan—will you?"

"Yes, Tony," said Jan.

"Well," Tony defended himself, "I told you I didn't know how to propose."

Paul dodged over to their table, and after a while he tapped his fork against a glass to get attention.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he announced, "there's no need to ask if you're having a good time. And I'm sure you want to thank the man responsible for it. May I present your host, William Anthony Deverest!"

Tony bowed and grinned while they cheered him to the echo.

"I can't begin to thank you for this reception," said Tony when he could make himself heard. "But I want to tell you that you'd better cut it short, because each person is to get a present from that tree and there are a lot of people here."

He made his way to the center of the floor, and at a signal from Paul, several of the hotel employees hovering in the doorway rushed forward to help him. Twenty-four Santa Clauses from the orchestra lined up behind them and as each present was detached from the tree Tony read aloud the name on the gift and then shouted:

"Paging Santa Claus! Another gift for special delivery."

At that point a Santa Claus would detach himself from the group, seize the gift and go in search of the recipient. Soon the room was full of red figures bearing gifts and as Tony reached each name Jack and his friends took up the cry:

"Paging Santa Claus!"

Under cover of all the excitement, Jan, very white, leaned close to Paul.

"You've made a terrible mistake!" she whispered. "And it's all my fault. That's Mr. Deverest's chauffeur, Tony Williams. I introduced him here as Mr. Deverest because you seemed to think . . ."

"What do you mean Deverest's chauffeur?" Paul interrupted, genuinely astonished. "I know Tony Deverest—I knew his chauffeur, too—the last one he had. He fired him about a month ago. That's Tony Deverest all right, up there at the Christmas tree. Listen!"

Tony's voice came clearly to Jan's doubting ears:

"There's just one present left on the tree and I'm going to call the one for whom it is intended up here to receive it. Will Miss Jan Payson please come forward?"

Jan sat motionless.

"Go on, Jan," whispered Dora. "Don't you hear Tony calling you?"

As in a dream, Jan rose and made her way through the tables. The blue dress rippled softly about her and her face, beautiful and serious, was turned toward Tony. When she reached the tree he took her hand and guided it to a small white package almost hidden in the green branches.

"Open it," he said softly, and she obeyed. The outer wrappings removed, there was disclosed a tiny jeweler's box.

"Paul called you William Anthony Deverest," she murmured, bewildered.

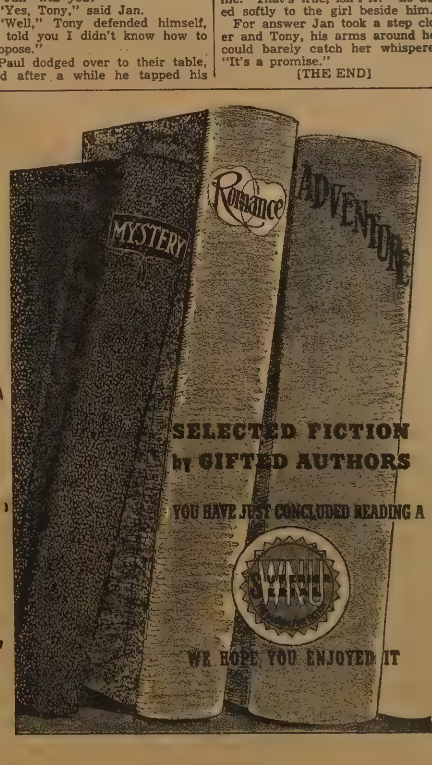
"Paul was right," said Tony. "And you've promised to be Mrs. William Anthony Deverest."

He took the box from her and out of it he took a ring. Jan scarcely looked at it as Tony slipped it on her finger. Her eyes were on his face and she did not move them even when he turned to the audience and said, his voice full of pride and tenderness:

"I am happy to tell you that Miss Jan Payson has promised to marry me. That's true, isn't it?" he added softly to the girl beside him.

For answer Jan took a step closer and Tony, his arms around her, could barely catch her whispered, "It's a promise."

[THE END]



Hopeful

The fact that these two recruits are in a naval training station doesn't prevent them from hanging up their socks the night before Christmas. Their optimism is evident.

Candy Recipes To S-t-r-e-t-c-h Ration Points

Here are some recipes for Christmas candies designed to save your precious ration points for sugar, butter, chocolate and other scarce items:

Christmas Fruit Balls.

1 lb. dried pitted prunes
½ lb. apricots or dates
¼ cup candied cherries

Grind these fruits in the chopper, blend well, and add;

1 teaspoon grated orange rind
½ cup chopped nuts
2 tablespoons orange juice

Form the mixture into balls and roll in coconut.

Orange Fruit Confections.

1 cup orange pulp and juice
½ lemon, pulp and juice
½ cup of honey

Boil together for ten minutes until clear and sirupy, then add to the following chopped fruits;

½ cup candied orange peel
½ cup dried apricots or dates
½ cup figs or raisins
½ cup nuts

After mixing thoroughly, form into balls or cubes, and roll in chopped nuts or coconut.

Marshmallow Prunes.

½ lb. marshmallows
3 tablespoons milk

Heat in a double boiler until about half melted. Remove from stove and fold over and over, until fluffy. Then take three pounds of prunes and dip each prune into the mixture, then roll in chopped nuts.

Wrist Watches Preferred By Marines as Yule Gifts

Watches, especially wrist watches, are the Christmas gift most desired by marines on foreign duty in the Pacific.

The marine corps announced this conclusion on the basis of a midsummer survey conducted by commanders of its units in the Pacific to determine what marines would like friends and relatives to send them for Christmas. However, in order to reach their destinations on time, the packages should have been shipped to naval and marine personnel overseas during the period from September 15 to November 1.

Other gifts mentioned by the marines, in the order of their preference, included pen and pencil sets, toilet kits or sets, hunting knives, pocket-size books, candy or cakes in metal containers, radios, bill-folds, wallets, cigarette lighters, stationery, sunglasses, house and bath slippers, photographs, identification bracelets, rings, pipes, sewing kits, playing cards and cribbage sets.

Happy Day

Even school days are happy days for this smiling youngster. Christmas parties and the traditional tree are helping to make the pre-vacation period a carefree time.

War-Time Gift

One of the most exciting gifts is a box of airplane model patterns and several rolls of luminous paper. The idea is this—cut out the models from the pattern sheet on the luminous paper, paste them on the ceiling of your small son's bedroom, smuggle in an electric flashlight, turn off lights and let the "spotter" identify the various models. Some shine with an eerie green light, others with a deep blue; all glimmer in the dark!

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

Car thieves surely did ruin Pat amilton's pretty Ford the night be- e Christmas Eve. He got the car ck, or what was left of it, alright, d the Highway Patrol got the men; t you should see the car. The ieves were heading out toward Bir- ingham when they run into the back f another car headed the same way. omeone told us that they knocked e car about fifty yards.. Yep, they're arding around at the County Board- g House.

Around town Monday morning we ver hope to see a more desolate set stores. Everyone was trying to get of the Christmas atmosphere and a Spring cleaning job at the same e. Of course it's going to be mighty e and pretty when they finish. But nday morning the stores looked ex- ly like we felt—a wreck.

Let's not forget that the Fourth r Loan Drive starts within about weeks. The Senate voted down Bill sponsored by Senator Bank- ad for the Government to pay for d advertising so it is going to be to the local merchants again to advertise the Drive. The Treas- y Department has already sent us advertising lay-outs and if you e to come by and look them over d pick out the one you wish t nsor, you may do so. Now get in . Please don't crowd; there's one everybody.

t certainly doesn't look like a short- of calendars this year. We hav- checked up since the morning l, but we dare say the year is run- g neck and neck with last year. ht now we have big ones, little s, ugly ones and pretty ones, just every year. We've noticed only difference—the art work is much re serious than before. There are er undressed women and more pa- ic pictures and land-scape scenes.

ur sincere apologies to Gene Gore Gore Plumbing for not getting Christmas adv. in last week's is- He got his order in early enough, we failed to make a note of it it slipped our mind, naturally. anyway, Gene wants all his friends now that he did wish them a Mer- Christmas and does wish them a py New Year. For more about New Year wish, you'll find it in issue.

id you hear about the WAC that ted Major Horton Walkers house stmas morning? Some Christmas ent, and she's going to make a soldier, too. Only thing, she's a light, just weighed about 7 lbs. named her Carolyn. The Major Wednesday morning for his new t. Both the mother and daughter doing fine, thank you.

e think that the mothers of the nger set that hang out at the stores and cafes' of our town ld give each of their teen- agers w lessons in politeness. Of course cannot be said of all of them, we dare say the small percentage could hardly be noticed. Some e places we have been are prac- y taken over by this crowd and "kids" are not so bad, but their ners certainly are. Nothing can a child disliked so heartily as rude or impolite to its elders. are well aware of the fact that must have some place to get to- er. We are sure that the man- ent doesn't mind their fun, but they are rude to the other cus- rs they are only inviting them- to be asked to stay away from places.

Mayor Stapp To Head County Paralysis Appeal This Year

Mayor C. E. Stapp will head the Chilton County committee for the eleventh annual appeal for funds to fight infantile paralysis it was announced this week.

President Roosevelt when endorsing the appeal this year said, "If it had not been for the American people's wholehearted support of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, our war effort might well have suffered immeasurably. The threat of this baffling, unconquered disease still hangs ominously over our vital war effort. There can be no armistice with the Crippler.

'Our offensive against this epidemic foe must be developed to the fullest measure if we would defeat this disease which threatens the future of America's children."

The campaign for funds, following precedent, will be climaxed with celebrations of the President's birthday on January 30, when the people of the United States are invited and urged to help in the fight against infantile paralysis by contributing to the funds needed for carrying on this work.

One-half of all funds subscribed in this county will be retained by the local chapter of the National Foundation for the exclusive use of persons with infantile paralysis here who need help. The remaining half will go to the National Foundation in New York to be used in research and epidemic aid.

Plans for this county's campaign will be announced at an early date, the chairman said, urging now the support of each citizen in the county in making this fund drive the most outstanding ever conducted.

DOLPHUS FOSHEE BACK AT HOME PORT

Dolphus C. Foshee, 24, seaman first class, USNR, of Clanton, has just returned to New Orleans from six months sea duty during which he visited ports in Australia, India, South and Central America.

Seaman Foshee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Foshee of Clanton Route 2, is attached to the U. S. Naval armed guard center at New Orleans.

During his six months at sea he was a member of a Naval gun crew assigned to an American merchant vessel. He joined the Navy last February 18. He was employed by the DuPont Powder Company prior to entering the service.

LETTER FROM ICELAND

Iceland—Dec. 9, 1943.

Dear Mr. Tucker:

Just received my first copies of The Chilton County News. Sure enjoy getting it, and when I read it I pass it on to a Sgt. L. O. Williams also of Clanton. We get a kick out of reading the hometown paper.

I am in Iceland and doing fine, but will be glad when I can come back to good old Chilton County, and my wife and boys, and all the good old friends.

Yu can put this in the paper and tell all hello, and anybody that cares to write, my address is—Sgt. Hollis C. Thornton, ASN 14022453, Co. F, 29th Inf., APO 860, in care Postmaster, New York, N. Y.

VOLUNTEERED WITH THE U. S. MARINE CORPS

Volunteering for duty with the U. S. Marine Corps Women's Reserve, Theresa B. Holmes (Bertelle to you), of Clanton, will depart for basic training at New River, N. C., January 11, along with other members of the special Anniversary Platoon, composed of young Alabama women, who will train together at the Marines' big North Carolina base.

Twenty-two strong, the all-state group was recruited in connection with observance of the Marine Corps' 168th anniversary and on November 10 was sworn in at a mass ceremony by Major Davis A. Holladay, commanding officer of the Birmingham procurement district.

Thorsby Organizes A Civic Club

Civic-minded citizens of Thorsby, led by a small group of energetic leaders, met on Thursday, December 9th, and organized what they plan to call the "Thorsby Civic Club." A. C. Hester, director of The Trussville Housing Project, Trussville, Ala., and one who has had a great deal of experience in civic club work, started the meeting off with a stimulating talk on the community need for such an organization, which was followed by individual comment from the group representing 33 Thorsby homes. Enthusiasm ran high, terminating in the election of the following officers: J. A Ogburn, President; Lloyd Howard, Vice-President; Mrs. Anna Phalin, Secretary; and Rascoe Maddox, Treasurer.

The organization proposes to constantly strive to make Thorsby a better community in which to live, and to collectively plan for it's future.

The next meeting date was set for January 4th, at which time a Constitution and By-Laws will be voted upon and further organization of the Club continued.

Great things for Thorsby are expected to come out of this organization and all citizens who are interested in the welfare of their community are urged to become its active members at once. Lloyd Howard presided over the meeting.—J. H. Kincaid, Publicity Manager.

Woodward will bring a message. Lunch.

In the afternoon Mrs Earl Eddington of Birmingham will lead the conference, followed with special music by Rev Paul Oden. The installation of officers will include: Mrs Reid Mullins, president, and Mrs Arthur Willis, secretary.

PFC. JULIUS BONE SAYS HE IS TOKYO BOUND

Pfc. Julius E. Bone, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Bone of Billingsley, has just finished his training at the Radio Air School in Illinois and is now qualifined for duty as a member of a fighting bomber crew. He writes that he is "headed for Toykio."

DRIVERS STRIKE ON GREYHOUND LINES

Chilton County was without Bus service last Wednesday when the drivers for Greyhound Bus Lines went out on strike at midnight Tuesday. For several hours passenger service was tied up all over the South, on this line. However the strike was short - lived and Thursday saw the schedules resumed.

OREN WYATT IS HOME FROM THE NAVY

The many friends of W. Oren Wyatt, formerly of the U. S. Navy, will be glad to learn that he is home and doing much better.

Mr. Wyatt spent 18 months in Naval Service, but acquired Rheumatic Fever, acute, while on the Coast in California the last five months of his enlistment. This later disabled him to merit a medical survey discharge from the Navy.

Mr and Mrs W. C. Billingsley and Miss Bertha Sykes of Birmingham, spent Christmas day with the formers parents here. Mr W. J. Billingsley is still improving and his friends hope to see him out again soon.

K. G. Baker, manager, Black Belt Experiment Station, Marion Junction Alabama, has been selected as the man-of-the-year by the Progressive Farmer magizine of Birmingham.

BACK FROM SOUTH PACIFIC

MAJ. EALON S. HOCUTT

Maj. Ealon S. Hocutt, from the South Pacific, and Capt. A. M. Hocutt, who has been on active duty at Kiska, surprised Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Hocutt and their families by getting home on furlough for the Christmas holidays. They are all spending the holidays with their parents in Auburn, Ala.

PILOT CLUB HAS CHRISTMAS TREE PARTY

Carrying out their usual program the Pilot Club met at the home of Faye Smith with Irma Jackson as co-hostess for their annual Christmas rogram and tree meeting was opened by the Club President. A very touching invocation was given by the Chaplain, imploring that we might have more love instead of so much hate.

Christmas carols were sung. Several interesting contests were enjoyed. Santa Claus gave each member a inexpensive gift from the tree, each one having to guess who gave them heir gift. Refreshments suggestive o the holidays were served.

SPURGEON WILLIAMS AWARDED CHINA SERVICE DECORATION

Spurgeon F. Williams, Gunner's Mate Second Class, USN, of Clanton, Alabama, Route 2, has arrived back in the States aboard the destroyer to which he is attached.

Gunner's Mate Williams's vessel has been engaged in escort duty around Recife and Trinidad. She has also seen convoy service to Gibraltar in the Caribean, the South Pacific and in the region of the Philippines.

Gunner's Mate Williams is a native of Thorsby, Ala., and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Williams of Clanton.

He enlisted in the Navy at Norfolk, Va., on May 18, 1938, and has been in action in the Battle of Bali Straits and the Battle of Java Sea. He has been awarded the China Service decoration.

PLEASANT GROVE

We did'nt have Sunday School Sunday due to so much sickness and damp weather. Nearly everyone was sick with the flu. Bro. Paul Oden will preach for us every Third Sunday until we can all get together and are able to call a pastor. He showed the Life of Christ Sunday night which was enjoyed by all present.

The Christmas program that was rendered last Thursday night was enjoyed by all who were present. We have new window lights in the church and we will paint them as soon as the weather permits.

Miss Nell Shoults has returned to Centerville after having spent the holidays with her aunt Mrs Gladys Latham.

Mrs Bessie Garner had as her guests during the holidays her sister Mrs Newton Eunice and family. Her daughter and son, Novice, Willie and John H. Garner, all from Montgomery.

Miss Blanche Hicks is spending a few days in Maplesville with Miss Mary Lee Mitchell.

Miss Lucy Walker spent Thursday with Mrs W. E. Robinson of Maplesville.

Mrs Sam Shoults spent Thursday in Maplesville with her brother W. H. Walker.

Rev. Wells filled his regular appointment Saturday night. He brought an interesting message on Christmas that was greatly enjoyed by those present. We had our Xmas tree that night, and the Sunday School presented a program with Miss Mary Clements in charge.

Miss Velma Price spent part of last week visiting friends in Birmingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Childress and children spent Sunday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Crumpton.

Mrs. Thula Foshee and family have as their guest Mrs. Albert Foshee.

We are glad to welcome some new neighbors into our community, and invite them out to church.

Sgt. James S. Rascoe is home on a 30-day furlough, after spending several months on Foreign Service.

There are several sick in our community at this time, and we hope they will soon recover.

Local Boys At Naval Training Station

New recruits at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Illinois, are four from Chilton County.

They are now receiving instruction in seamanship, military drill, and naval procedure. Soon, they will be given a series of aptitude tests for determining whether they will be assigned to one of the Navy's service schools, or to immediate duty at sea.

Upon completing their recruit training, these men will be home on a nine-day leave. They are: Raymond Edward Nelson, 28, 407-13th Street, Clanton; June Lamar Rockett, 18, Clanton; Julius Greil Popwell, 18, Clanton; Lloyd Span Jones, 18, Maplesville Route 1.

Two Negroes Jailed After Wrecking Stolen Automobile

Two local negroes, Blondie Jones and Gable Sawyer, were jailed last Thursday night when they were pickup three miles north of Clanton on the Birmingham Highway, after wrecking an automobile owned by M. C. Hamilton, Manager of the E. L. Kinner Furniture Company. Ed Propst and Luther Kendrick, local Patrolmen, made the arrests.

According to Mr. Hamilton, he had been ready to close and had told his negro helper, Blondie Jones, to go on home. Later when he went out to get into his car it was gone. Looking at his key ring, he discovered that the key to the automobile was missing. Upon calling the Highway Patrol he was informed that they were then crusing north of town. Within a short time he was called by them and told that they had his car and the culprits. His automobile was badly damaged when the driver drove into he back of another car going in the same direction. No one was seriously hurt. Latest reports are that the two negroes are out on bond.

Jan. 5th Second Anniversary Of Rationing Boards

Montgomery, Ala. — Gov. Sparks in proclamation recently issued called attention of Alabamians to plans for observance on a national scale, on January 5th, of the second anniversity of establishment of rationing boards throughout the country. Declaring that rationing is "an example of democracy at work, of a people submitting to curtailment of rights deemed undamental in peace time, because they were told that the public welfare and safety demanded it," Gov. Sparks urged citizens of the State to join on January 5, in honoring members of our rationing boards, whose unselfish, patriotic and unrewarded services fairly entitle them to our praise and gratitude. The celebration on January 5 will include a radio program with national hookup, according to word received at the Governor's office.

In another proclamation issued recently, Gov. Sparks urged Alabamians to put forth their best efforts in salvaging waste paper. The proclamation declared that as result of wartime demands there exists an acute waste paper shortage threatening the production of new paper products for military and elementary civilian needs. Alabamians were asked to do their part n a national campaign to salvage at east 2,000,000 tons of waste paper, described as needed to keep mills at eak production.

NEW YORK.—Once upon a time there were two miners and each had a son. One son climbed a rocky road, and climbed, and after a while said to himself: "How am I doing?" And he was doing fine. He was as high as any man could get going that way. The other son climbed a rocky road, too, and climbed, but in the opposite direction; and after a while he said to himself: "How am I doing?" And he was doing fine, too. He was as high as any man could get going his way.

Two Miners' Sons Climb Rocky Road And Both Go High

One son is Phillip Murray, chief of the CIO. The other is Benjamin F. Fairless, president of United States Steel. And if anybody wants to be old fashioned and say: "That is America, or was, and not bad, either," it is OK in this corner.

Fairless warns a Murray union that its wage demands may float the inflation balloon, because U. S. Steel would have to raise prices to meet the swollen payroll. Fairless probably doesn't keep wages down because he likes to. He knows what it is to pocket a pay envelope as well as to hand one out. He was born in Pigeon Run, Ohio.

He went to work early, taught school to get through college. He was graduated a civil engineer, but he turned soon to steel and although the road was rocky he climbed fast. At 45 he was president of Carnegie-Illinois. He has headed the prime company since 1938. Fifty-three now he is ruddy, stocky, and insiders call him patient, reasonable.

THE mounting success of the April Plan is marked by more than Berlin's tumbling walls. Maj. Gen. Frederick Anderson's promotion from brigadier is another evidence. He helped blue-print the plan in this year's fourth month after Air Marshal Harris and our own General Eaker got a green light from Casablanca.

Major General at 38, His Gremlin Rates a Mention

Anderson is probably the only American general owning a gremlin. His is a gift from his eight-year-old son and is called, if the word may be mentioned in this refined corner, Stinky. Stinky, says Master Travis, fends off ack-ack, upends a Messerschmitt, corrects the general's faulty navigation, if any, aims the general's machine guns, adds extra powder to the general's bullets when they must travel extra far to reach a target; and he always has a double chocolate soda ready on the general's landing.

Practically a diapered major general, only 38, Anderson was born in Kingston, N. Y. At West Point he was so rambunctious he was called the "Wild Indian." Out of West Point he got promptly into a plane and went up rapidly after a slow start. His big chance came in 1941 when he was sent to study aerial bombardment in England's ruined cities. Now he heads the Eighth Air Force Bomber command and already wears the Legion of Merit award, the DFC and a Silver Star. Ultimately he wants a ranch out West with his wife, Travis, his daughter, and, surely, Stinky.

A CITIZEN whose sober but safe watchword for 30 years has been economy, and who still has no big bank roll, groans about the country's billion-dollar boys. There are, he complains, more than he can shake a stick at, all laying ciphers end to end. He thinks they all ought to be bookkeepers for astronomers.

Believes 2 Billion Would Soon Right Our Juvenile Ills

The groans were immediately inspired by Dr. Donald Du Shane, a bellwether schoolteacher nearly as round as the ciphers he tosses at senators peering into juvenile delinquency. Dr. Du Shane blames a penny-pinching federal educational policy for the evils the senators peer at, but adds that a little money would right everything. He mentions two billion, would prefer three.

This seems to be the doctor's first talk of billions, but millions have often rolled off the tip of his tongue. A couple of years ago he was urging the financial, and other, needs of the several hundred thousand teachers in the National Educational association of which he was then president.

Dr. Du Shane is fifty-eight years of age now, plump, gray and persuasive. A native of Indiana, he studied at the University of Wisconsin, married recklessly at twenty-two and moved through a series of school superintendencies to Columbus, Ohio. He stayed there until NEA made him its head. Now he is secretary of NEA's commission for the defense of democracy through education. He is also secretary of the NEA committee looking now into charges that New York city's board of education is under the thumb of Mayor La Guardia.

WHAT ARE CATALYSTS?

One of the words you may have come across in recent years is catalyst. A catalyst is a substance that causes other substances to join with one another to produce a third substance through chemical action, but the catalyst does not itself join these other substances. After the third substance is formed, the catalyst remains unchanged.

Dr. Barton

In thinking about foods and food combinations in these days, food experts again remind us of how much the human body resembles a steam engine in that it burns up fuel (food) to provide energy and there is left ashes (wastes thrown out by the lungs, skin, kidneys and lower bowel).

The body differs from a steam or gasoline engine in that, unlike engines, the fuel or foods eaten become a part of the body, and the body renews its parts as they become worn from food eaten.

Other words you are reading about frequently are vitamins, hormones, and enzymes. These are catalysts in that they are practically invisible and in such small amounts that they are not really foodstuffs but are so important in their action on foods that we could not live without them.

I have spoken before of the difference between a vitamin and a hormone. A vitamin is a substance that is taken into the body as part of the food eaten. Some foods contain a number of vitamins, but generally speaking we speak of foods rich in one particular vitamin, as vitamin A, B, C, D or E foods. A hormone is a chemical substance which is formed in the body by the ductless glands; thus the thyroid manufactures the thyroid hormone, the adrenal glands adrenal hormone, the pancreas the insulin hormone.

What, then are enzymes? Enzymes are chemical substances formed in the cells of the body; they are elements of great importance to the general health of the body, particularly digestion.

The point, then, is that while we look to the main classes of food—proteins, fats, starches, minerals and water for heat (energy) and nourishment, the catalysts—hormones, vitamins and enzymes—serve almost like spark plugs in an engine causing the foods eaten to supply the utmost of their food value.

X-Ray Treatment Ends Plantar Warts

Just a few years ago it would have been difficult to convince anyone that the small warts, the tiny groups of warts so often found on the soles of the feet, were caused by tiny organisms. It would have been even more difficult to make anyone believe that these warts were "catching" just as are diseases such as whooping cough or measles. Today these two facts are known.

There are many different forms of treatment for plantar warts. Some warts come and go again in a short time without treatment; others disappear after application of some caustic, and still others by doses of epsom salts taken internally.

For the last few years the use of the X-ray has been considered the best form of treatment. In the Canadian Medical Association Journal, Drs. J. E. Gendreau and Eugene Dufresne, director and assistant director, respectively, of the Radium Institute of Montreal, discuss the advantages and disadvantages of the different usual methods of treatment.

Surgery: This was formerly the commonest form of treatment, but it requires a local anesthetic, keeps the patient off his feet for many weeks and sometimes leaves a disagreeable scar. This method—surgery—will probably be abandoned by skin specialists.

Negative electrolysis: This method also requires a local anesthetic and there follows considerable discomfort in walking.

Diathermocoagulation: A needle introduced into the wart and left there as long as the high frequency current lights up the wart is an excellent form of treatment, but must also be done under a local anesthetic and sometimes inconveniences the patient for several days.

There are certain disadvantages also with other forms of treatment—electrodessication (drying out the wart); fulguration (burning the wart with a fine spark); carbonic snow treatment is painful and not always reliable; radium, excellent treatment, but very expensive.

Indexing Names

The latest system for indexing personal names enables a clerk to locate quickly even those that sound alike but are written differently, says Collier's, such as Kelly with 14 spellings, Snyder with 29, and Burke which is also written Bork, Byrk, Bhourque and 36 other ways. Each entry is listed alphabetically under the first name in the section containing all surnames with the same chief consonant sounds. Hence, the card for Lily "Burke," however spelled, would be filed in section Brk under Lily.

New Year Treats

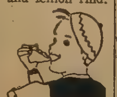
New Year comes but once a year and if you've been taking it easy on the old cookie jar, then fill it up for the holidays. There are point-savers in this carefully assembled collection, but such delicious treats that they will bring cheers from the family.

Brownies.
(Makes 16 large squares)
½ cup butter or substitute
2 squares bitter chocolate
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 cup flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup nutmeats
½ teaspoon vanilla

Melt butter and chocolate together. Remove from heat; add sugar and unbeaten eggs, one at a time, then flour, salt and nuts. Beat in vanilla. Bake 20 minutes in a greased pan in a moderate oven. When cool, cut in squares.

Pfeffernuesse
3 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon cloves
2 tablespoons cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup thinly sliced citron
Grated rind of 1 lemon
4 eggs
2 cups sugar

Sift flour, baking powder and spices; add citron and lemon rind. Beat eggs and sugar until thick. Blend in flour mixture, adding more flour if necessary to make a smooth dough. Roll thin on a floured surface; cut small cookies and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven until light brown, about 15 minutes.



Almond Jam Bars.
(Makes 2½ dozen bars)
½ cup shortening
½ teaspoon almond extract
½ teaspoon vanilla
½ cup corn syrup or honey
1½ cups sifted enriched flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
1 egg
¾ cup jam

Mix together shortening and extracts. Add syrup, mixing well. Sift together flour, baking powder, salt, cinnamon and cloves. Add to shortening and mix until crumbly. Beat egg and add, blending well. Spread half of batter in bottom of a greased 7 by 12-inch pan. Spread jam over batter. Cover jam with remaining batter. Bake in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees) 25 to 30 minutes. Cut in bars.

Orange Sugar Tarts.
(Makes 5 dozen tarts)
½ cup butter or substitute
1 cup sugar
1 egg

Lynn Says

Money Savers: Cheese will keep better if it is covered with a light coating of margarine and stored in a tightly covered fruit jar.

If potatoes are cooked about 5 minutes before baking you can cut their baking time in about half and save fuel costs.

A tablespoon of water added to the white of an egg before beating will almost double its volume. Longer beating is required.

If you melt chocolate for cakes and cookies, add about ¼ cup of sugar from the recipe to the chocolate which is melted in the saucepan. It will gather up any particles of chocolate left in the pan.

New Year's Buffet

Sliced Ham or Turkey
Cranberry Relish Tossed Salad
Hot Rolls
Fruit Cake or Orange Cake
Beverage

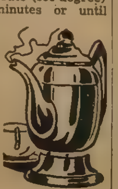
½ cup all-bran
3 cups flour
3½ teaspoons baking powder
¾ teaspoon salt
½ cup orange juice
2 teaspoons grated orange rind
Colored sugar

Cream together butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Mix in bran. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt and add to first mixture alternately with orange juice. Stir in orange rind. Chill. Roll dough out to about ⅛-inch thickness, working with a small amount at a time and keeping the remainder chilled. Cut into fancy shapes with floured cutters; sprinkle with colored sugar and bake on a greased baking sheet in moderately hot (375-degree) oven about 10 minutes.

Honey Date and Nut Bars.
(Makes 2 dozen)
1 cup sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ cup bran or wheat germ
1 cup chopped dates
1 cup chopped walnuts
3 eggs
1 cup honey
¼ cup melted margarine

Sift together flour, salt, cinnamon and baking powder. Add bran, wheat germ, dates and nuts. Beat eggs until thick, add honey and margarine. Mix well. Stir flour mixture into egg mixture, blending well. Spread evenly in a well-greased pan and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven about 35 minutes or until brown. Cut in squares while warm and remove from pan.

If you set this lovely New Year cake against a background of hemlock boughs, you can invite anyone over to your New Year's open house and be sure they will receive it gladly:



New Year Cake.
4 eggs
½ cup sugar
¾ cup light corn syrup
Grated rind of 1 orange
½ cup orange juice
1½ cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
Orange filling
Boiled frosting
7 orange sections

Beat eggs until frothy and almost white. Add sugar and corn syrup gradually, beating constantly. Add orange juice and rind, mixing only enough to blend. Sift flour, baking powder and salt. Fold into first mixture. Line bottom of pan (12 by 8 by 2) with waxed paper. Pour in cake mixture and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven 35 minutes. Let cake remain in pan until cool. Remove from pan and cut into 3 equal parts. Put layers together with orange filling. Frost with boiled icing to which has been added grated rind of 1 orange. Decorate top with orange sections.

Orange Filling: Mix 2 tablespoons of butter with ¼ cup sugar, 2 beaten eggs, 1 tablespoon grated orange rind, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and ½ cup orange juice. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until thickened, about 10 minutes. Chill well before using.

JESUS BEGINS HIS MINISTRY

LESSON TEXT—Mark 1:9-22.
GOLDEN TEXT—Repent ye, and believe the gospel.—Mark 1:15.

A new year of opportunity is before us. What will it hold for us and for the world? We do not know, but God does, and trusting Him we move forward. One thing we must have this next year is more Bible study. We need to know what God's Word has to say to us day by day.

In our Sunday schools we begin today a three month series on the Gospel of Mark, which presents Christ as the Servant of God. It is the Gospel of mighty acts.

In our lesson we see Jesus—

I. Entering Upon His Ministry (vv. 9-13).

The baptism and temptation of Jesus were not just a preparation for His work, but were rather His actual entry upon His mission.

The baptism of Jesus was not because of any sin in Him, for He was sinless. It was of real significance as His entry upon the work for which He had come into the world—that of redemption. He who knew no sin became sin for us. He here partook of the sinner's baptism, not because He had sinned, but because He came to be the sinner's substitute (see Heb. 2:17).

What infinite love and condescension! To it God the Father gave His approval (v. 11), and the Holy Spirit gave heavenly witness by descending upon Him.

The one who was to be the constant opponent of Christ and His followers was reckoned with at the very beginning of His ministry as He was led by the Holy Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of Satan. Around Him were the wild beasts, before Him was Satan, and in it all "the angels ministered unto him."

The devil has only three real temptations to present, "the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life" (I John 2:16). He uses the same three types of temptation with us, varying the "dress" in which he presents them. Let us be on guard.

Victory came through the use of God's Word. We need to learn that lesson and not attempt to defeat Satan with any man-made weapons of will power, logic, or culture.

II. Working As Preacher and Teacher (vv. 14, 15, 21, 22).

The Gospel of Mark is the book of Christ's miraculous works. It is therefore significant that His first recorded work was that of preaching, His second that of calling and preparing fellow workers, and last of all the miraculous healing of the demoniac (vv. 23-28).

From a human viewpoint one would think that the opposite order would prevail. First let the Master do some mighty miracle to catch the attention of the people, then organize a great "party," and then preach. Much effort in our day follows that human formula and fails of lasting results. The man who magnifies preaching and gives the Word of God pre-eminence will see real spiritual accomplishments.

Notice also that when Jesus began His ministry in Capernaum (v. 21), it was by teaching, essentially the same as preaching. There is no substitute for the personal presentation of the gospel.

Jesus preached faith and repentance, or perhaps one should say repentance and faith (v. 15). They went together in our Lord's preaching. Let us follow His example.

The preacher of our day, truly called of the Lord and faithfully proclaiming the full counsel of God, may well be encouraged by the importance our Lord gave to that ministry. He too may speak with authority because He speaks for Christ.

III. Calling His Helpers (vv. 16-20).

The orderly development of any work calls for the choosing and training of associates. Moody is said to have observed that "it is a greater thing to put ten men to work than it is to do ten men's work."

Our Lord was no mere human leader, but He desired and used fellow workers and He committed to them the carrying on of His work after He departed.

God still calls men into His service. Would that grace might be given to each one to whom such a call may come to respond "straightway," as did the disciples.

The nature of our Lord's call to these men is worthy of our attention. He wanted them not as executives, or leaders of an organization, or as His personal attendants. They probably served in all these capacities and others. But their main business was to be personal soul-winning.

Let us not forget that such is God's calling to each of us who are Christians. We may have other duties to perform, other work to do, but this thing we must do—we must be "fishers of men."

Gas Arising From Sea Off Peru Defies Explanation

Along 700 miles of the coast of Peru, says Collier's, volumes of hydrogen sulphide arise at times from the sea, a mysterious marine phenomenon that still defies scientific explanation.

Not only does this gas kill much bird life and cause epidemics of headaches in coastal towns, but it becomes so dense in and around the port of Callao that it tarnishes silverware and blackens boats and other objects painted in light colors, hence its name—"The Callao Painter."

Quite Natural

Convinced Her

A small-town customer kept asking a farm woman if her eggs were fresh. Every day for three weeks this went on until the farm wife became so exasperated she exclaimed:

"Lady, my eggs are so fresh, if the hens hadn't made a mistake in the calendar, these eggs wouldn't have been laid till tomorrow!"

The lady purchased the eggs.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer LeCroy of Camden, Ala., visited relatives of this community during the week end.

We are glad to have Mrs. Ira Kelly and children move back in our community. They have been living down in south Alabama, near Robertsdale, for the past year.

Mrs. Odell Cobb and baby have returned to the home of her parents after a visit in Georgia and other places.

Mr. Max Hayes, Mr. J. W. Veazy and Monroe Kincaid made a trip to south Alabama this week end for the purpose of moving the Kelly's back to tris community.

There is still quite a bit of sickness in this community yet. Mr. Luther LeCroy has had pneumonia. Several other people have had the flu.

Mr. Howard Oden has moved into the house that Mr. Harold Camp moved out of, near Mr. Span Jones's. The Kelly's moved into the house Mr. Oden was living in.

Mrs. Mamie Veazy was given a surprise party Saturday night. Quite a number of women and girls were present. Many useful gifts were received by Mrs. Veazy. Everyone present reported a nice time.

A Christmas pageant was given at the Baptist Church Sunday night, showing the Birth of Christ. Mrs. Harold Smith was the sponsor.

Mrs. Charlie Jones received word last Friday that her nephew, Mr. Ralph Carter, of Montgomery, was dead. He was buried at Billingsley last Saturday. Ralph was the son of Mrs. Minnie (Rasberry) Carter. Our sympathy goes out to his mother, wife and other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Palmer of near Robertsdale are visiting relatives in this community.

WHAT'S DOING AT ISABELLA HI

There's nothing doing at Isabella High this week, since the students were given the week off to perhaps recover from the Christmas bustle and steady grind of the classroom. Resentment was pretty high among the students about going to school on Christmas Eve Day, but attendance was pretty good. Influenza has caused a large drop in attendance for the past several days.

The Senior Class had chapel for last week, preparing an interesting Christmas program for the school. A short pageant was presented, which included the singing of a number of Christmas carols by a group of students selected from several classes. Incidently, we understand that the pageant was written by members of the school. Nevertheless, it was enjoyable, despite the fact that sickness caused several last minute changes in the roles.

Wastebasket Script—There was so much holly and so forth in school last week that it looked to us like Sherwood Forest. . . . And here's some real news: Did you know that Earl Wright had quit smoking? Somebody sure sold some oranges this Christmas, judging by the number of peelings that hit us on the head Friday. . . .We are reminded of the school paper newshunter who went into a grammar school room the other day and asked if anyone had a birthday in December? One little fellow held up his hand. "What day is your birthday?" "May 10th," was the reply.

MOUNT NEBO

The Mt. Nebo 4-H Club held a Christmas party at the church Monday night of last week. At the meeting everyone drew names to determine who was to buy gifts for whom. At the party a number of games were enjoyed before the gifts were given out. Everyone then was served all the fruit and cookies that they could eat.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Culp and children of Panama City have returned home after a holiday visit with Mr. and Mrs. John M. Culp.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Williams spent Sunday with their son, Mr and Mrs. J. E. Jr., and children Sunday.

We are sorry to report that many in the community are in the bed with flu. However, it seems that some are recovering at this time.—Jesse A. Culp.

Mrs Willie Easterling Moore is now back at the Modern Beauty Shop.

Can You Picture
ALABAMA
without Farms?

It would take quite a stretch of the imagination to conceive of Alabama without its rich farmlands. Indeed, if all the food, textiles, and other basic war materials produced on the farms of our State were suddenly lost to America's war effort, it would be as disastrous as the loss of many major battles.

231,746 Alabama farms today are producing the things needed desperately by the fighting men and war workers of the United Nations. Many thousands of Alabama's population are "in there pitching"—to set new records for farm output.

The top ranking product in value from Alabama's fine farms is cotton, followed by corn, peanuts and hay crops. And these are just a few of the crops and products that our farm are yielding—under a farsighted policy established by successive legislatures that has given agriculture its rightful place in the State's economy.

Members of the Greyhound organization (a large number of whom grew up on Alabama farms) have a particular interest in our Alabama neighbors who live and work on farms and in rural communities. Our buses are, in many cases, their only means of public transportation.

We feel we're helping them to do their big job better—by giving them easy access to nearby towns and cities for marketing crops, buying farm supplies and for seeking relaxation. Our buses have also aided them by bringing farm workers right to their gates. It's all part of the job in which Greyhound takes the greatest pleasure — making near neighbors and good neighbors of all the communities that our buses serve in Alabama.

happy New Year

IT IS on New Year's that we keep "open house"—a happy old traditional custom. On such occasions how important that one's home be inviting and comfortable. We have been particularly fortunate for many years in that we have helped our customers and friends to make their homes more livable.

To all whom we have thus served, to all whom we may serve in the future, we send the season's greetings.

Congress Debates Discharge Payments To Veterans; House Considers Amount; Labor Studies Rail Wage Settlement; '43 Food Production Tops All Records

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Rail Union Heads—Summoned to White House for conference on settlement of wage demands of railroad unions are, labor chieftains (left to right), T. C. Cashen, switchmen; H. M. Fraser, conductors; A. F. Whitney, trainmen; Alvanley Johnston, engineers, and D. B. Robertson, locomotive firemen and enginemen. (See: Rail Strike.)

RAIL STRIKE:
Settlement Sought

Declaring a railroad strike would be a serious blow to the conduct of the war, President Roosevelt busied himself seeking settlement of a wage dispute involving 1,450,000 rail employees who threatened to walk out December 30 unless their demands were satisfied.

First to threaten to strike were the five operating brotherhoods of switchmen, trainmen, firemen and enginemen, engineers and conductors, who originally asked for a $3 a day raise, but balked when they were awarded only a 4 cents per hour boost. As a compromise, FDR suggested payment of overtime to rail employees, who at present are not eligible for such extra compensation until they have passed 48 hours.

Next to join in the walkout threat were the 15 non-operating rail unions, following congress' failure to act on their petition for an 8 cents an hour raise, disapproved by the government's stabilization director who offered an alternate plan granting a 10 cents hourly boost to lower paid employees and a 4 cents hourly increase to the highest paid.

RATIONING:
What U. S. Misses Most

With shortages of civilian goods in wartime America, what do the people miss most?

To get a straight answer, the government's civilian requirements office made a door-to-door canvass in 120 counties, discovering that 1—butter; 2—meat; 3—sugar; and 4—soap topped the list.

Following in order were 5—canned goods; 6—fruits; 7—elastic tape; 8—coal; 9—satisfactory hosiery; 10—washtubs.

Said OCR: "The items which civilians urgently need are for the most part fairly simple, calling for neither elaborate processing nor for complicated component parts." Earlier, OCR announced a 15 per cent boost in production of civilian goods in the first quarter of 1944 over the last three months of 1943.

EUROPE:
Join Jugoslavs

While U. S. and British troops ate deeper into the Nazis' winter line in southern Italy, the Jugoslav government of Gen. Josip (Tito) Broz announced that U. S., British and Russian officers had been added to his staff, and plans agreed on for extension of the guerrilla campaign vs. the Germans.

Pecking steadily at Nazi defenses on snow-clad mountain slopes, Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark's Fifth army worked its way around German positions guarding the long road leading to Rome, 80 miles away, as reports revealed the enemy was evacuating certain districts of the Eternal City to plant mines. After stiff fighting on the Adriatic coast, Gen. Bernard Montgomery's Eighth army broke into the key town of Ortona, blocking the approach to the highway hub of Pescara further north.

Announcement of Allied representation in General Broz's communist-backed Partisan army indicated that the U. S., Britain and Russia might make an attempt at equipping the 250,000 guerrillas who form the force, but have been fighting Nazi mechanized troops with light arms.

DISCHARGE PAY:
For Vets

Terms of a senate bill sent to the house for approval would give vets with 18 months or more service overseas since December 6, 1941, $500 upon honorable discharge. Vets 12 to 18 months abroad would receive $400 and those less than 12 months $300.

Vets serving within the continental limits for 12 months or more would get $300, and those serving less than 12 months $200. With approximately a million men removed from the enlisted ranks since December 6, 1941, and 70,000 being discharged monthly, the program would cost $300,000,000 at the start.

Barkley Bridges Austin

Bearing the name of Senator Alben Barkley (Ky.), the bill's payment provisions were worked out by Senators Styles Bridges (N. H.) and Warren Austin (Vt.). The bill now goes to the house, where there has been agitation for even higher discharge payments, with much sympathy for Representative William Lemke's proposal giving vets $100 upon release from the services and up to one year's pay.

AGRICULTURE:
1943 Production

Total food output for 1943 was 4 per cent larger than the previous year, with a slump in grain harvests made up by other products.

At 3,076,159,000 bushels, the corn crop was down from 3,131,518,000 in 1942; wheat declined to 836,298,000 bushels from 974,176,000, and oats dropped to 1,143,867,000 bushels from 1,349,547,000.

Record production was noted for meats, milk, poultry and eggs, along with potatoes, peas, soybeans, peanuts, rice. Gains also were registered for nuts, hemp, snap beans, carrots, lettuce and other commercial vegetables.

At 464,656,000 bushels, the 1943 potato harvest was at a new high.

Winter Wheat Acreage

Despite a 25 per cent increase in winter wheat seeding, indicated production for 1944 was set at 526,957,000 bushels, or 2,649,000 bushels less than 1943. Because rye is not considered a war crop, many farmers reduced plantings.

Because dry weather hampered seeding and continued to prevail after planting, as much as 21.9 per cent of the winter wheat crop may be abandoned, and lower acreage yields may result. Only the eastern sector of the corn belt has been favored with good weather, but the important great plains region, on the other hand, has suffered from insufficient rainfall.

Reflecting a steady decline, rye acreage seeded dropped to 4,992,000 from 5,805,000 last year. In North Dakota, plantings were down 59 per cent, in South Dakota 25 per cent and Nebraska 22 per cent. Increases were recorded in the South, chiefly for pasture and roughage, ESTATE: The estate of Edsel Ford, only son of Henry Ford, is valued at 66 million dollars by the probate court. Edsel was president of the great automobile company until his death last May.

TANKERS: Ocean-going oil tankers are now being built at a rate 10 times greater than they are being sunk, Petroleum Administrator Davies stated recently.

APES: British Commandos, stationed on the Rock of Gibraltar, are searching the caves for the famous apes, long associated with "the Rock." Members of the monkey colony have been disappearing lately. Axis agents are suspected of having poisoned the animals.

There is a legend extant that when the apes leave the Rock, the British will lose their hold on Gibraltar.

BOLIVIA:
Revolutionists In

Always peppery, South America's politics took another sensational twist with a nationalist revolution in Bolivia, upsetting the government of Gen. Enrique Penaranda, and installing the administration of sociologist Paz Estenssoro, once locked up for pro-Nazi activities.

In Washington, D. C., U. S. officials were concerned with the development, since Bolivia now remains the Allies' chief source of tin following the loss of Malaya and the Indies to the Japs. But as the smoke from the rifles and machine guns cleared in Bolivia, the new regime announced there would be no change in friendly relations—or business—with the Allies.

Bolivia long has been in a stew over Penaranda's high-handed tactics, especially since troops broke up strike demonstrations in the tin mines with gunfire.

In 1925, a father took his six-year-old son on a railroad trip to Minnesota on the Northwestern lines, not paying fare for him because of his small size.

Eighteen years later, the railroad got a letter with $31.60 enclosed. It read: ". . . I am sorry we did not pay the (boy's) fare then, and we are asking you to forgive us for that wrong . . . With compound interest, our debt totals $31.60."

RUSSIA:
Baltic Push

Even as the Nazis reportedly were organizing 250,000 Estonians, Latvians and Lithuanians for military service, the Red army pushed toward the borders of these tiny Baltic states.

As the Russians reported that the Nazis were shuttling troops from the Ukraine to the north to meet the Reds' latest drive, action on the 1,200-mile front assumed the shape of a game of military chess. Previously, Nazi pressure on Russian lines before Kiev had drawn Red reinforcements to that area.

Threatened by the Reds' surge in the north were the rail lines supplying Nazi forces in the Leningrad region. Severance of these lines would cut off essential German communications, forcing them to rely wholly upon their Baltic sea routes, and a drive to the shores of these waters would make the Nazis' positions almost untenable.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:
Japs Gird

In an effort to further delay the U. S. drive westward to the heart of the Japanese empire, the enemy dispatched increasing air strength to the South Pacific area, with particular increases noted in the Marshall Islands.

With the Gilberts in our hands, and Allied eyes cast northward to the strategic Marshalls, U. S. Liberator bombers initiated a heavy bombing campaign against the latter islands, to soften up their defenses. At the same time, U. S. fliers continued assaulting the big enemy supply center of Rabaul, on New Britain.

As U. S. bombers droned over these objectives to drop tons of explosives, the Japs sent up strong waves of fighter planes to disrupt the attacks. Further, strings of convoys were observed bringing up reinforcements for strengthening defenses.

First administrator of the Agricultural Adjustment act and one of the two men who laid the cornerstone for the McNary-Haugen farm bill, George N. Peek died at 70. Formerly an executive of the Moline Plow company and Deere & Co., Peek saw eye to eye with the then Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace on processing taxes, but split with him on the crop reduction principle. Always independent politically, Peek left the GOP in 1928 to support the Democrats' farm plank.

CANADIAN OIL:
Defends Army Project

The war department's 134-million-dollar oil development project in northwestern Canada was sharply defended by the army's service supply chief, Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, who declared that the venture not only fit into the high command's strategic plans, but also resulted in the discovery of a huge petroleum field of 100,000,000 barrels.

To be completed by next March, the project, known as Canol, will include 600 miles of pipeline and a refinery. Begun early in the war to reportedly supply U. S. forces operating in the Alaskan theater with fuel, Canol has been bitterly attacked by other U. S. agencies.

One strong objection raised to Canol was that the U. S. will lose its rights to the field after the war, control reverting to the Canadian government.

HOG SUPPORT

Heavy butcher hogs, animals weighing 270 to 300 pounds, have been included in the price support program of the War Food administration. The change went into effect December 23. This action extends the support price of $13.75 a hundredweight, Chicago basis, to all hogs between 200 and 300 pounds.

The move was necessary, WFA officials stated, because prices of the heavier swine have been sagging, often as much as a dollar under the $13.75 figure.

THAT vacant spot in the entertainment world is filled, now that John F. Sullivan—Fred Allen to the world at large—is back on the air on Sunday evenings. Once again, he's working 40 to 50 hours a week to bring us that 30 minutes of entertainment. During the last war Fred served with the AEF; during this one he's doing his best for men in the service; while he was on that long "vacation" he did several programs which were exclusively for transmission to overseas Allen fans in the armed forces. He played his first radio role in 1932—Helen Morgan was his guest star. Now, 11 years later, he's at it again, better than ever.

IN MEMORIUM

The American Legion lost a useful and capable member, when Percy McGraw Pitts died in a Montgomery Hospital on November 19th, 1943.

The American loht a useful and capable member, when Percy McGraw Pitts died in a Montgomery Hospital on November 19th. 1943.

Mr Pitts entered the First Officers Training Camp, at Fort Oglethorps, Georgia, and accepted appointment as 2nd Lt. Inf., Reserve Corps, and entered upon active duty in World War I. During this war he was promoted to 1st Lt., and served in France as A. D. C. to Brig. Gen. L. L. Durfee, who was C. G. of the 77th Brig. in 5th Depot Brigade Div. formerly 39th Div.

Early in World War II, he again offered his services to his country and was accepted for same, but failed to pass the physical examination.

Immediately after War I, he returned to Clanton, Ala., resumed the practice of his profession (law), married Myrtle Reynolds, and was one of the founders of the Chilton County Post No. 6 of the American Legion. From that time he was always an active member in the Legion serving several terms as the Post Adjutant, and Post Service Officer.

Percy was a member of the Legislature from Chilton County for three terms, was an active member of the Methodist Church, and his friends will always remember him for his great heart, his loyalty, and his unselfish devotion to those he loved.

NOW, THEREFORE, we, the Chilton County Post No. 6, Dept. of Ala. of the American Legion, resolve: that we, his community, state, and nation, lost a member that cannot be replaced, in the passing of Percy McGraw Pitts.

Be it further reholved, that a copy of these resolutions, be spread upon the minutes of our Post, and a copy furnished to each of the County Newspapers, and to the bereaved wife.

Chilton County Post No. 6,
Dept. of Alabama, American Legion.

New Horizons
for a Greater Industrial South

WHILE destructive battles rage in large areas of the world, a different story is being written in our Southland . . . a story of new industrial achievement, of things yet to come in the stirring world of tomorrow.

The South stands hopefully on the threshold of a new era . . . dreaming of vaster industrial and agricultural expansion. From its fabulous raw resources the laboratories of private industry have in late years wrought miracles of production. Agricultural products have blossomed into new kinds of fabrics, building materials and amazingly useful plastics. New markets and new wealth have been created for southern farmers, commerce and labor. Even now the South boasts many of the largest plants in their respective fields in the world!

Already a major factor in America's arsenal of war production, the South looks forward to a better tomorrow . . . a tomorrow filled with peace, security and happiness . . . a tomorrow when the American Spirit of Free Enterprise will build a Greater Industrial South for the betterment of all mankind.

In War or Peace "The Old Reliable" Aids Southern Progress

Today the L&N's big job is to help Uncle Sam win the war. When "V" day comes, the L&N will again serve the South with modern and dependable transportation — and cooperate in every other way toward making it greater industrially and otherwise. The railroads ask only fair treatment by the public and its lawmakers — that no unequal advantages or subsidies be given their competitors.

Complete information pertaining to plant sites, raw material, power and water supply, or assistance in planning efficient track layouts and service routes, may be obtained by writing the Industrial Development Department of the L&N at Louisville, Ky.

ABILITY TO PRODUCE REQUIRED OF 2-C AND 3-C

The Statewide checkup of Alabamians who have been granted agricultural deferment from military service to determine whether they are producing enough essential farm products to justify deferment, is having a splendid psychological effect, Lt. Col. James T. Johnson, State Selective Service Director, said today. This beneficial effect, Col Johnson said, results from the emphasis on production and bringing home to the farm population generally the fact that men in 2-C and 3-C are deferred, not just because they are farmers, but because of their ability to produce needed crops, an ability which must be demonstrated to maintain deferred status.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY O'HARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin, given an opportunity to choose any yearling colt on his family's Wyoming ranch, picks the filly of a "loco" mare named Rocket. His choice merely adds to his father's anger, which is already aroused by the fact that Ken has failed his school work and has shown no sense of responsibility. It was Ken's mother who finally persuaded Captain McLaughlin that having the colt might be good for Ken, and the change in him has proved she was right. Flicka is badly hurt trying to jump the corral fence, but even Captain McLaughlin has to admit that the little filly may not be loco after all.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XII

Ken would stand in front of her and say, "I am Ken." (That was important for her to know.) "And I am your friend, Flicka. I am so sorry, so—very—sorry, you are hurt, and I hope it doesn't hurt."

He found a nicer place for the filly.

A fence ran from the corrals of the cowbarn, straight north, dividing the Calf Pasture from the practice field; a path led along this fence, and, about three hundred yards from the corrals, reached a spot where several cottonwood trees made a wall of foliage. Under the boughs of the trees, the path sloped sharply down for ten feet or so to a flat area of beautiful green turf, through which Lone Tree Creek ran.

When the creek was in flood, all this flat part was covered; but now, in summer, it was dry, and the grass such a vivid green that, coming upon it from the dryer land roundabout, it was startling to the eye. Golden sunlight lay upon part of it; part of it was dark and pleasant with the shade of the cottonwood trees that hung over the hill and sent their roots winding down its face to bore underground for water. Here, without having to hunt for it, Flicka had rich grass to eat and running water to drink; there was both sun and shade.

Ken called the place Flicka's Nursery, and each morning and evening he walked down the little path carrying a can of oats to empty into the wooden feed box which he had set near the roots of the cottonwoods.

Standing as tall as she could at the foot of the bank, Flicka could just see over the top of it and catch sight of Ken coming. He could see her too. It made him tingle all over, the first time he saw her head—just the pretty face, with the blonde bang over her forehead and the dainty pricked ears framed in the down-hanging branches of the cottonwoods—and realized that she was looking for him and waiting for him.

Ken bragged about it that night at supper, but Howard said, "Nuts! She's lookin for her oats, not for you."

McLaughlin answered sharply, "Oats, or the bringer-of-oats, in the long run it gets to be the same thing."

And Nell added dryly, "Are human beings any different?"

No doubt about it, Flicka did love her oats. As Ken stooped over to empty the can into the feed box, she would be close beside him reaching her nose in; but when he put out his hand to stroke her, she pulled back. She would not let him touch her.

The last week or so, all Ken and Howard had been doing with their colts was to lead them by the halter around the pasture, saying Whoa now and then, at the same time halting the colt; and making them go different speeds, from a slow walk to a brisk trot. When they had walked them enough, they took them back into the pens, removed the lead ropes and played with them, patted and whacked them, waved blankets around them, leaned on their backs, fed them oats out of their hands.

Right over the fence from the Calf Pasture, where the boys worked with their colts, was the practice field, and here, for many hours a day, Ken's mother and father, and the bronco-buster worked with the four polo ponies, Rumba, Blazes, Don, and Gangway.

At last the day came when the work was done. The four ponies were loaded into the truck and McLaughlin drove them to the station to be shipped with Sargent's bunch.

Then the little bronco-buster left. They all gathered around the battered sedan, packed full of saddles and equipment, and said good-by to him and wished him luck at the Rodeo.

"Don't take chances," Nell McLaughlin said. "But I notice you're pretty careful."

Ross' steady blue eyes looked at her in his direct and respectful manner, and he answered, "A man that monkeys around wild horses don't kid himself any, Missus. It don't do no good."

Then he grinned, "I may be in hospital agin after the Rodeo, but if I ain't, I'll be back to see how Ken makes out with his filly." He grinned at Ken and Ken grinned back.

Then he took off his sombrero, shook hands all around, climbed into the driver's seat and rattled off.

And the next thing that happened was the Rodeo.

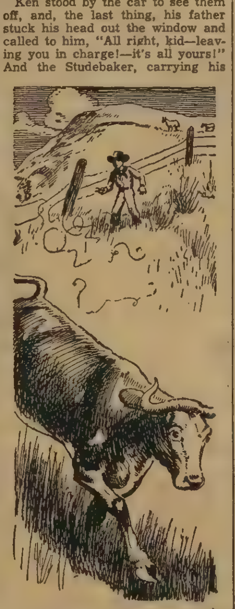
Ken was entirely alone on the ranch that day with Flicka, when suddenly she couldn't get up from the ground.

It was the last day of the Rodeo. The Studebaker had gone into Cheyenne on each of the four days of the big show, FRONTIER DAYS, called by Cheyenne boosters, The Daddy of 'em All.

Ken went the first day and saw Lady and Calico and Buck and Baldy in the parade, ridden by four of the City Fathers, all dressed up in ten gallon hats and fringed chaps. He saw the famous bucking horse, Midnight, throw every rider that mounted him. But Ken didn't go in again, not even on this last day when there was going to be the wild horse race, and it annoyed his father; but McLaughlin said it was up to him. If he'd rather be alone on the ranch than at the Rodeo with his family, why, he could suit himself. But one thing was certain, no one was going to stay with him—not Gus or Tim either, because they'd both been promised the day off. Gus would be back on the four o'clock bus to milk the cows, and until then Ken would be alone.

Ken said he didn't mind—he'd have Flicka.

Ken stood by the car to see them off, and, the last thing, his father stuck his head out the window and called to him, "All right, kid—leaving you in charge!—it's all yours!" And the Studebaker, carrying his mother and father and Howard and Gus and Tim slid down the hill, rattled over the cattle guard and bowled smoothly down the road.



The bottom strand of the fence was broken.

Ken stood there, watching it until it disappeared. How different everything was now that they had gone. All yours . . . He felt the responsibility his father had laid upon him . . . he was in charge. The two dogs, Kim, the collie who looked like a coyote, and Chaps, the black spaniel, were standing beside him. They too were watching the empty road. They were used to doing that, and they knew the difference—the road with the Studebaker on it, going or coming, the road empty, and silence all around.

Ken went up to his room and stood before his book shelf. He picked out the "Jungle Book," then ran downstairs and out, across the Green, into the Calf Pasture, and down the path by the fence to Flicka's Nursery. She was drinking at the brook when he came.

He greeted her with a stream of talk; he visited with her a while, standing as close to her as she would let him. Then he seated himself on the bank of the hill under the cottonwoods and began to read.

Flicka wandered around her nursery. Sometimes she wanted sunshine, and stood under the dappled golden light until she was warmed through, then a few steps took her into the shade of the trees. Ken, glancing up, saw her standing quite near, watching him. He began to read aloud to her, and her ears came forward sharply as if she was listening.

Flicka's head turned. As Ken's voice went on, she moved over to the empty feed box, sniffed it, put out a long pink tongue and licked up a few stray grains left over from her breakfast. Then she stood quietly, broadside to Ken, switching her cream-colored tail to keep off the flies.

Now and then Ken stopped reading, put his book down and lay back on the hill with his arms under his head, looking up through the branches of the trees. He could see a patch of blue sky with a little vague half moon floating in it, the daytime moon, called the Children's Moon, because it is the only moon most children ever see. At first he thought it was a little soft cloud.

It was another hot day, but down here it was pleasant and shady. There wasn't a sound, except for the ripple of the stream where it ran over stones and shallow sandy places, now and then the splash of a trout that flipped out and in again, and, all the time, a faint hum, the buzzing of the racing flies that were always in the out-of-doors. It was a sound that went with summer—part of the silence.

He sighed. Well—it was time to eat—he must go up to the house and get his lunch.

Flicka was still standing up when he left. When he came back, running down the path with the dogs at his heels, his eyes were fastened on the spot just over the brow of the hill where he so often saw Flicka's face watching for him, but it wasn't there.

He ran down the hill and saw that she was flat on her side.

As she heard him coming she made an effort to get up and fell back again.

It stopped Ken dead in his tracks. Then he ran to her and fell on his knees beside her. "Oh, Flicka," he cried, "what is the matter, Flicka? What's happened to you?"

She was dying . . . she had been dying all along—or, something had happened while he was away at lunch . . . perhaps she'd fallen and hurt herself again . . . perhaps her back was broken . . .

Hardly knowing what he was doing, he patted her face and kissed it. He went behind her, crouched down, put his arms around her head and held it.

At last he went back to the bank of the hill and sat down, wishing that the afternoon would hurry by and that Gus would come. The bus would drop him at four o'clock out on the highway. It would take him a half hour to walk to the house, change into his bluejeans (he'd be all dressed up in a tight shiny blue serge suit with a ten-gallon hat and fine shoes) and be ready to milk the cows. Ken was to bring the cows in and have them waiting in the corral, and he was to measure out the cow feed and put it in the feed boxes for the cows, so Gus would have nothing to do but drive them in and milk them.

Flicka seemed to have gone to sleep. Presently Ken lay down on the hillside and fell asleep too.

A sound came into his sleep. A loud, distressed crying. It got louder and louder and then was a terrible, anguished bellowing, and Ken was sitting up straight, wide awake, and tense with fear. It wasn't anything to do with Flicka, but she too was holding her head up from the ground, listening.

It was a cow bellowing. The sound came from the east, beyond the Calf Pasture. That was Crosby's land. It wasn't one of the Goose Bar cows then.

Ken was frightened and sickened by the sound. Something awful must be happening. What? Ought he to go and find out? (You're in charge—) Maybe the mountain lion. His thoughts jumped to the Winchester . . . where was it? . . . in the back of the Studebaker . . . no, no, the officers had been shooting with it and afterwards his father had put all the guns back in the gun-rack in the dining room . . . yes . . . he could get it, could go see what was the matter . . .

The boy got slowly to his feet. Should he get the Winchester first? Or go to the cow first? Would he be able to use the Winchester? It was heavy . . . perhaps better to get his own little twenty-two . . . perhaps go first and see what was the matter . . .

Indecision paralyzed him; then suddenly he came to life, turned and ran eastward. He flew along the edge of the brook, crossed and recrossed wherever the footing was best. Some places the willows crowded down thick to the edge of the stream and he had to go around. The bellowing continued. Well . . . anyway, if it was the wildcat it hadn't got her . . . she was making plenty of noise . . . maybe it had got her calf.

Ken ran fast so he wouldn't be frightened. He saw the red hide of a Hereford cow—not one of their own Guernseys. She was standing on the edge of the creek where a barbed wire fence crossed it. As Ken rolled under the fence and went around to her, he couldn't see that anything was the matter—then he saw, and it made him sick.

The bottom strand of the wire fence was broken; some other old wires were tangled with it, and the whole web of wire was wrapped around the cow's udder.

Ken put his hand to the hind pocket of his overalls. He had been told by his father, "never let me catch you out without a pair of wire-cutters in your pants pocket." But the cutters weren't there. He remembered, clean bluejeans this morning, and the cutters lying on the table in his room. He headed for the cowbarn; there would be cutters there. While he ran he was wishing that Gus would come. He wondered if he should wait for Gus to cut the cow loose—(it's all yours . . .) No, he'd do it himself.

It took him fifteen minutes to get back to the cow with the cutters. Then he had been running so hard, he had to kneel beside her for a few minutes until his breath came easily and his hands were steady enough to begin work.

'Lean, Aged Mountaineer' Breaks Down Allied Distrust

Secretary Hull's Determination and Sincerity During Visit to Moscow Broke Barriers of Suspicion. Russia Now Real Ally.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

The flag is flying over the White House again, a real symbol, no longer a ruse de guerre. After the past few weeks, it is a relief to know it really means that the President is there—not an attempt to hide his absence from the enemy.

Already the nervous bulletins, announcing the forbidden truths or the invented canards as to the whereabouts of the Allied leaders, are forgotten in the more instant interest in the happenings on the battle fronts—on the home front.

Washington has had time to ponder on America's new leadership in world affairs. Perhaps that toast offered by Premier Stalin to American war production without which, he said, the war could not have been won by the Allies, brought the truth home. America is emerging out of this holocaust as the world's greatest power.

And for the first time in history, the world's greatest power is the nation whose people are least prepared, least experienced, least anxious for world leadership. There is a chance that we may let it go by default.

Washington has assayed pretty well by this time the fruits of the Moscow conference, the Cairo conference with Chiang Kai-shek attending; the Teheran meeting; the meeting with Turkey's president.

Russia's New Role

The achievement, first and foremost, unless we read all the signs a-wrong, is that Russia emerges in a new role. As Secretary Hull firmly believes, the fate of the world depends now on Russia and the United States.

Until the Moscow conference with the Teheran meeting to put its seal upon it, Russia was still an international enigma. She was fighting the same enemy that we were in Europe. But she was in no sense an ally.

Today she is still fighting the same enemy in Europe but is allied with us.

Those are the main fruits of the Moscow and Teheran conferences.

We are not a nation of diplomats. England has the wisdom of the ages inherited from an intimacy with the chancelleries of Europe since the days of Metternich. Today she has, at the head of her government, one of the greatest leaders the empire has produced. But not even English guile or graciousness, her wile or her wisdom accomplished what one lean and aged mountaineer achieved in the Kremlin.

When Cordell Hull went to Moscow, he went as a knight on a crusade, not for personal glory, not for gain, but because he felt that was the duty the Lord had laid upon him. He told himself before he went, despite the timorous restraint of physicians in whose care he had been, despite the concern of the wife he loves so well, that he would go on this mission if it took him by land or sea or air to the ends of the earth.

And when he arose at that first meeting and addressed the representatives of the three powers, he said frankly that what he was about to propose was in the interest of his own country. He hoped he could show that it would be in the interest of all.

Mr. Hull's Terms

And he said that what he would say would be frank and forthright and what he expected would be said to him would, likewise, be frank and forthright, truths minted in the same coin. And Mr. Hull was met squarely on the terms he laid down.

Jan Christian Smuts, now mellowed perhaps with a flavor of British diplomatic acumen, is fundamentally a person who sees beyond his own borders (he envisioned an association of nations before the League was proposed in the last war). After the last of the conferences, he declared that no such gatherings for the last hundred years had been as important as these.

I do not pretend to say that Secretary Hull was solely responsible for the success of these meetings; in fact, only time will tell how lasting their success will be, but it is the firm conviction of even the skeptical in Washington that it was the oneness of purpose, the sincerity, the unwavering determination of this hardy son of Tennessee that broke down the barriers of suspicion and distrust and found a common way for Russia to march solidly shoulder-to-shoulder with Britain and America in this war and to give promise that the three would face the peace afterward with the nearest thing to international altruism that this weary world can expect.

Moscow paved the way. Teheran sealed the covenants. It killed once and for all the controversy over the "second front" and struck the cadence that brought the Allies marching in step toward victory. How was this accomplished? By convincing Russia that it was not the plot of the capitalistic nations to let her bleed white on the battlefields so that she could be throttled in the postwar world.

About Chiang Kai-shek

We cannot omit from any discussion of these meetings what America achieved when she brought Chiang Kai-shek into the picture. The Chinese believe in America. They think we have decent ideals. But they assayed us as a still more or less kindly, indifferent people who, without much thought, would dance to the British tune. And Britain they distrusted.

They know now that America had the breadth of view and the acumen—to use that word again in its best sense—to bring China into the higher councils of the Allies. It was Hull who insisted that China become a co-signatory of the four-nation agreement at Moscow. It was America, Hull, Roosevelt—whomever you wish to credit for the act—who brought Chiang into the Cairo conference.

Strangely enough, America, nearer to Europe by the racial ties of a great part of its citizenry, is even closer to Europe's culture than the residents of the tight little British Isles themselves. Yet America's ignorance of Europe's real needs and thoughts is vast compared to that of England's statesmen. But America does seem to understand the Far East, can sympathize with it, and once America assumes the position to which her mighty power gives her the right, she can be the real interpreter between the East and the West. And lacking an interpreter, the East can only become a great potential enemy, protagonist of racial hatreds and racial wars.

America won her spurs at Moscow and Teheran, all we can ask is the support of the people so that she can wear them with the honor she loves, with the power she has.

U. S. Food Production—And World Needs

A detailed analysis of the world's food, fiber and tobacco needs and the part the United States must play in supplying them now and in the postwar period, has been made public by the National Planning association.

"If the United States were to adopt a minimum diet . . . and direct its present food-producing resources and agricultural labor accordingly," says the National Planning association (a non-governmental organization), "there would be enough food left over to feed another one hundred and thirty million people."

The report, "World Needs for U. S. Food and Fiber," was prepared by Dr. John D. Black of Harvard. Dr. Black is also a member of the Food and Nutrition board of the National Research council and on the Economic panel which is advising the United Nations Interim commission on food and agriculture.

Home production must and can be expanded to meet the needs of the United Nations, the armed forces, our own civilians, and to aid starving countries, the report contends. But even with greatly expanded production, it holds out little hope for an end to all rationing for a year or even two years after the war.

"A highly efficient, low cost, balanced human diet can be compounded from whole wheat, potatoes, peas and beans, whole milk, vegetable oils and carrots and tomatoes," says Dr. Black, "but at the same time, any reasonable statement of food needs must recognize not only the difficulty of changing food habits quickly but also the production factors which can diversify the diet considerably."

ON THE HOME FRONT
with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

NOT all the Pennsylvania Dutch were free-hand artists and you may not be either. The early Dutch artisans often used stencils for the main part of a motif and added a few flourishes to give a free-hand effect. You may do that too or you may stencil the scrolls and flourishes on chairs, chests and gay gifts until you get the feel of this type of decoration.

All of these quaint motifs are symbolic. That is the Dove of Peace that you see in the upper left corner of the sketch. The tulip symbolizes Lily Time or the golden age of peace and plenty promised the Dutch settlers in the New World. The pomegranate bud and fruit symbolized God's bounty. The blade, the flower, the seed and the heart of man were symbols used in decorating furniture, pottery, glass and tin. "Hex" signs were for luck and to keep away evil.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears has prepared stenciling designs for 12 authentic Pennsylvania Dutch motifs with color guide and directions. There is a large design for cupboard doors, designs for chairbacks, dresser drawers and chests. Also borders and small motifs for decorating bottles, boxes, jugs and tinware. These designs may be used many times for gifts and for bright touches in every room in the house. Ask for Pattern 262 and enclose 15 cents. Address:

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

By the end of this year almost 50% of the tires now on war workers' cars in Ohio are likely to be completely worn out under normal use, according to a survey which showed that war workers faced a crisis in their motor transportation. Failure to have tires recapped in time is one factor responsible for this situation.

Use of nylon cord instead of cotton or rayon has made possible the manufacture by B. F. Goodrich of an airplane tire that conserves materials, yet provides extra strength and light weight. Nylon cords in motor vehicle tires are well advanced in the experimental stage.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

Recently a traveler was journeying through the interior of Turkey and he came upon a little city having eight thousand inhabitants. To his astonishment he found out that all were totally blind except twenty-six. These were held under suspicion because of what they would say in regard to the things that they could see. Most of the eight thousand in the town were born blind and they accepted that condition as the normal way of life, and they scorned those who claimed that they could see men and trees. Those blind people were blind indeed. Do you wonder at people who were born in ignorance, and who were raised under the darkness of low living, when they ridicule the clear visioned Christian who can see the awfulness of sin When a true child of God cries out against the ravages of the whiskey traffic, he is cried down as a maniac by those who are spiritually blind. Having eyes, yet they cannot see.

A friend stopped to chat with me while I was watching for the planes at the City Hall. Along came another man and he stopped long enough to curse a dozen times or more at nothing and for no reason. As this bundle of profanity left us my friend said, "When a fellow curses like that man, he is so low down until he would have to carry a rabbit under each arm to get a hound dog to follow him." Deep down in my heart I said, "Amen." Along with the war has come another scurge of profanity. Women are taking up this vulgar habit. That same day at the City Hall a girl around twenty years of age, came to register for work among the men at the shipyard, and she was told that she would have to cut her hair like a man, dress like a man and listen to men curse. Her reply was: "Well, I do not mind that." I may have been old fashioned, but I minded it for her. God have mercy on mankind when they can drink, smoke, curse and wear men's clothing. That is no good sign for civilization, to say nothing about the future of motherhood.

A banker friend of mine went fishing. He came to a boat that was resting on the river bank, and he decided to appropriate it to his use. Taking a bucket he started to bailing out the water, while his wife waited. For several minutes he lifted water over the edge of the boat, and yet, there did not seem to be any less water in the boat. The watching wife remarked to him: "Hubby, there must be a leak in that boat. You are getting nowhere by bailing out the water." Then the banker made investigation and discovered that half of the bottom was out and that the water was coming in as fast as he could dip it out. Along comes the preacher and he locates a promising church member and he works with him with diligence, but for some reason the fellow gets no better. The bottom to his moral life is in decay, and while the preacher labors, the world keeps that man's heart full of sin to the brim. Christ Jesus is the only Carpenter who repairs the moral bottom to the boat of life.

The young man was eighteen and was a perfect picture of strength and manhood. He was the football star on the high school team and colleges were making bids for him after graduation. Those who looked upon him almost envied him his future. He was bound to succeed. On the side line was a crippled lad who looked on, but not with the despondent attitude. His legs were wabbly and his strength limited, but deep down in his heart he heard a voice calling him to success also. He was not naturally endowed as was the athlete, but he had something in his soul that the athlete did not have. Years rolled by and the promising young man had gone down under success and temptation but this crippled lad had climbed the ladder of usefulness an fame and now he is the honor student of that high school. This boy was greater than his weakness. He was master of himself. It is not how promising you are that counts. It is how much bigger you are than your weaknesses and how well you can master yourself.
